The Princess Dagmar, of Denmark is to be married to the Grand Duke, the heir to the throne of Russia, on the 15th of Octo.

A FATAL DRINKING WAGER.—A foolish wager was made at a wineshop in Paris, which resulted in death. At a breakfast, at which the conversation turned on the quantity of drink which a person could take, a brickmaker, named Flaventine, made a bet that he could drink twelve glasses of wine while the clock of the Tuilleries was striking twelve. He drank three glasses before the clock had struck three times. At the next glass he stopped to breathe. At the seventh he began to drink more slowly, but, making an effort, he drank off the eighth glass. He then turned very pale, and breathed with difficulty. His friends wished to stop the wager, but he said he would go on, come what might, and swallowed the ninth glass, when he fell down senseless. A surgeon was sent for, but, in spite of all his efforts, the foolish man died in three hours.

The Largest Farm in the World.

I observe a note in your last issue of an 8000 acre farm, in Bureau county, Ill., and of Mr. J. S. Alexander's farm in Morgan county, Ill., both of which will pass for fair-sized Illinois farms. But the farm which is, no doubt, the largest cultivated farm in the world, and, I believe, the best is owned and cultivated by M. L. Sullevant, Esq., formerly from the vicinity of Columbus, Ohio, now of Champaign county, Ill. He owns and resides over 70,000 acres of the best land on this hemisphere, 23000 acres of which are under fence, and in actual improvement and cultivation; the balance is used for herding.

I will venture the opinion that there cannot be found five acres of unserviceable land in Mr. S's entire 70,000 acres. Their productiveness is unsurpassed. Almost all of Mr. S.'s farming is conducted by labor-saving machinery, so that it is estimated that, throughout, one man will perform the average labor of four or five, as conducted on small farms. He drives his posts by horse-power; breaks his ground by Comstock's "spaders;" mows, rakes, loads, unloads and stacks his hay by horse-power; cultivates his corn by improved machinery; ditches any low ground by machinery; sows and plants by machinery, so that all his laborers can ride and perform their tasks as easy as riding in a buggy.

I had the pleasure of being present when he harvested a thousand acres of his wheat, this was done with ——'s "reader's"—about 8 or 10 men and twenty horses cut and safely staked away about 200 acres a day, and performed the work better than I ever saw it by the old modes. To give all the improved modes of farming employed by this king of agriculture, would require more space than you would like to spare. Notwithstanding all this labor saving machinery, Mr. S. employs from one to two hundred laborers, some two hundred horses and mules, and a large herd of working oxen.—(Scientific American)

"Logic and Common Sense."

A certain circuit steward was very difficult to please, and had made considerable difficulty in the society, so that, at the Conference, the president said he did not want to send any brother to the station, but wished some brother would volunteer. A brother that lisped a little said he would go. His first appointment was on the week-day evening.—He preached; and, when through, the circuit steward and a few others got round him, and inquired what he had come for. He told them he had come to preach the gospel to them for two years; and if they wanted him to stay the third year, they would have to petition Conference for him to do so, or he would not stay.

They told him they did not want him; for such preaching as they had heard had neither logic nor common sense in it.

The following Sabbath it was his turn to preach three times in the circuit town; and a new minister generally called a crowd. At the time appointed, he gave out his hymn which was sung. He then prayed, and gave out the second hymn. He then announced his text: "The wicked shall be turned into hell, with all the nations that forget God."—He then announced, "there is both logic and common sense in that," and repeating again his text, closed the Bible, gave his third hymn, and closed the service with prayer.

In the afternoon a much larger congregation had gathered to hear the eccentric preacher; but he simply announced his text the same as the morning, making the same comment—that there was both logic and common sense in it—and dismissed the assembly.

In the evening, the congregation was still larger, and he announced the same text, but then preached a powerful sermon, and a revival followed that had been unprecedented in that region. Many were saved, and at the close of the his two years they were glad to petition Conference for him to continue the third year.—Guide to Holiness.

Line of R R to the Seaboard.

A correspondent of the Montreal Gazette points out that all that is necessary to give us a line of railway to the seaboard through British territory at all seasons of the year is the continuation of the St. Andrew's, N. B., railroad. This road is 60 miles in length, of the same gauge as the Grand Trunk of Canada and is in good running order. It connects the harbor of St. Andrews with Woodstock, the latter place being only 154 miles from the Grand Trunk terminus at Riviere du Loup. The country between those two last named points is an extremely flourishing one, rich in agricultural productions and presenting no engeneering difficulties. The harbor of St. Andrews is an excellent one easy of access, never freezing and with a depth of water sufficient to float anything. The line of battle ship Duncan has anchored there several times of late. The only draw back to the line is its contiguity to the American frontier, but inasmuch as the proposed Intercolonial railroad must take several years to complete and the Woodstock and Riviere du Loup line could be completed in a comparatively short space of time, the construction of the latter would be a great advantage.

☞ A newspaper editor inadvertently wrote about a woman who had not been buried with proper observance, the following sentence: "She was buried like a dog with her cloth on." Next week he saw his mistake, and corrected it thus: "She was buried with her clothes on like a dog." The third week, exasperated with the previous blunders, he had it thus: "Like a dog with her clothes on she was buried. He gave it up.

An interesting cricket match took place last Monday in Halifax, between the officers of the Army and Navy, which resulted in a naval victory. The band of the 4th Royals was on the ground.

A new and very fine line of steamers have been put on the direct route between Halifax and Boston. The newest steamer, the Oriental, is described as a magnificent vessel.

A cricket match was played at Fredericton on Monday between the Boston Cricket Club and eleven of the 22d regiment, which resulted in a victory for the latter.

☞ The celebrated needle-gun has again been tried at Chalons, and found wanting. About 150 of these weapons were put into the hands of the Gaurds, and the commision has reported that these rifles are not suitable for French troops.
