Conviction of a Forger.—A man named McNab, who has professed to be a missionary of the Free Kirk, was convicted at the Home District Assizes, of uttering a false endorsement to defraud the Bank of Upper Canada. He went to Lewiston and committed the forgery, and hoped to protect himself by the plea, that if there was a crime it was committed beyond the jurisdiction of the court. He sent the bill to Toronto by the clerk of a steamboat, and was convicted on the ground that the forged indorsation was uttered in Toronto by means of an innocent agent.

SUBMIT YOURSELVES ONE TO ANOTHER.

It is the duty of impenitent men to cease from their rebellion, and immediately to submit themselves to God; and equally the duty of those who have thus yielded themselves to God, who have taken upon them the vows of the gospel, and have entered into Church-relationship with God's people, to submit themselves one to another. This is divine arrangement. And if it is a matter beyond question or controversy that the sinner who refuses a hearty acquiescence in it on the one hand must loose his soul, What shall we say of the ultimate doom of the professor who on the other hand disregards or tramples on the solemn injunction addressed to him? A profession of Christianity does not sanctify rebellion, nor cast a mantle of security on the souls of those whose obedience to God is graduated by the authoritative movements of their own prejudices and passions. Hence we tremble for sinners in Zion. The spontaneous language of the regenerated soul, is "Lord, what wilt thou have me to do?" and when the will of God is perceived, it is always with such imperative. Yet many solemn injunctions of the Bible seem, at least, to escape the notice of Christians, and, in consequence of such oversight, they and the churches suffer loss. And is not the duty of brethren submitting themselves one to another, amongst the things that are overlooked. We are not called upon to submit to the arbitrary decisions of a Diocesan bishop, nor to come under the domination of a Presbytery or Conference, but inspiration says to us, "Submit yourselves one to another." Have we, as Baptists, seriously pondered all that is implied in that phrase?

A Church of Christ is a voluntary association of believers, walking together in the faith and order of the gospel. No man is, at least in this land, compelled to enter a church and avow sentiments which he does not believe, or to submit to practices in which he discovers no resemblance to the teachings of truth. He may be an errorist of the deepest dye—a Deist or an Atheist even—and still suffer no civil inconvenience. In this freedom of opinion guaranteed to every man on religious matters, every lover of religious liberty will rejoice, for Christianity, instead of loosing by such an arrangement, gains everything. But, although it would be robbing men of their rights, to trammel their judgments or their consciences, without the pale of the church; and although it would be both oppressive and absurd to seek to coerce them in matters of faith and practice within its pale, it does not follow that any church-member may embrace and avow any sentiment that strikes his fancy, however heterodox it may be, or antagonistic to the authentic faith of the body. Any church who would tolerate this, would lay violent hands on its own existence. Discord dire would mark its short career, and its unholy strifes would only terminate in a lasting disgrace. But difference of opinion may exist in a church when there is no difference of faith; and such differences may, and sometimes do, result in trying difficulties and most unlovely conduct, which distract the body, and cripple, if they do not annihilate, its power to carry out the very ends of its existence. Now, how simple, yet effective, is God's remedy for this: "Submit yourselves one to another in the fear of God."—And he who has no heart to submit to his brethren, lacks a necessary qualification of church-membership. He cannot have the fear of God before his eyes; he cannot have love to Christ and to perishing men as a ruling passion in his soul; and the blessing of the peacemaker cannot be his. The churches of this, like every other new country, are composed of individuals from various quarters of the globe; and every member comes with strong prepossessions in favour of those modes of transacting business which guided his movements in former days. He immediately institutes comparisons between the forms and opinions of the past and the present, and nearly every discrepancy which he discovers in his survey, is charged over to the account of shortsightedness or a lack of scriptural knowledge on the part of his new associates. Now if such members can be made to believe that much sterling sense and much profound love to Christ, and much holy fixedness of purpose to carry out the principles of the gospel and the ordained order of Christ's house exist amongst his brethren, he will not find it an oppressive task to yield to the voice of God, and submit himself to God's people. If he cannot be persuaded of all this, and as a consequence will not obey in this vital particular the revealed will of God, he must be left in his own self-sufficiency to enjoy his opinions, without the pale of the church of God.—Christ has made provision for the harmony of his house, and churches are recreant to the high trust committed to them if they do not employ faithfully, and in the spirit which he inculcated, the means of purity and of peace which he has instituted. The employment of such means does violence to no man's rights in the house of God, but on the contrary, is the only preservative of the rights of all. If a brother is aggrieved, he has his remedy; if he differs in opinion with his brethren, he has a right to remonstrate, and in a spirit of love to defend his views, but as soon as the church as a body has settled the question, he has only to submit himself to his brethren in the fear of God. And if the fear of God is in his heart, he will submit himself. Should a church, in the judgment of an individual, become unsound in faith or practice, after kind remonstrance, it would be his duty to withdraw from them, otherwise it would be his duty to submit to the brethren, if he recognised them as such. O! if there existed amongst professors less wilfulness, and more of that spirit which leads men to think not more highly of themselves than they ought to think, the duty of mutual submission would be a pleasing task to the soul. Remember, reader, that mutual submission on the part of church-members is commanded of God. If you cannot submit yourself, you are either cherishing a spirit in which you cannot enter heaven, or else you are living in a church which you ought to abandon. An unwillingness to submit to our brethren is usually produced by a wrong state of mind, and ought to be rectified at once. For, destroy mutual submission and you break in upon Zion's harmony!—destroy the church's harmony, and you destroy her moral influence for good!—destroy such influence, and you destroy souls.

Baptism in Toronto.—The ordinance of Christian baptism was administered in the baptistery of the Baptist Chapel in Bond street, on the evening of last Sabbath. Three individuals, one male and two females submitted to the rite. It was a season of deep interest to the church, and we hope impressions were made by witnessing the solemn scene, which will be lasting as eternity. The chapel is brilliantly illuminated by gas, so that the dense crowd assembled could see the whole transaction. And that assembly, as the triune name was spoken over the candidates respectively, and as they with happy souls respectively were buried with Christ, that assembly were sitting as if they had been seated in the house of death.

We are requested to insert the following query:—

"Is there any scriptural warrant for calling of councils to organise churches—to ordain elders—or to settle the differences that may arise amongst members of churches?"

An Inquest was held on the 27th ultimo, in the Township of Etobicoke before George Duggan, Esq., Coroner, and a Jury, on view of the body of a coloured man, named William Clark, who was found drowned in the Mimico Creek. From the evidence adduced at the Inquest, it appeared that the deceased had been to the city, with a load of wood, and that on his return home, about 7 o'clock, halted at widow McLean's Tavern, at the mouth of the hamber, where he met with three others, and after drinking together, they accompanied him in his waggon to Dundas street, and he returned again to the Tavern, about 10 o'clock same night, where he stopped for a few minutes and left again for home, his residence being about two miles further on the road.—Next morning the rack of his waggon was seen floating in the Mimico Creek, when search was made, and the horses were found drowned; and after some further search, the body of the deceased was found, a little above the bridge, in about 8 feet water. By the track of the waggon on the road, it appears that on going towards the Mimico Bridge, the horses turned down to the lake shore, and rounded the bridge, went into the creek. The deceased left a wife and three children. Verdict,—found drowned.

Light House at Port Dover destroyed by Fire.—We learn that on the evening of Sunday the 5th instant, the Light-house at Port Dover was destroyed by fire—by what means we are as yet uninformed. "The Light-house keeper," says the Buffalo paper, "as the best substitute in his power; has hoisted two globe lamps on a pole, which will be all the light that will be seen during the present season."

Early Winter.—Yesterday morning for the first time this season, the ground was covered with snow to the depth of several inches, and winter vehicles were in general use, both here and in all the places from Quebec to Kingston from which we have heard by telegraph. It continued to snow throughout the greater part of the day. Some ice was formed last night on the St. Charles; there is a sharp frost this morning; and as the ground was considerably frozen before the snow fell, it is not unlikely to remain.—Quebec Gazette, Nov. 10.

Navigation Laws.—The Montreal Herald of yesterday announces that a requisition for a public meeting to express the feelings of the community against the continuance of these laws, is in course of signature, and has already been signed by the President and the members of the council of the Montreal Board of Trade.

The Cunard Steamers.—The new steamship Canada is advertising to leave Liverpool for New York on the 25th of November. In the winter arrangement of the line we perceive the old vessels— the Caledonia, Acadia, Britannia and Hibernia—are withdrawn. In December the semi-monthly arrangement commences with the departure of the Niagara for Boston on th 3rd of December; after which day a vessel will sail from Liverpool every second Saturday alternately for New York and Boston.

At a public meeting held in Niagara on Tuesday, at which Walter Dickson, Esquire, presided, it was unanimously resolved to establish a Mechanics' Institute in that Town, and Mr. Dickson, Mr. Boomer, Mr. Wagstaff, and others, were appointed a committee to frame rules for the government of the Society.

Hamilton Fire Department.—We publish to-day the list of subscriptions to be devoted to the raising a new Fire Department, which amounts to nearly £500. The prompt manner in which the citizens have met the demand upon them, has justified the Committee in deputing one of their number to proceed to New York to purchase the necessary apparatus.—Gazette.

The Brantford Canal.—A Public Dinner was to be given the President and Directors of this important work, yesterday, in commemoration of its completion.

Gold in Canada—Prof. B. Silliman, Jr. has published a brief account of his examinations of masses of gold found in the Valley of the Chandiere, Canada. The lumps are worn smooth, as is usual in alluvial gold, but fragments of quartzose gangue could still be detected in some of them. They were firmly imbedded it what appeared to be slate, but which is probably a concrete of detritus, cemented by oxyd of iron. Chromic iron, titaniferous iron, serpentine, spinel, rutile, and talcose rocks remind us very strongly of the mineralogical characters of the Russian gold regions, and their occurrence with the gold in Canada certainly affords favorable grounds for the hope that this may become a rich auriferous region. As yet no excavations have been made on any scale of magnitude sufficient to warrant an opinion of the actual wealth of the deposit. A few tons of gravel have, however, been washed in a rude way with the Berks rocker, which have yielded about $4 of gold to the ton of gravel.

Oswego Railroad.—The trains upon this road have commenced their regular trips, which every prospect of a fair business. At Syracuse, they connect with the regular trains for Albany, and Oswego with the steamboats on the Lake. The fare to Buffalo by this route is $1 50c less: and to Rochester $1 less, than by the present Railroad from Syracuse to Buffalo.—Journal of Commerce.

Port Stanley.—We have the melancholy duty of informing you of a heart-rending accident which occurred here on the afternoon of Wednesday last, 15th inst. Two open boats were returning from the steamer Scotland with the mechanics and labourers who had been assisting in getting her off. When they got inside, or rather, off the end of the piers, where a heavy ground-swell was running, the boats were capsized whereby four men were drowned; three dockmen and the other a sailor of the Scotland. The names of the three are Richard Barrett, D. Callaghan and Charles Ashmore, all leaving wives and families to mourn their untimely fate. The other unfortunate man was George Mountjoy, an Englishman, whom Captain Taylor had shipped at Montreal, and was a stranger in this part of the country.—Mr. Walter Pass made a noble effort to rescue the drowning men by jumping off the end of the pier with a rope in his hands, but the sea was running too high, and it was with difficulty he saved himself.

Surely the eyes of the present government will be opened to the wretched state of our harbour. All our Fall accident, are entirely owing to the bad state of the harbour—the loss of the schoner Jessie, the loss of the steamer Scotland's cargo, and now to wind up the Fall business the melancholy loss of these four men.

We have no doubt your Towns-people will contribute their mite towards the widow and the fatherless.

☞ The propeller Earl Cathcart, arrived at Port Stanley with a large cargo of merchandise on the 11th, from Kingston. Captain Duncan has had a good many difficulties to contend with this season on his new route direct to Montreal. Freights generally throughout the season being scarce, vessels rather losing than making money; but it is gratifying to learn this noble propeller has done well and will leave a handsome dividend to her owners.

IMPORTANT NOTICE.

The subscribers having established the
Blacksmithing Business

HORSE-SHOEING,
to which particular attention will be paid. Having secured the services of a scientific workman, who thoroughly understands the above branches of his trade, we feel confident in giving full satisfaction to all who may favour us with their patronage. For the present, no credit will be given for horse-shoeing and small jobs.

Also, the farmers of the surrounding country are hereby informed that we are still vigorously engaged in the manufacturing

FANNING MILLS.

The former notices and representations of our mills are true—to which we still adhere. We have taken extra pains to bring our mills to a perfect state, so as to make such an one as every farmer who is worthy of his occupation—and is anxious to produce the best samples of grain, and to keep his farm free from foul grain should have, and would be proud to possess. Let others do as they will, we give no false representations; neither do we say, as some of our neighbours have said, "That we will sell for several dollars less than what other shops are selling; but we do say, our Mills are, and shall be, twice as many dollars better as they will sell cheaper than the common prices. The farmers are cautioned against listening to the representations of those who oppose us, or to their own fears.

Be not hasty in buying—try our article, then decide. Every good farmer that had previously purchased in the neighbourhood where we sold last year, regretted his purchase when he ascertained the superiority of our article. It was the superiority of our mills that occasioned our loss by fire last August. Still we are on hand again, and have commenced selling for the season. We appeal to the good sense, interest and profit of the farmers, not to their prejudices. Now, what do you say, will you have a perfect article? If you will, we have just the one for you; but if you want a poor, a common Mill, do not come to us to purchase.
