Kathleen Mavourneen.

Kathleen Mavourneen!—The song is still ringing
As fresh and as clear as the trill of the birds;
In world-weary hearts it is sobbing and singing
In pathos too sweet for the tenderest words.
O, have we forgotten the one who first breathed it—
O, have we forgotten his rapturous art—
Our meed to the master whose genius bequeathed it?
O, why art thou silent, thou voice of the heart!

Kathleen Mavourneen: Thy lover still lingers;
The long night is waning—the stars pale and few;
Thy sad serenader, with tremulous fingers,
Is bowed with tears as the lily with dew!
The old harpstrings quaver—the old voice is shaking—
In sighs and in sobs moans the yearning refrain—
The old vision dims, and the old heart is breaking—
Kathleen Mavourneen, inspire us again!

—James Whitcomb Riley.

The Typhoon.

IT BLOWS IN CHINA SEAS AND IS DREADED BY MARINERS.

"The worst storms," said the captain of a tramp steamship the other day, "are the typhoons of the Chinese seas. They cover a large area, are uncertain in their movements and follow each other quickly. The typhoon season is on just now. And I see that one reason the Japanese and Chinese war fleets are anxious to stay at home is because they are afraid of the big storms.

"The first signs of the storm are light cirrus clouds coming from the east, with hot, dry weather, light winds and a slight rise in the barometer. This fine weather lasts for several days.

"There are usually halos to be seen round the sun by day and the moon by night, while the phosphorescence of the sea becomes suddenly increased; the sunsets and sunrises become gloriously colored with crimson, gold and amber, and the twilight rays are beautiful beyond description.

"Then at a distance of about 500 miles from the center activity of the typhoon, heavy swells begin to heave the surface of the ocean. A heavy swell in the China sea is a certain indication of a distant typhoon.

"Then the cirrus clouds begin to be replaced gradually by heavy masses of cumulus, and where the blue sky is visible between it is seen to be streaked by faint dashes of pale cirrus clouds.

"Next the temperature begins to fall and the air becomes oppressive from increasing dampness. During the early hours of the morning a slight haze is noticed and the sky presents a vaporous appearance.

"At this stage of a typhoon's growth the animal world, including human beings, is seen to be strangely affected. Numerous writers have very graphically described the ominous terror of some animals and the nervous excitement of others, while the overpowering sense in the human mind of foreboding, presentiment and coming danger is in many cases little short of absolute terror.

"The weather is depressing and many people find it impossible to sleep. All sorts of vermin, including snakes, spiders, beetles frogs and typhoon flies, become unusually active. The larger animals, such as horses, cattle and dogs, show all the signs of nervous terror that may be noticed in a very heavy thunderstorm in western lands.

"There is no thunder with a typhoon, though the sound of the wind may be often mistaken for it. The air becomes very dry, and the wind blows in sudden, short and terrific squalls, lasting perhaps 6 to 10 minutes. The sky is black and threatening, and has a peculiar ominous appearance.

"Among the rigging of a ship caught in a typhoon the sea birds as well as butterflies, birds and insects from the land may be seen. The surface of the sea presents the appearance of boiling water, due to the seething foam and the crests of the huge waves lashed into fury by the force of the wind."—New York Sun.

Chauncey Depew's Advice.

Solomon evidently knew something about "hand shakers." Dr. Depew has come to some conclusion also, and here they are:

"Never indorse accommodation notes. If you wish to help your friend, make up your mind how much you can afford to lose, and lend him that. He will consider seriously the repayment of this money, while your name on his paper will not receive a second thought. If his venture is a failure and your money is gone, you will not be greatly disappointed, and your compensation will be an approving conscience and the satisfaction of having done the best you could for one whose appreciation of your effort you value. But your indorsement he regards as a mere formality. He believes in himself and has great contempt for your fears. At each renewal of the note he will want the amount increased or an additional note, on the plea of increasing business and opportunities. When you have become frightened at the sum for which he has made you responsible, and find that you must stop or be ruined, he will say that unless you aid him further he will be forced into bankruptcy and you will be the cause. When he fails, as he inevitably will, you find that the money, raised on your notes has paid enemies and strangers who insisted on his dealing with them on business principles, and that you are his largest and perhaps sole credit. You are crippled financially for a time, and perhaps for life, by meeting the maturing obligations which you have indorsed, and your former friend, now your bitter foe, is loudly proclaiming in his own justification that you are the author of his ruin. The result of your excursion in careless lending of your name will be that you have lost both friend and fortune, and have discovered, perhaps too late, that you are a fool. I have had in greater or less degree several such experiences."

It is said on good authority that Dr. Depew lost $40,000 last year by indorsing notes. He'll never do it again, he says.—New York Sun.

A Good Appetite.

Always accompanies good health, and an absence of appetite is an indication of something wrong. The universal testimony given by those who have used Hood's Sarsaparilla, as to its merits in restoring the appetite, and as a purifier of the blood, constitues the strongest recommendation that can be urged for any medicine.

Hood's Pills cure all liver ills, biliousness, jaundice, indigestion, sick headache. 25c.

—A man in Pocatello, Idaho, recently sent to Salt Lake for some furniture. His local dealer, hearing of this, called him, and said: "I had those same goods. Why didn't you buy from me?" "What, did you have them?" was the surprised rejoinder. I never thought so; but I saw an ad of the things I wanted in Salt Lake papers and sent for them." The moral is apparent.

—A drowsy, irritable feeling indicates sluggish liver. Hawker's liver pills regulate the liver and remove all unpleasant symptoms.

—What is war? I believe half the people who talk about war have not the slightest idea of what it is. In a short sentence it may be summed up to be the combination and concentration of all the horrors, atrocities, crimes and sufferings of which human nature on this globe is capable.

—MINARD'S FAMILY PILLS are purely vegetable.

Origin of the King's Daughters.

I am so often asked to tell the first thought I had of the Sisterhood that resulted in the Order of the King's Daughters, writes Mrs. Bottome, the President of the Order, in the September Ladies' Home Journal. I was crossing the Atlantic Ocean. I had met on deck some young fellows that had been tramping through Switzerland, and learned they were from some theological seminary. One morning I was startled at hearing of the death of one of these young men. He had been ill only a few days, and I learned that through his sickness, while delirious, he had constantly called for his mother. As I paced the deck in the days that followed, and looked up at the boat that swung day after day with his body in it, if I had only been in a Sisterhood wearing a badge that would have denoted service to humanity, they might have asked me if I would not like to see the young man who called for his mother, for I learned that no woman had seen the youth during his illness, and I pictured to myself how glad the mother would have been if I could have written to her and told her I had seen her boy. A that hour I wished for a Sisterhood that should not be known by any distinct dress but by some kind of a badge. I did not speak of this thought to any one.

A few months passed and Dr. Edward Everett Hale called to see me on business. As he was passing out he said, "Mrs. Bottome, I wonder you do not found a Sisterhood." And the word Sisterhood took my thoughts back to the steamer. Not many days after I invited four friends of mine who had been associated with me, and they came to my home, and we decided each to invite some friend, a consecrated woman, and to meet the week following and there would then be ten of us, and felt sure Dr. Hale would lend us his idea of "ten times one is ten." When later I wrote to him about it he answered, "You are welcome, Mrs. Bottome, to any idea of mine that you can use."

The lovely woman, Mrs. Theodore Irving, who suggested the name for the new Sisterhood of service, "The King's Daughters," has passed into the beautiful beyond.

I was made president of that first ten, not because I was better fitted to be president than some of the others present, but simply because the forming of such a ten was my suggestion, and later, as you know, the word "tens" was dropped and the word "Circles" substituted. In all the Circles there is a president, a secretary and a treasurer.

Bill Nye Says, On Docking.

In the "New York World": The tenderest portion of a horse's body is that quarter easily defended by a long tail, but entirely out of reach of a docked horse. I cannot bear to look at a crazed animal beating the air wildly with his pathetic stump, while the flies are stinging him.

I cannot be patient with those who follow this wicked custom in order that they may be considered fashionable. The man who does this, knowing the facts regarding it, is the man who pulls flies to pieces when a boy, and if his wife really indorses it her family ought to have the coffee analyzed every morning.

And how can a docked horse be regarded as beautiful?

How would George Washington look in marble riding a mutilated horse?

Does any great sculptor ever put a hero on a bobtailed steed?"

—R. S Crowe, Esq., Pleasant Street, Truro, N. S., writes: "It is with pleasure I testify to the great merit of K. D. C. which is undoubtedly worthy of the name, "The King of Cures." I have been troubled for over a year with acidity and flatulency and heartburn, and now after using but three packages of K. D. C., I am happy to state that I am completely free from these troubles. A cured man."

How to Treat a Frozen Part.

Rub with snow and the bare hand alternately, gradually increasing the friction until the sensation returns. The person frozen should by no means be taken into a warm room until the sensation is restored. It is nearly always best to begin in a tolerably cold room and let the air grow warmer very gradually. In short the frozen part should be thawed by a gradual extension of the patient's own circulation and never by outside heat, as in the latter there is danger of mortification.

—If too rapid eating causes dyspepsia, and it in its turn produces nervous exhaustion, debility, weakness, anaemia, etc., the first step in effecting a cure is to eat slowly. The second and most important is to take a course of Hawker's nerve and stomach tonic, which aids the process of digestion, invigorates the stomach, renews the vitality of the blood, relieves brain fatigue and makes weak nerves strong.

—Well-dressed windows and a large sign will draw the attention to goods from passers-by. They, however, have little time to stop. The determination of what shall be bought is generally made at home, and it is this the dealer must reach. He can do so only by using a liberal amount of printers ink.

Has the Highest Award in the World!

Is the unqualified approval of every customer. Our fence has won at every Fair or Exposition where entered. But what does a practical farmer care for that? The lighting qualities of a soldier are proven on the field of battle, not on dress parade.

Don't fail to keep it before the people that ours is the only perfectly self-regulating fence offered. Don't loose sight of the great saving in posts, as with some other fences the posts alone costs as much as our fence complete.

I believe we have the best fence for the money on earth. I base my belief on the fact that one string of fence sells lots more. Page fence has proved itself by far the best for farmers' use, and we know from the orders already received that our business will boom with that of the farmers.

A variety of fences suitable for all purposes: cemeteries, school grounds, hen yards, barn yards and hog yards, orchards, gardens.

Our Lawn Fence is just right.

Saved Her Life.

Mrs. C. J. WOOLBRIDGE, of Wortham, Texas, saved the life of her child by the use of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral.

"One of my children had Croup. The case was attended by our physician, and was supposed to be well under control. One night I was startled by the child's hard breathing, and on going to it found it struggling. It had nearly ceased to breathe. Realizing that the child's alarming condition had become possible in spite of the medicines given, I reasoned that such remedies would be of no avail. Having part of a bottle of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral in the house, I gave the child three doses, at short intervals, and anxiously waited results. From the moment the Pectoral was given, the child's breathing grew easier, and, in a short time, she was sleeping quietly and breathing naturally. The child is alive and well to-day, and I do not hesitate to say that Ayer's Cherry Pectoral saved her life."

HEART FAILURE, FAINTNESS, ACUTE DYSPEPSIA, with Complete Nervous Prostration,

Cured by Using

HAWKER'S NERVE & STOMACH TONIC.

A LADY'S EXPERIENCE.

Mr. Wm. Thompson of Musquash, N. B., says: "For 2 years past my wife has suffered with Acute Dyspepsia accompanied with complete nervous prostration and a smothering sensation about the heart which frequently produced an attack of faintness. She became weak and nervous, lost all energy, and had a constant feeling of dread. She suffered with intense pain in the stomach after eating, which was usually followed by the smothering sensation about the heart and fainting spells. She tried a great many remedies and was treated by the doctors for some time, but obtained no relief. She became so discouraged that she gave up all hope of ever getting better, when our pastor suggested that she try HAWKER'S NERVE AND STOMACH TONIC and LIVER PILLS, which had produced remarkable cures in several cases he knew of. We did so and she obtained immediate relief from the distress after taking the second dose, and has continued to improve ever since until today she is as well as ever, and can enjoy her food without fear of suffering. I cannot speak too highly of these valuable medicines which have restored my wife to health and strength and saved much suffering and expense."

Rev. Henry M. Spike, Rector of Musquash, N. B., says: "I am personally acquainted with Mrs. Tompson's case, and am greatly pleased that the medicine which I recommended to her produced such remarkable results."

Care in Diphtheria.

As diphtheria is so very serious a disease, whenever a child seems languid and miserable, fretful and depressing, without apparent cause, examine the throat carefully, writes Elizabeth Robinson Scovil in a very valuable article on "Care in Infectious diseases" in the February Ladies' Home Journal. If it is swolen and covered with patches of gray membrane looking like slate pencil dust, send for the doctor. It is always safest to have medical advice when the throat is affected.

Until the doctor comes keep the child in bed. If the throat is painful procure a lump of lime, pour cold water upon it; when the effervescence subsides strain off the clear water and apply it to the throat with a brush or swab. If the child is old enough the throat can be gargled with the limewater. Inhaling the steam from a pitcher of boiling water sometimes gives relief. The neck may be rubbed with warm oil and bound with flannel.

Milk, either hot or cold, should be given every two hours. The cold milk may have the white of an egg shaken with each cupful. Strong beef-tea can be given and the doctor may order stimulant. The strength must be supported by nourishing food.

The Christmas Stocking.

A jolly device to take the place of the tree is a big stocking with its top held open by a circle of wire. The stocking is made of striped calico or any available stuff and must be big enough to hold all the gifts, which are to be done up stoutly in pasteboard and paper. Each is tied with twine, and a long end is left. A tag is fastened to each string bearing the name of the one for whom the package is destined. Then all the packages are put into the stocking. When it is time for the distribution, each must find a string with his or her name on it and take hold. At a given signal all pull at once.

The fun will be increased if it be the rule that no one can get a gift except by pulling at the string, and that no one must use the hands to disentangle strings. It would perhaps be better to put in only one gift for each person at one time. Then, when all have got their packages, a second batch is arranged: then a third and so on.

A big horn of plenty, suspended so the gifts can be easily drawn out by strings, is a slight variation of this suggestion. If preferred, in either case the strings may be pulled one by one by a single person who has been chosen giftmaster.

She Might be Right.

A priest the other day, who was examining a confirmation class in the south of Ireland, asked the question: "What is the sacrament of matrimony?" A little girl at the head of the class answered: "Tis a state of torment into which souls enter to prepare them for another and better world." "Good" said the priest, "the answer for purgatory." "Put her down," says the curate, "Put her down to the foot of the class." "Leave her alone," said the priest, "for anything you or I know to the contrary, she may be perfectly right."

The Man to Marry.

A Covington girl has won a prize for this essay on the kind of a man to marry: "If I wished to marry—which, of course, I do not—I would desire a man too noble to commit a mean act, but generous enough to forgive one. A man as gentle as a woman, as manly as a man; one who does not talk scandal or tell disagreeable truths. A man whose name I would be proud to bear, to whom I could carry my doubts and perplexities, and with whom I would find sympathy and joy."

Would Dine Like a Queen.

Those who would like to sip a soup of which the English queen is especially fond, must prepare one as follows:

Take half a pound of pearl barley and set in a stew pan with three pints of veal stock. Simmer very gently for an hour and a half. Remove one-third to another soup pot, rub the rest through a sieve, pour it into the whole barley, add a half-pint of cream, season with a little salt, stir till very hot and serve.

—We have the support of eminent medical authority in saying that the most healthful way to cook apples is to pare and core them, and bake in a moderate oven. If the apple is of a quite sour variety it may be necessary to add a little sugar, putting about a salt spoonful in the hollow whence the core was extracted. The next best way to cook them is stewing. Contrary to common belief, apples baked in their skins are the least healthful of cooked apples.

ORANGE FLOAT.—Put a quart of water on to boil; moisten four table-spoonfuls of corn starch with a little cold water and stir in the boiling water, and cook slowly for ten minutes. Take from the fire, add a cup of sugar, the juice of a lemon, and the grated rind and pulp, cut six sweet oranges into pieces, remove the seeds, pour the boiling corn starch over them, and stand aside to cool. Serve icy cold with cream and sugar.

—The season for oranges is coming, and this is a delicious way to serve them: Pare with a sharp knife, removing the undercoating of white. Keep in a cool place until ready to serve: then sprinkle with powdered sugar. The neatest way to eat oranges served like this is to put a fork through the center and slice down the sides with a knife. This preserves all the juice, and none of the flavor is lost, as in eating with a spoon.

To Brighten Mica.

Stoves are being put up and the housekeeper requires much patience. If the mica in the doors looks smoky here is a recipe for brightening them. Slip the mica out and put it to soak in a dish of vinegar for a few hours, then remove and polish with a soft dry cloth. This process will bring back its old time brightness.

To Restore Ostrich Feathers.

Here is a way to restore ostrich feathers which is much used in Paris: Throw a big handful of salt on the fire and shake the feathers in the heat of the blaze, being careful not to singe them.

Did Not Know in Time.

An Irishman, finding his cash at a low ebb, resolved to adopt "the road" as a professional means of replenishing his exchequer; and having provided himself with a huge horse-pistol, proceeded forthwith to the conventional "lonely common," and lay in wait. The no less conventional "farmer returning from market with a bag of money" of course soon appeared, to whom enter Pat with the regulation highway-man offer of choice, "Your money or your life!" a remark fortified by the simultaneous exhibition of the firearm in the usual way. The farmer, who was a Quaker, essayed to temporize. "I would not have thee stain thy soul with sin, friend; and didst thou rob me of my gold, it would be theft; and didst thou kill me, it would be murder. But hold! A bargain is no sin, but a commerce between two honest men. I will give thee this bag of gold for the pistol which thou holdest at my ear." The unsuspecting amateur Macheath, yielding perhaps to the Quaker's logic solicitude for his spiritual welfare, made the exchange, without a moment's hesitation. "Now, friend," cried the wily Ephriam, levelling the weapon, "Give me back my gold, or I'll blow thy brains out!" "Blaze away thin, darlint!" said Pat. "Sure, there's niver a dhrop of powther in it." The result was a sold Quaker.

What is Pride?

"Father," said his son, looking up from a book, "what is pride?"

"Pride!" returned the father. "Pride! Why—a—oh, surely you know what pride is. A sort of being stuck up—a kind of—well, proud, you know. Just get the dictionary, that's the thing to tell you exactly what it is. There's nothing like a dictionary, Johnny."

"Here it is," said the latter after an exhausting search. "Pride—being proud."

"Um—yes, that's it," replied the father.

"But"—

"Well, look at 'proud!' That's the way—you've got to hunt these things out, my lad."

"I've got it," answered Johnny. "Pre-pri—pro'—why!"——

"What does it say?"

"'Proud—having pride.'"

"That's it. There you are as clear as day. I tell you, Johnny, there is nothing like a good dictionary when you are young. Take care of the binding, my son, as you put it back."

"Bless this Frugal Meal."

"How do you like the new minister?" inquired one of the leading members of a suburban flock of the deacon's wife, says the New York Herald.

"I don't like him at all," was the reply.

"Of course I invited him to dine with us when he was here on trial, and naturally enough I apologized in advance for the dinner, but I leave it to you if that afforded him ground to insult me?"

"Insult you? Certainly not. How did he do that?"

"Oh, when it came time to say grace, he asked the Lord to bless the 'frugal meal,' and really, between us, I must admit that I had made most elaborate preparations."

—Husband—The dressing gown and slippers fit splendidly, and the cigars and liquors are just what I need for my health. Now, dear Jane, I am going to reward you with a little Christmas gift. Henceforth you have had to go down into the cellar a dozen times a day and lug up coal. I am going to put a stop to it.

Wife—O, thanks, George; how thoughtful and considerate you are!

Husband—I have got you a Christmas gift, the biggest coal scuttle in New York, so from now on you bring up all the coal at once.

Wife (in ecstacy)—O, George, how you lighten my burden for me! You are too good. Please let me kiss you—only once—if it is not asking too much.
