STRANGE SCENES IN JAPAN.

First Impressions—The Common People. A Strange Festival—Japanese Women.

In Yokohama is a long boulevard called the "Bund," bounded at each end by a jetty or pier called the "Hatoba," with a pleasant wooded hill to the left known as the "Bluff," dotted with white houses. The harbor or bay itself is a circle of water perhaps three miles wide—big enough at any rate to be so rough in windy weather that the ships have to get up steam and go to sea for safety.

To come now to "first impressions;" there are, of course, two kinds of these. There are the mere sense impressions, the things which strike the eye and ear as strange, and there are the "first impressions," which mean the conclusions springing to the mind when the externals are first understood. The former class of these "first impressions" generally attach themselves to very trivial matters, but they are often not the less entertaining for all this. The first thing, for instance, that I noticed in Japan was the enormous hats of the coolies, and next the ludicrous combinations of European and foreign dress worn by many young members of the middle class. A pot hat, a cotton wrapper or bath gown—the yukata—a pair of long stockings and boots—that was a common mixture, the wearer evidently and rightly thinking that he had adopted the best points of both systems. An hour after landing, too, a remark made to me by an educated Japanese gentleman on the Belgic recurred to me. I had asked him if the coming constitution for Japan was likely to include trial by jury. "After you have seen Japan," he replied, with a smile, "you won't ask that question." I mean by this that I was struck with the fact that the common people of Japan, courteous and clever and civilized as they are in many ways—the hewers of wood and drawers of water and pullers of jerinkishas—are upon a different plane from the common people at home. One might say that they live in two dimensions, whereas trial by jury, not in its origin, but in its significance today, is a three dimension idea. Moreover, the rulers of Japan see that trial by jury is often a failure or a farce with us, and they have no wish to educate the people up to it.

In Japan there are almost as many religious festivals as in Spain, and one of these—matsuri is their generic name—was being celebrated the other day in the Japanese town. I went to look for it with my detective camera, and when I met it I could hardly believe my eyes—it corresponded more to one's idea of New Guinea than of Japan. Upon an ordinary bullock cart a raised platform and scaffolding twenty feet high had been constructed, and bullock and all covered with paper decorations and green boughs and artificial flowers. In front a girl with a grotesque mask danced and postured, while half a dozen musicians twanged impossible instruments and kept up an incessant tattoo on drums. Children wild with delight crowded up among the performers and clung like flies all over the cart, and only that Providence which takes care of them, together with drunkards and the United States of America, preserved them from making a juggernaut of it. On foot around the kashi, as the whole structure is called, were twenty or thirty men, naked as to their legs, their faces chalked, with straw hats a yard wide, many colored tunics, in which scarlet predominated, decked out with paper streamers and flowers enough to make a Sioux chief despair of himself, dancing along to a very rude chant and at every step banging upon the ground a long iron bar fitted with loose rings.

The colors, the song, the dance, the music and the clanging iron formed together a spectacle as barbarous in taste as possible, something wholly different from what one had supposed the gentle culture of the Japanese to be. At the time I was greatly puzzled, but subsequently I learned that this matsuri is not so barbarous as it looks. I took it to be a serious religious ceremony. I found that it had just as much to do with religion as an Italian carnival has—that is, it was born of religious feeling and has entirely forgotten its ancestry. Buddhism, which is the religion of the common people, has always played to the gallery, so to speak, and the priests of today make money out of the matsuri, partly in the shape of the coins which are thrown into the temple ponds and partly from their share of the subscriptions of the well to do people of the neighborhood, by whom the festival is supported. The affair is thus a Japanese carnival, where people drink sake and play the fool themselves or watch others doing so, exactly as at Nice or Venice.

No account of "first impressions," too, would be complete without an illusion to the grace and charm of the Japanese women. The first time one sees a couple of pretty and prettily dressed Japanese girls walking abroad under their huge variegated paper umbrella, with their elaborately dressed black hair, their perfect tiny hands and feet, their large brown eyes—set obliquely if they are "beauties;" with their delicate, soft toned crêpe garments, and the heavy flat silk obi twisted round and round their waist and ending in a colossal bow behind; with their funny motion on their clip-clapping pattens, half undulating run and half waddle, and their merry laughter and chatter—when one sees them for the first time, I say, one is usually delighted enough to follow them up and down for half an hour under a fine pretense of losing one's way or looking into the shops. At least I did, till I succeeded in getting a snap photograph of them.—Yokohama Cor. New York World.

An Exercise for Health.

If you are troubled with too much blood in the head, the best thing you can do for a simple remedy is to take the twisting movements of the trunk at the waist. Keep the feet firm, turn the trunk as far as possible to the right—till you face right—four times; the same to the left; then alternate the movements. Next, bend the body strongly and slowly to the right, from the waist, then to the left. Again bend forward as strongly as possible, from the waist, then slightly back, at first, increasing on the back movement later, as you are able.—Mary E. Allen in Youth's Companion.

OLD LOVE SONGS.

Ah, love! dear love! what tender songs they sang—
Those poets to the women of their choice;
Yet none more tenderly than I to you
Had it pleased heaven to give me but the voice

My heart stirs, but my lips are ever mute,
For all my common words have common ways;
And none are high enough that I should dare
Essay with them my lady's perfect praise.

Yet, when I hear these others sing I feel
Such passion as the poor gray weed well knows,
Condemned to grow in flowerless sullity
In gardens where there blooms full many a rose
—C. A. Pratt.

Prosperity of the Maoris.

"New Zealand has more debt in proportion to its size and wealth than any other country in the world," said Father Wissel. "There was a great deal of faith in gold mining for a time, but the yellow ore failed to materialize in sufficient quantities to put the miners' business on a paying basis, and the mines were temporarily abandoned. The English have not given up hopes yet, and companies are beginning to take hold of the enterprise of hunting gold again. The Maoris, or natives, call their houses waoris. They raise potatoes and corn, dig gum or do anything for a living, and they are very intelligent people. The Maori people are better off almost than the whites, because they possess a lot of land that the whites do not. They have the king country, and their gardens, fruit farms and horse pastures are well taken care of. They are very fond of horses and keep lots of them. They buy vegetables, guns, coffee, tea and groceries in the towns. Their war dances are interesting, and at them they have all sorts of games. Sometimes they become warlike toward the whites and refuse to let them pass through the exclusive Maori country."—Globe-Democrat.

The Making of Fancy Candies.

In the big factories lozenges and mottoes are stamped in the sheet and then cut out separately with patent cutters. Wafer lozenges are more carefully prepared than the thick, round kind. The latter are fed into a machine like a job printing press, by the sheet, and come out round, hard confections. Wafers are cut by hand. Fruits are now crystallized to some extent by wholesalers in this country, but not as successfully as in France. Opinions differ on this matter. Some dealers declare that here the fault alone is in the quality of the fruit. Others assert that we have not acquired the French secret of preparing the syrups and getting them to penetrate to the heart of the fruit. The finish of fine candies is put on by wholesalers in the same way as in retail houses, where all work is performed by hand. The syrup used in the process of crystallization is used in the making of clear candies and stick goods.—Chicago Herald.

A Lack of Taste.

One of the most irritating of the recent idiocies of tourists is the fashion of leaving cards at the tombs of distinguished people. The bust of Longfellow in Westminster Abbey is constantly surrounded by these inappropriate bits of pasteboard, and the grave of "H. H." is said to be literally covered with the visiting cards left by tourists who climbed the lonely mountain near Colorado Springs to visit the last resting place of the poet and novelist. Nothing but an abundance of the most egregious vanity and absolute lack of taste could prompt an action so idiotic as the following of this absurd custom.—Boston Courier.

The Long Coach Whip Pennant.

Many people have wondered what is the significance of the long pennant carried at the main truck of all vessels of war in commission. When the Dutch Admiral Van Tromp hoisted a broom at the top of the mast of his vessel to indicate his intention to sweep the English from the sea, the English admiral hoisted a horse whip, indicating his intention to chastise the Dutchman. Hence the coach whip pennant was adapted as the distinctive insignia of a war vessel in commission for service.—New York Tribune.

Another Use for Photography.

The latest use to which the magnesium flash light has been put is the photography of the human eye. At the suggestion of Du Bois Reymond, a normal eye, after a quarter of an hour's rest in a darkened room, was photographed life size, the result being that the photograph showed the pupil of the eye dilated to its fullest extent. As these photographs permit of measurement, they cannot fail to be of great value to medical science.—Photographic News.

An Incentive to Industry.

While it is ordinarily the custom of carpenters, masons and painters to contract for their work by the day or by the job, there are occasional deviations from it. One expert carpenter in Philadelphia makes his contracts by the job, specifying that he shall receive a bonus if he finishes before a certain time. As he is a rapid workman he contrives to earn considerably more than he would if contracting in the customary way.—Chicago News.

Only Think of It.

Mattie—Don't you know, I've found out something awful about Mr. Green.

Hettie—Why, what can it be?

"He's a Mormon, or a bigamist, at least."

"A bigamist!"

"Yes; he told me that his wife was one of a thousand! Only think of it!"—Boston Transcript.

Not Much Breakage.

"Oh, the Frenchman was very harshly treated. They threw him off the balcony into the street."

"They did? Well, was he hurt much? Anything broken?"

"Nothing but his English."—Harper's Bazar.

ODDS AND ENDS.

The old-time skirts are again in vogue. These are merely two straight flounces, covering the foundation skirt all around.

AN OPEN LETTER.—Nov. 25th, 1886. Messrs. T. Milburn & Co.—I wish I had used B. B. B. sooner, which would have saved me years of suffering with erysipelas, from which I could get no relief until I tried B. B. B., which soon cleared away the itching, burning rash that had so long distressed me. Mrs. Edward Romkey, Eastern Passage, Halifax, N. S.

Large silk kerchiefs of navy blue, red or white, knotted carelessly about the throat, are worn with blouse waists which have large sailor collars.

FOR FROST BITES.—There is no better remedy for frost bites, chilblains and similar troubles, than Hagyard's Yellow Oil. It also cures rheumatism, lumbago, sore throat, deafness, and lameness and pain generally. Yellow Oil is used internally and externally.

Apron draperies are fuller at the top than formerly. Many draperies are not sloped at all, being made at straight breadths, which are adjusted to the figure as most becoming.

THE TRIUMPHANT THREE.—"During three years' suffering with dyspepsia I tried almost every known remedy but kept getting worse until I tried B. B. B. I had only used it three days when I felt better; three bottles completely cured me." W. Nichols, of Kendal, Ont.

The silk or satin foundation of the newest lace dresses is made fluffy at the foot, one very full plaiting being sewed to the skirt hem, aiding in holding out the lace edge of the flouncing.

ON THE PLATFORM.—Public speakers and singers are often troubled with sore throat and hoarseness and are liable to severe bronchical attacks which might be prevented and cured by the use of Hagyard's Pectoral Balsam—the best throat and lung remedy in use.

Artistic costumes in various antique styles were popular for dressy evening wear at the summer resorts; and the rage for them will be likely to continue through the autumn and winter.

IMPORTANT TO WORKINGMEN.—Artizans, mechanics and laboring men are liable to sudden accidents and injuries, as well as painful cords, stiff joints and lameness. To all thus troubled we would recommend Hagyard's Yellow Oil, the handy and reliable pain cure for outward or internal use.

The newest Indian silks have a vine and a stripe near the selvage, forming a border an inch and a half wide. This serves to finish the edges so that no hems are required, and a light effect is there by produced.

PRAISEWORTHY.—"Last summer I was entirely laid up with liver complaint. A friend advised me to use Burdock Blood Bitters; I did so, and four bottles cured me. I cannot praise this remedy too much" John H. Rivers, Port Lake, Ont.

Dressy corsages now have the fronts arranged with a wide guimpe of some soft material at the top, with a velvet revers turned over across the bust. With such dresses the sleeves are always gathered at the wrist or elbow to a velvet band.

Don't Give up the Ship.

You have been told that consumption is incurable; that when the lungs are attacked by this terrible malady, the sufferer is past all help, and the end is a mere question of time. You have noted with alarm the unmistakable symptoms of the disease; you have tried all manner of so-called cures in vain, and you are now despondent and preparing for the worst. But don't give up the ship while Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery remains untried. It is not a cure-all, nor will it perform miracles, but it has cured thousands of cases of consumption, in its earlier stages, where all other means had failed. Try it, and obtain a new lease of life.

Boas of lace, whether they are attached to the hat or worn about the neck independently, are very stylish. Yards of lace edge, two fingers wide, are gathered into a jabot, making a dressy effect for a carriage toilette, or for a garden party costume.

A Dish of New P's.

P stands for pudding, for Peach and for Pear,
And likewise for Poetry and Prose;
The Parot, the Pigeon that flies in the air,
The Pig with a ring in his nose;
For Paper and Pen, for Printer and Press,
For Physic, and People who sell it;
But when you are sick, to relieve your distress
Take at once Pierce's Purgative Pellet.

Oh, yes, indeed! These are the P's for you, poor, sick man or woman. Nothing like them for keeping the bowels and stomach regulated and in order—tiny, sugar-coated granules, scarcely larger than mustard seeds. They work gently but thoroughly.

Dainty little sun bonnets for babies are made of pink or blue chambery and have an edging of valenciennes lace as a finish. These are worn with little dresses to match.

Are Your Pullets Laying?

This question is often asked at this season by persons keeping hens; and the answer is too often, "No! and suppose they wont lay until eggs get cheap next spring, just my luck." It ought not to be your luck. Pullets hatched in April last should have commenced laying a month ago; while May and June hatches should be laying this month. It is not too late even now, to force the early pullets to laying in a few weeks. The late ones, even as late as July and August, can be brought forward, so as to pay well, while eggs bring good prices. Strictly fresh, pullets eggs will probably retail as high as 50 to 60 cents per dozen, in Boston and New York markets, before March 1st, 1889. Mrs L. J. Wilson, of Northboro, Mass., says: "In past years, I have noticed when my pullets laid at all, they would lay a little and then want to set, or mope around for ten days, often for weeks doing no laying. Last fall and winter there was no interruption of their laying. The results were the best I ever saw in an experience of eighteen years. My thirty pullets were all just six months old when they commenced laying. I never saw such return of eggs. In just eight weeks after they commenced to lay, the thirty pullets laid 1437 eggs; which I ascribed to the use of Sheridan's Condition Powder, to make hens lay." The new and enlarged edition of the Farmers' Poultry Guide contains much information upon the above subject. I. S. Johnston & Co., 22 Custom House Street Boston, Mass., (the only manufacturers of Sheridan's Powder to make hens lay) will send a Guide postpaid, to any address, for 25 cents in stamps; or two 25 cent packs of Sheridan's Powder and the book for 60 cents, five packs $1. A large 2½ pound can of the Powder for $1 20 postpaid and the Guide, six cans $5; express prepaid. They will send a testimonial circular free to any one.

Excellent Judgment.

"What do you think of the new arrival, Professor Uglugly?"

"I've never heard him perform, but I know that he has splendid judgment in musical matters."

"How do you know?"

"When we were at the gathering at Spinner's last evening he was the first to request me to sing."—Lincoln Journal.

A Remedy.

Harry—Why, Tom, what in goodness' name have you got in your trousers?

Tom—Dear me! I was in hopes it wouldn't be noticed. You see, I've been out to the ball ground all day, and that means a thrashin' when I get home; so I just put a tin saucepan where I fancied it would be of some use, but I'm afraid dad's eyes 'll be as snarp as your'n.—Life

A Singular Man.

On a Baker street car the other day a man who had taken a car ticket from his wallet dropped the "leather" on the floor at his feet in trying to replace it in his pocket. Three or four passengers saw the transaction, but no one had said a word, when the loser discovered his loss and started up and sat down in disgust.

"Anything wrong?" asked a passenger.

"Yes; wallet is gone."

"Probably picked out of your pocket?"

"No. I guess not."

"Don't you suspect some one in this car?"

"Oh, no, I probably dropped it on the street."

"Probably contained a hundred dollars, didn't it?"

"No."

"Much as fifty, then?"

"No. I guess there was about a dollar in it."

"But you will stand off your gas bill and water tax and grocer on account of it, of course?"

"No, sir; I shall pay everything today."

"Well, gosh-darn-to-gum, if you ain't a mighty queer man, and here's your wallet! Say, folks, let's present him a token of our utter amazement."

And they bought him six car tickets and offered to run him for mayor.—Detroit Free Press.

Oysters Are in Season.

She (blushingly)—Why do you say my teeth are like pearls?

He (gallantly)—Because they are. I can't compare them with anything else.

She (smiling)—You are a flatterer, I'm afraid, George.

He (gravely)—Flatterer! No. I only speak the plain and simple truth.

She—And they are really like pearls?

He (emphatically)—They are.

She (with an arch glance)—Do you know what your reference to pearls reminds me of, George?

He—I can't say. What does it remind you of?

She—Oysters.—Boston Courier.

Tired Stranger (2 o'clock a. m.)—I've been traveling since yesterday morning. Can you give me a quiet room where I can sleep till 10 o'clock? Don't care where it is, nor what it costs, but want the quietest room in the building.

Hotel Clerk—Can fix you all right, sir. Boys, show the gentleman to No. 88.

[No. 88 is a cozy room on the fourth floor just opposite the elevator, and the stranger, a class leader of seventeen years' standing, backslides hopelessly before 8 o'clock.]—Chicago Tribune.

How to Cork Political Prophets.

Blinks—There comes Jinks. Let's get away from him. He thinks he's a political prophet, and does nothing but bore everybody he meets.

Klinks—Let him come; I'll shut him up like a jackknife.

"Eh! You won't threaten to strike him, will you?"

"No; I'll offer to bet with him."—Philadelphia Record.

For Once.

Maiden Lady—I think I will visit a chiropodist while I am in the city.

Friend—Have you corns?

M. L.—No.

F.—Bunions?

M. L.—No.

F.—Why, then, visit a chiropodist?

M. L.—I want to have it to say that I had a man at my feet once in my life.—Boston Courier.

Likely.

A news item says that a mule in Colusa county, Cal., "was struck by lightning and paralyzed, but recovered after twenty-four hours and was as frisky as ever." It is not stated what became of the lightning, but it is inferred that it is still lingering in a hospital.—Norristown Herald.

A Temporary Loan.

Chumley—I'm in a little fix today, Brown, for money; what would you say if I were to ask you for a temporary loan of a hundred or two dollars?

Brown—Well, Chumley, if the loan will be temporary, I might let you have the two dollars.—Accident News.

When Time Flies.

Sweet Girl—Mercy! It's 10 o'clock. Has time ever passed so quickly with you as it does now?

Devoted Lover (a traveling salesman)—Never, except at railroad dining stations.—Philadelphia Record.

Accounted For.

"I see," remarked Withers, "that the Prince of Wales wears a black silk ribbon instead of a watch chain. Funny, isn't it?"

"Well, I don't know," returned Smithers; "perhaps he's lost the ticket."—Judge.

An Unkhanny Joke.
