A SCENE IN THE FOREST.

"In the early part of the war, a sergeant and twelve armed men undertook a journey through the wilderness, in the State of New Hampshire.—Their route was remote from any settlements, and they were under the necessity of encamping over night in the woods. Nothing material happened the first day of their excursion; but early in the afternoon of the second, they, from an eminence, discovered a body of armed Indians advancing towards them, whose number rather exceeded their own. As soon as the whites were perceived by their red brethren, the latter made signals, and the two parties approached each other in an amicable manner. The Indians appeared to be much gratified with meeting the sergeant and his men, whom they observed they considered as their protectors; said they belonged to a tribe which had raised the hatchet with zeal in the cause of liberty, and were determined to do all in their power to repel the common enemy. They shook hands in friendship, and it was, "How d'ye do pro, how d'ye do pro," that being their pronunciation of the word brother. When they had conversed with each other, for some time, and exchanged mutual good wishes, they at length separated, and each party travelled in a different direction. After proceeding to the distance of a mile or more, the sergeant, who was acquainted with all the different tribes, and knew on which side of the contest they were respectively ranked, halted his men and addressed them in the following words:

"My brave companions, we must use the utmost caution, or this night may be our last. Should we not make some extraordinary exertions to defend ourselves, to-morrow's sun may find us sleeping never to wake. You are surprised, comrades, at my words, and your anxiety will not be lessened, when I inform you, that we have just passed our most inveterate foe, who, under the mask of pretended friendship, you have witnessed, would lull us to security, and by such means, in the unguarded moments of our midnight slumber, without resistance, seal our fate."

"The men with astonishment listened to this short harangue; and their surprise was greater, as not one of them had entertained the least suspicions, but they had just encountered friends.—They all immediately resolved to enter into some scheme, for their mutual preservation and the destruction of their enemies. By the proposal of their leader, the following plan was adopted and executed:

"The spot selected for their night's encampment, was near a stream of water, which served to cover their rear. They felled a large tree, before which on the approach of night, a brilliant fire was lighted. Each individual cut a log of wood about the size of his body, rolled it nicely in this blanket, placed it his hat upon the extremity, and placed it before the fire; that the enemy might be deceived, and mistake it for a man. After logs equal in number to the sergeant's party were thus fitted out, and so artfully arranged, that they might be easily mistaken for so many soldiers, the men with loaded muskets placed themselves behind the fallen tree, by which time the shades of evening began to close around. The fire was supplied with fuel, and kept burning brilliantly until late in the evening, when it was suffered to decline. The critical time was now approaching, when an attack might be expected from the Indians; but the sergeant's men rested in their place of concealment with great anxiety, till near midnight, without perceiving any movement of the enemy.

"At length a tall Indian was discovered through the glimmering of the fire, cautiously moving towards them, making no noise, and apparently using every means in his power to conceal himself from any one about the camp. For a time his actions showed him to be suspicious, that a guard might be stationed to watch any unusual appearance, who would give the alarm in case of danger; but all appearing quiet, he ventured forward more boldly, rested upon his toes, and was distinctly seen to move his finger as he numbered each leg of wood, or what he supposed to be a human being quietly enjoying repose. To satisfy himself more fully, as to the number, he counted them over a second time, and cautiously retired. He was succeeded by another Indian, who went through the same movements, and retired in the same manner. Soon after, the whole party, sixteen in number, were discovered approaching, and greedily eyeing their supposed victims. The feelings of the sergeant's men can better be imagined than described, when they saw the base and cruel purpose of their enemies, who were now so near, that they could scarcely be restrained from firing upon them. The plan, however, of the sergeant was to have his men remain silent, in their place of concealment till the muskets of the savages were discharged, that their own fire might be more effectual, and opposition less formidable.

"Their suspense was not of long duration. The Indians, in a body, cautiously approached, till within a short distance, they then halted, took deliberate aim, discharged their pieces upon inanimate logs, give the dreadful warhoop, and instantly rushed forward, with tomahawk and scalping knife in hand, to despatch the living, and obtain the scalps of the dead. As soon as they had collected in close order, more effectually to execute their horrid intentions, the party of the sergeant, with unerring aim, discharged their pieces, not on logs of wood, but perfidious savages, at sun, of whom escaped destruction by the snare into which their cowardly and blood thirsty dispositions had led them."—*N. A GEOLOGIST NONPLUSSED.—An old bachelor geologist was boasting that every rock was as familiar to him as the alphabet. A lady, who was present, declared she knew a rock of which he was wholly ignorant. "Name it, madame," cried Celebs, in a rage. "It is rock the cradle, Sir," replied the lady. Celebs evaporated.

A very simple contrivance has been arranged by A. Meyer, in St. Petersburg, for measuring the specific gravity of solid or fluid bodies. It consists of a glass cylinder, a glass tube in the form of a syphon, and a brass screw vice for holding the syphon.

ST. JOHN, N.B., March 27th, 1855.
Mr. STEVENS:
DEAR SIR,—It is with pleasure I make known to you the opinion of myself and many others of the MELODEON purchased from you a few months ago. This instrument manufactured by Mason & Hamlin, has given the utmost satisfaction, both in Tone, Touch, and Power, and I do freely, and cheerfully admit it is the best I have ever seen. Since the introduction of this instrument in our Choir Practice we find a great improvement, thereby sustaining the Voice, and procuring a perfect Tone to every Note.
I am dear Sir, yours truly,

The Subscriber having been appointed Agent to the above Company for New-Brunswick, begs to announce that he is prepared to receive Proposals for FIRE AND LIFE ASSURANCE. The large Capital of the Company, and the number and influence of its Proprietors, enable it to rank with the most eligible Offices, either in America or Europe, with respect to the advantages offered to the Public.

FIRE BRANCH.

Persons Assured by this Company are not subject to any covenants or calls to make good losses which may happen to themselves or other, nor do they depend on any uncertain fund or contribution, the Capital Stock of this Company being an unquestionable security to the Assured in case of Loss or Damage by Fire.

LIFE BRANCH.

In addition to the more customary methods of Insurance, the Company likewise Assures Lives on any of the following contingencies:—
For the terms of One Year, Seven Years, or any other definite period.
For the whole continuance of Life.—The Premiums to cease, after a limited number of Annual Payments.
For Two Joint Lives.—The sum assured to be paid on the death of either.
On the longest of Two or Three Lives.—The sum assured to be payable at the death of the last survivor; or,
The Survivorships.—To secure the payment of the sum assured, if a life A die before another life B.
For a sum to be payable at age 60, or at death.
Premiums on Credit.—A portion of the Premiums on Credit. Assurances may be effected in various ways, not enumerated, to meet the convenience of parties.
The important advantages afforded by the Company in the Life Branch will include the following viz:—
The Guarantee of an ample Capital, and Exemption of the Assured from liability of Partnership.
Moderate Premiums.
Large Participation of Profits by the Assured amounting to Two-thirds of its net amount, which may be applied at the option of the party effecting the Assurance:—1st. By the immediate payment of the sum so apportioned.—2nd. By an equivalent increase of the sum assured.
Small Charge for Management.—The expenses of the Office being borne in due proportion by the two Branches.
Prompt Settlement of Claims.
Policies lapsed by non-payment of the Premium may be renewed within three months, by paying the premium, with a fine of 10s per cent., on the production of evidence to the satisfaction of the Directors of the good health of the life assured.
The Company will always be prepared to Purchase the Policies of this Office at their equitable value or will grant a New Policy in lieu thereof without any further payment of Premium, for a sum to be agreed on.
Extra Premiums, suitable to special circumstances, will be accepted to enable a party possessing a Policy on the life of another to guard against the possibility of its being vitiated by the Life departing beyond limits, or by any other cause.
Thirty Days are allowed for the Payment of Premiums after the day on which they respectively Additional Advantages offered to Lives Assured with this Company at St. John, N. B.
I.—RESIDENCE.—Persons assured for the whole term of life will have permission, without the payment of extra Premium, to reside in any part of Europe, or in any place in North America to the north of 38 degrees of North Latitude, but not to the westward of the Mississippi River.
II. VOYAGES.—They will also, if not seafaring by profession, be allowed, without any extra charge—
To cross and re-cross the Atlantic Ocean, in steamers or first class sailing-vessels;
To pass from any part of Europe to any other, or from any part of North America to another, within the limits above specified; also,
To pass to and from, but not to reside in any place which shall not be further south than 35 degrees of North Latitude, but not to the westward of the Mississippi River.

FOUNTAIN HOUSE.

THE Subscriber wishes respectfully to inform his friends and the public that in order to provide the travelling community with a large and commodious house of entertainment in this City, he has purchased and fitted up at great expense that large and convenient Hotel, situated on the North side of Kings Square, and known as the FOUNTAIN HOUSE, where he intends to serve the public, and will be able to accomodate a large number of persons with well furnished single bed rooms, good Sitting Rooms, and all other conveniences for the comfort of travellers or permanent boarders. Also—a splendid Barn—none to exceed it in the City, with stalls for forty horses, and a large yard attached, all under cover, where sleighs, carriages, and loads of country produce can be driven in free from storms.
The subscriber is thankful to his friends and the public for the liberal manner in which he has been patronised and assures them that strict attention will still be paid to those who favour him with their patronage.
