ENRAGED GIRL BEAT BRIDEGROOM

Lena Failed to Stop Wedding, But Hammered Monahan.

New York, Aug. 10.—Lena Rolfe did not succeed in preventing Agnes Murphy from marrying William Monahan in the Paulist Church in West Fifty-ninth street, but she gave the bride and bridegroom something to remember her by. She is a waitress in the restaurant near the church. Pretty nearly everybody in the restaurant knew that Lena expected to marry Monahan herself. When she came to work there was a letter for her. It read:

Friend Lena: Mr. Monahan will marry Miss Murphy at the Paulist's Church tomorrow (Wednesday evening) at 7:30 p.m. A FRIEND.
Lena went to the church and asked for Father Daly. He saw her, and she told him that Monahan, who is a chauffeur, had promised to marry her and had got nearly $300 from her in various amounts. She wanted the marriage stopped. Father Daly could do nothing. He told her to go to a magistrate's court and see if she could get a summons.

Magistrate Corrigan said that the only way Lena could get her money back would be in the civil court.

She Would Fix Him.
"Well, if I don't get the money I will fix him anyhow, and then I will fix myself," said Lena. The magistrate did not think much of the threat.

Lena went back to her room at 139 West Sixty-first street and thought it out. Then she went to all her friends and told them to be on hand at the church at 7:30 sharp. They were there. Lena herself was standing in the church door. Jennie, who works in a nearby laundry, and Julia, who is married and does not need to work, Mrs. Sullivan and her little boy (Monahan went to room at Mrs. Sullivan's house, where Lena boards)—all came to the wedding, together with sundry male acquaintances of Lena and Monahan.

A taxicab stopped in front of the church and two men and two young women clad in white got out and walked up the steps. The church seemed dark, and for a moment they stopped just within the vestibule. The bridegroom arranged the bride's big bunch of lilies of the valley, and with the best man and the bridesmaid in the lead, they started up the steps to the inner door.

Made It Interesting.

Then Lena Rolfe came out of her hiding place in the shadow and caught

Privacy

Then she grabbed his tie and pulled it off for a souvenir. All the time Lena's friends stood by and cheered. After five minutes the best man managed to get a strangle hold on Lena. The bridegroom jumped into the cab and shut the door, and the cab went away without the best man, who was still busy doing a best man's duty. The cab ran into an elevated railroad pillar and lost its starboard step, but did not stop. Then a policeman walked leisurely into the little group and asked what all the trouble was.

"Arrest this woman," said the best man.

"He is my friend," said Lena, and she laughed.

"Do you want this man arrested, Lena?" asked the policeman.

Lena said "No."

"Then beat it away from here—all of ye," said the policeman. "This is a church you are in front of."

Lena and her friends walked away in the rain, for Lena had broken the only umbrella in the party.
