THE SLANDER AND THE STEAL.

The Stolen Letter—Hon. John Young offers to Sell his Seat in the House for the Inpectorship—The Royal Commission—What Huntington's Witnesses Prove.

[FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.]

OTTAWA, Sept. 9.

The subject of the taking from the Post Office, by the honorable (?) John Young of Sir John A. Macdonald's letter, and its publication on the advice of his honorable accomplices in the theft, have pushed the "Pacific Scandal" a little to one side, and stepped into the place which it occupied in the public mind. In all the history of Canadian politics, including the stormy days of the rebellion, there is not upon record any act of a similar kind, perpetrated by one politician upon another. This plot, culminating in the abstraction and publication, after deliberate consultation, of confidential correspondence, stands alone in our history, for the infamy of its conception, and the felonious meanness of its accomplishment. As you are aware, the press generally, while differing in their opinion as to the propriety of writing such a letter, condemns with just indignation, the dishonorable means by which its contents were brought before the public eye. A few papers only in the blindness of party hatred, or lack of the commonest instincts of morality, justify the felony. Among those advocates of offences against the law of the land, and the unwritten law which lives in every honest man's heart, is that embodiment of all the virtues, that paragon of purity which claims to be "the only daily religious paper in the world."

The Globe, the great Globe, which day by day volleys and thunders its venomous anathemas against the Government for alleged corruption and political trickery, is silent, absolutely dumb, about this acknowledged felony on the part of its friends. The secret of its silence may be found in the statement of one of its contributors—

"WE CANNOT APPROVE, WE DARE NOT CONDEMN!"

The Grit papers, in writing upon the subject, condemn, in their usual choice language, Sir John's letter, and the influences he suggested, by which a Government supporter should be returned for Montreal West. Those means may or may not be justifiable; but they are used and will continue to be in party warfare till the dawn of the ever distant millenium smiles upon our world. Every party leader will take every legitimate means of strengthening his position, and when vacancies occur will endeavor to bring the best men to the front.

John A. never professes to be a political saint. He is rather reticent upon the subject, and boasts but seldom of "my political integrity." But there are men who do profess to have constant claims to the title of "honorable men." Their whole stock in trade has been up to this hour denunciations of corruption and intrigue; and the arguments they advance for the overthrow of the Government are not against their general policy, which has been crowned with remarkable success, but against their alleged corruption and political venality. Among the political puritans who thus denounced them were Mr. Holton and Mr. Dorion (the latter one of the judges who were to have tried the Government for their misdemeanors); and both of those angels stand before the people of Canada as accomplices in a disgraceful crime. But the honorable (?) John Young, who, on the floor of the House, expressed his belief in the guilt of the Government, before a word of evidence was given, rivals the corruption he denounced, and surpasses his saintly counsellors in political mendicancy and immorality.

First, he tries to hold office under the Government he denounced, and retain his seat in Parliament at the same time, in violation of our constitution.

Finding poor chance for succeeding, he writes to Sir John upon the subject.

Next he comes all the way to Ottawa and implored Sir John to allow him to retain the Inspectorship, offering in barter his SEAT IN THE HOUSE.

Sir John did not give him much satisfaction, beyond telling him that there was no ill feeling against him, and that he would receive fair play.

The honorable gentleman returns to Montreal, and in the vain hope of trapping the Premier, perpetrates the crime for which he will have to answer at the Bar of justice, and which effectually ends his political career.

And here is a specimen of the principles of the men who proclaim their fitness to shape the destinies of our young Dominion, and who have been striving to climb into power upon the ruins they hoped to make of a Government which has dealt out even handed justice to all the members of our Confederation. Let the people look and learn.

THE ROYAL COMMISSION.

resumed the investigation to-day. The proceedings were characterized by the usual dullness, which arises in a great measure from the examination of witnesses who don't know anything about the affair—and yet they are ALL HUNTINGTON'S WITNESSES.

There is also much delay in the writing out of evidence, only one short-hand writer being engaged where there ought to be three. The first witness examined to-day was

MR. DAKERS,

Secretary of the Montreal Telegraph Co., and manager of the Montreal office. He knew nothing whatever of the subject under enquiry, beyond the fact that there were in the office books the record of two telegrams, one the name and address of a despatch to Abbott, dated Aug. 24th, signed John A. Macdonald, and the other a telegram dated Aug. 26, to Sir John from Mr. Abbott. Nothing but the address, date, and signature of the despatches are kept in the books. The original telegrams are destroyed once a year, according to the rules of the Company. The present rules are to destroy them every six months.

Judge Coursal was next examined, and deposed that he knew nothing whatever about the matter under investigation. The following statement which he made will give you some idea of the amount of Huntington's knowledge of the matters contained in the charge. "Yesterday," said the witness, "I saw Mr. Huntington in "the street, (Montreal) and said to him, "I will be happy to give any information "to the Commission, if you will tell me "what questions you want answered, as "I don't know why I am summoned."

To which Mr. Huntington replied: "O your name was suggested and placed upon the witness list; but I did not know that you had any evidence to give!"

And yet such are the witnesses by whose testimony he was to prove the Government guilty of "high crimes and misdemeanors." He summoned people right and left, in the hope that somewhere or other, he might chance to light upon evidence that might help to substantiate his charges. It was a pure experiment, and worthy from whence it emanated.

Two other of Huntington's witnesses were sworn; but said they knew nothing of the case.

Senator Foster was called, but did not get into the city in time. He will be examined to-morrow. The Commission is likely to sit some time. H.
