Shall Justice Be Done?

The Infamous Character of the Gerrymander Set Out.

A Measure That No British Statesman Dare Propose.

The Unconstitutional Bill Should Have the Attention of the Governor-General.

How Its Promoter Has Fallen in Public Estimation.

[From the Toronto Mail.] We toast ourselves the heirs and mis-sionaries of British institutions. But what is the use of the institutions without the men? That which has made British institutions the pride of their creators and the tutions the pride of their creators and the model of the world is the sturdy British loyalty to public right. This has been the animating spirit, without which the forms of the constitution, however admirable, would have been forms and nothing more. Not only will the British stand up for public right collectively; they will stand up for it is buildfully against any present odds. it individually against any present odds. This has been the salvation of their liberties This has been the salvation of their inferties at critical periods of their history. We Canadians may fairly regard ourselves as superior on the average to the people of the mother country in political intelligence. But in sturdy fidelity to public right it is to be teared we are not their equals. In England a gerrymandering Act would be innessible. It the statesmen in power were ossible. If the statesmen in power were pable of conceiving such an outrage the other party would resist it to the death, and would at once be backed by a strong demonstration of feeling throughouthe country. No Ministry, however larged obedient its majority in Parliamen could hope to carry such a measure. In-dignation meetings would everywhere be held, and every bye-election would go against the Government. When the last British Franchise Act was carried, high oo much reason to fear that the result this or any other act of tyranny which the this or any other act of tyranny which the purty in power and in command of the public purse and patronage may choose to commit will be formal condemnation followed by tame submission. If this is the spirit of our people, paper liberties are of ittle worth. Nothing, said the poet of old, avails the tower without the garrison or the ship without the crew.

UNSCRUPULOUS AND SHAMEFUL.

of limitations; he shuts the door of public justice on the most frivolous pretenses against the community in the case of Ministers of State accused of malversation; he shields on miserably technical grounds the judge whom he must know to have been guilty of partiality in an election trial; and now he takes part in the conception guitty of partiality in an election trial; and now he takes part in the concoction of a gerrymander and pushes it forward by the help of a servile majority with an effontery which seems to show that he has laid aside not only principle but shame. He is just no engaged in the enactment of a criminal code which is to embrace, rightly enough, and to subject to penal treatment, an oflense so subject to penal treatment, an oflense so subject to penal treatment, an offense so subtle as that of the man who with a fraudulent obthat of the man who with a fraudulent ob-ject propagates false news. Has it ever struck him that no man can be more worthy to stand in the dock than he who, being in a place of high public trust, deliberately conspires for a party purpose against the integrity of the commonwealth, and uses the power which the country has put into his hands to rob his fellow-citizens of their electoral right? electoral right?

AN IMPARTIAL TRIBUNAL IMPERATIVE. It is morally impossible that anyone should be so blinded by faction as not to see that this is a question which neither of see that this is a question which neither of the two political parties can decide for itself, and which ought to be submitted to an impartial authority, such as it would be perfectly easy to appoint. The case is so clear that we are fully justified in imputing sinister motives to anyone who refuses such arbitration. The Mail would take precisely the same line if the projected general cisely the same line if the projected gerry-mander were on the other side. This is one of the occasions on which the independent of the occasions on which the independent press has a special duty to perform, and we trust that wherever an independent element in the Canadian press exists its voice will be loudly raised in defense of the right. If one party is allowed to do this wrong the other party will do the same in its turn; the practice will be established and respect for representative institutions.

it is the business of the Governor-General to watch the operation of the British North America Act, and see that our people really enjoy what it is intended to give them, or he has hardly any business at all in which any one has much interest who does not attend the dinners and balls at Government House. Nor is it the letter of the act alone that should be deemed his duty to guard, but its spirit. The letter of the act may not be broken, deemed his duty to guard, but its spirit.

The letter of the act may not be broken, but its spirit is violated and the main intentions of the Imperial Parliament in Donald, Rowand, Yeo, McMillan, Allan, Donald, Rowand, Yeo, McMillan, Bain, tentions of the Imperial Parliament in passing it are subverted by a gerrymandering bill. His Excellency is, of course, precluded from interfering with the course of any legislation which is before Parliament; but there is nothing that we know of to preclude him from intimating to his Ministers that no act swindling a portion of her Majesty's Canadian subjects out of their chartered rights can receive the assent of the Crown. can receive the assent of the Crown. To such an intimation his Ministers would unquestionably give ear. It is of httle use, however, to suggest anything in this quarter, since every pretense of control has virtually been abandoned; the prerogative of dissolua mere weapon in the fray; and in a still more recent case no notice was taken of the open violation of the constitution by the Governor-General's delegate. A certain degree of personal control apart from any constitutional authority might be exercised over the shameful excesses of faction by ment House.

The Member for Judge Elliot Makes a Dubious Explanation

Regarding the Suppression of the Irish Dual Language Bill.

[Special to the ADVERTISER.]
OTTAWA, May 11.—There was a lengthy debate this afternoon in the House on the suppression by the Minister of Agriculture of the reports of the British farmer delegates who came to Canada hast year. The reports contained some strong language. who came to Canada iast year. The re-ports contained some strong language against the trade policy of the Government, and accordingly they have never seen the light of day. The Minister of Agriculture the other day said the reports had been sent him by the High Commissioner last fall, and he had returned them unread. And he declared he did not know what the contents of the reports were.

contents of the reports were.

The members of the Opposition ridiculed this explanation. Mr. Lister called it "childlike and bland" and asked Mr. Carling if he expected anybody to believe that he did not know the character of the reports, and it he did not take interest enough in the subject to read them, how did he explain such indifference to his department. The data are the subject to read them. partment? The debate was on a motion for a copy of the reports.

for a copy of the reports.

Sir John Thompson moved the adjournment of the debate, ostensibly that he might examine the reports before the House made an order for their production, promising at the same time that an opportunity would this session be given to discuss it. On this understanding the adjournment of the debate was accepted by the Opposition.

This evening it was expected would be occupied by the debate on Mr. McCarthy.

LORD STANLEY'S CLEAR DUTY.

We are always being reminded that Canada in regard to constitutional questions is in a peculiar position and one of considerable disadvantage. She was not the maker and she is not the keeper of her own constitution. The maker of her constitution is the Imperial Parliament, and the Imperial Parliament, and the Imperial Parliament, absorbed in the members' told the sergeant-at-arms. and the Imperial Parliament, absorbed in British concerns, can practically keep the Canadian constitution and assure to the people of Canada the privileges and liberties assigned to them under it only through the Governor-General.
