CHAPTER XXX.

It is the evening of the second day after Paula has bidden farewell to Sir Herrick that Bob returns.

Best not to inquire how those two days have passed with Paula. There are some battles that it is best to fight in secret, and without audience or spectators: a fierce battle was fought in that neat little dimity chamber between Paula and her lost love, a struggle so severe that in after years when she recalls it her soul shrinks back, appalled at the remembrance; a struggle which leaves her pale and wan, and weak, but, thank heaven, victorious!

"For me there is no joy in day or night,
Gone is the sunshine and the light
Of happy hours——"

she could say, but she does not. However deep the iron may have entered her soul, she has vowed that she will cover the wound decently, and hide the fox under the vestment, as the Sparton boy did, "and smile even though her heart broke."

The thought of going about like a deserted maiden, with a pale face, and, perchance, a black dress, makes her shudder and laugh with mingled bitterness and self-scorn, and prompts her to choose the brightest frock when she comes down to meet Alice's curious and keen scrutiny.

Alice starts and raises her eyebrows when she sees the pink cotton in all its bravery; but there is a look in the pale face that warns her that any remark would be unwelcome, and she contents herself with watching the sorrow-stricken girl covertly, and wondering whether this is really the end, or whether the major has something else in store, and when she shall hear from him.

So the two days pass, and in the evening of the second there is a great barking on the part of the dogs, the sound of a man's firm tread in the hall—and Bob comes in.

"Hallo," he says, with a faint imitation of his old cheery brusqueness, as he enters the parlor and flings his hat on to a chair. "Here I am, you see. The return of the wanderer. All right?" and he nods to Alice, and just lays his hand for a moment on Paula's shoulder.

Alice smiles, and replies that they are all right, and hopes that he isn't tired.

"Tired! I am as tired as a dog," he says, putting his traveling bag down, and pushing back the hair from his forehead. "Awful journey; but it's worth while doing it to get out of London—beastly place! Got anything to eat? I haven't had a decent meal since I left," he goes on, hurriedly, glancing with ill-concealed anxiety at Paula's face.

"I'll go and see," she says.

Bob goes upstairs—he must be tired to walk as slowly and heavily as he does—and when the supper appears, under Paula's superintendence, he does not seem to be very keen about it; but he talks unceasingly, as if he were talking against time, and thought; and Paula, sitting back in the window, understands him.

"And have you done your business in London?" asks Alice, lying back in the arm-chair, and surveying him from under her half-closed eyes.

"Yes," he says, with a nod, and an intense interest in his plate.

"And what is the new fashion?" she asks. "Is it true that nearly all the women are wearing their hair short?"

"Yes—no—I think so. 'Pon my word, I didn't notice," he replies, in such a helpless fashion that Paula cannot suppress a smile.

"You wouldn't remark the difference if all the women were shaved," says Alice with lazy contempt.

"I don't suppose I should," says Bob absently. "But they weren't shaved—at least I think not."

"And did you go to the theater?" asks Alice.

"No," he says, with a sigh cut short in the middle, "no, I was busy."

"What! All night?" retorts Alice, incredulously.

"Oh, no, of course not; but I don't care about theaters, you know."

"I suppose long skirts and trains have quite gone out?"

"Yes, I think so," he answers, gravely, with such a palpable unconsciousness of the reply that even Alice laughs.

"The fact is," she says, "you must have walked about with your eyes and ears shut."

"I wish I had," he says with a sudden groan. Then he looks up and colors almost angrily—almost.

"What do I know or care whether women wear their hair short or their skirts long?" he says, impatiently. "What is the use of asking me such idiotic questions?"

"I don't think there is any use," assents Alice. "I think I'll go to bed."

And she takes her departure, much to Bob's relief.

There is silence for just a minute, while Paula mixes him his usual glass of whisky and water, and he sits, with his head resting on his hand, staring at the cloth.

Then he gets up and fills his pipe and lights it, carefully avoiding her eyes.

It is Paula who speaks first.

"Don't trouble, Bob," she says, in a quiet voice as she comes up to him and sinks down at his feet. "I know all."

He starts and looks down at her with a sudden look of surprise and almost alarm on his frank face.

"You know," he says hesitatingly.

"I know all," she repeats, her eyes fixed on the Japanese umbrella in the fireplace—her white hands locked together on her lap. "Bob, he—Sir Herrick"—she winces as the name leaves her lips—"Sir Herrick has been here."

He almost springs to his feet.

"He has been here? Curse his impudence!" he exclaims between his teeth.

"Hush! Don't curse him, Bob!" she says with a little shudder. "I can't bear that, for all that he has done!"

He looks down at her with a man's tender pity and a man's fierce anger in his face.

"Paula, my dear," he says, and his strong voice falters, "he—he is a villain—a miserable, double-faced scoundrel!"

She looks up at his for a moment and her lips frame a "N!"

"A man who ought to be—be shot, and would have been if he had lived fifty years ago, and I wish to heaven we were fifty years back. I would shoot him like a dog!"

"Your promise, remember your promise!" she whispers, taking his hand. "And—and Bob, dear, don't say a word things about him."

"Hard things!" he repeats, with suppressed indignation. "Perhaps you don't know all Paula!"

"I think I do," she says. "But—tell me what you know. Don't be afraid," she adds, looking up at him with a wan face. "I can bear it! I sha'n't make a scene, Bob, I never do, you know. I've had my bad half-hour, as the French say, and am quite reasonable. Tell me all, Bob?"

He is silent for a moment, puffing at his pipe furiously.

"It isn't much, my dear," he says, gently. "But that cursed letter was true—true, every word of it. I suppose he denied it. Those kind of gentry always do."

"No," she says, in a low voice. "No, he didn't deny it. I don't think he would lie to me."

"He!" he retorts bitterly. "He would do—say anything to gain his end. Paula, what I said when I first heard his name was true; he is a bad lot. Remember, he comes of a bad race. The Powises! Why, they can tell you stories a mile long about 'em at the 'Arms.'"

"I dare say," says Paula, wearily. "But what did you hear, Bob?"

"I heard—I heard all that was bad of him," he replies, with a sigh and a groan. "He is just one of the fastest of a fast set—a spendthrift and a gambler."

Control of Bronchitis

Is Undoubtedly Possessed by the Well-Known Family Medicine

DR. CHASE'S SYRUP OF LINSEED AND TURPENTINE

Turpentine is considered a specific for bronchitis.

The difficulty has been in the administration of turpentine so as to reach the irritated and inflamed parts and not be disagreeable to the patient.

Not only has the trouble been overcome by Dr. Chase in his Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine, but he has also combined with turpentine two or three ingredients of almost equal power in soothing and healing the diseased parts and overcoming bronchitis and other dangerous ailments of the bronchial tubes and lungs.

By a secret process these elements of unquestioned medicinal power have been combined in Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine so as to be pleasant to the taste and suitable for children and adults alike.

The remarkable success of Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine as a cure for bronchitis, asthma, croup and whooping cough is sufficient evidence that it is effective in ordinary coughs and colds.

MRS. RICHMOND WITHROW, Shubenacadie, Hants county, N. B., writes: "I have used Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine with good success. My second daughter was troubled with bronchitis from the age of three weeks. Oftentimes I thought she would choke to death. The several remedies we got did not seem to be of much use, but the first dose of Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine brought relief and further treatment made a thorough cure. This trouble used to come back from time to time, but the cure is now permanent. Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine has saved us many doctors' bills, and I would not be without it in the house for many times its cost."

Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine, 25 cents a bottle, at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Toronto. To protect you against imitations the portrait and signature of Dr. A. W. Chase, the famous receipt book author, are on every bottle.

ANGLICANS AND DIVORCE

Houses of Bishops and Deputies Come to an Agreement.

Boston, Oct. 24. — An agreement on the divorce question was reached today by the House of Bishops and the House of Deputies of the Episcopal General Convention, after many days of discussion. That part of the canon bearing directly on the remarriage of divorced persons, which was amended by the bishops on Saturday, assented to by the deputies today, and becomes effective at once, is as follows: "No minister, knowingly, after due inquiry, shall solemnize the marriage of any person who has been or is the husband of the wife of any other person then living, from whom he or she has been divorced for any cause arising after marriage. But this canon shall not be held to apply to the innocent party in a divorce for adultery, provided that before the application for such remarriage a period of not less than one year shall have elapsed after the granting of such divorce and that satisfactory evidence touching the facts in the case, including a copy of the court's decree and record, if practicable, with such proof that the defendant was personally served or appeared in the action be laid before the ecclesiastical authority, and such ecclesiastical authority having taken legal advice thereon, shall have declared in writing that in his judgment the case of the applicant conforms to the requirements of this canon; and provided further, that it shall be within the discretion of any minister to decline to solemnize any such marriage."

DELMAR SUCCEEDS; DAN PATCH FAILS

Two Great Turf Kings Go Against Their Own Records—Delmar Breaks Another.

Major Delmar continues on his record-breaking career. Yesterday, at Memphis, driven by Alta McDonald, he established a new world's record for unpaced trotters, when he covered a mile in 2:01¼. The previous record was 2:01¾, and was held by both Delmar and Lou Dillon. There was a cold wind blowing at the time, or the horse might have taken a larger piece from the record.

Dan Patch also went after his own record of 1:59¼ for unpaced pacers, but did not come up to it. The distance was covered in 2:00¼. The summaries of the day follow:

The Sunny South stakes, 2:13 pace, purse $2,000; 2 in 3:

CLOSING A MOST BRILLIANT SEASON

Major Delmar Lost in a Race With the Time as Slow as 2:09 3-4.

Major Delmar, the new world's champion trotter, was bought with a $40,000 check signed by his present owner with a fountain pen. It was at the Empire City track in the summer of 1903 and the mighty gelding was being prepared that morning for a flight in the afternoon against Father Time. Frederick Parks, of New York, then owned the son of Delmar, and had named $40,000 as the figure he would take for him.

For fear he might change his mind before the party could reach the city for dinner, E. E. Smathers called for a blank check and with a stroke or two of the pen the bit of paper was converted into a small fortune and the now new trotting king joined the Smathers stable.

Major Delmar figured in one of the biggest dumps known to the trotting turf in recent years. It was in the Transylvania of 1902, his first really great season on the turf. The night before the race the pooling was prodigious, tickets calling for $3,000 being common, and in these pools he sold for $600 as fast as the men could write the cards. On the track, though the field was a great one, the Delmar fever became so intense he sold for 2 to 1 over all his competitors. When he won the first heat, all the way, in 2:09½, and then brought $500 to $150 for the field. On the first turn of the second heat he made a fatal break and at the quarter pole was a distance out. Alta McDonald, his driver, used bad judgment and with this disadvantage tried to win the heat. The great trotter closed the wide gap, to the surprise of every horseman on the track, in the next half mile, but he could never quite overhaul Prince of Orange. Geers winning with the latter in 2:09¾. He was then done for two heats, but rallied again in the fifth and sixth heats, but both Ozanam, the ultimate winner of the race, and Prince of Orange each time beat him out.

It seems odd now with the world's record to his credit and Lou Dillon's scalp hanging to his belt at the close of a most brilliant season of exhibition miles, that Major Delmar could not win a race when the time was as slow as 2:09¾. It is doubtful that in his whole career, however, he ever trotted faster than when he went down the backstretch that day in the second heat of the Transylvania, slow as the mile was, to endeavor to save for his admirers the thousands of dollars they piled in the poolbox on him.

WOULD YOU HAVE A BEAUTIFUL COMPLEXION

How to Secure One and Enjoy the Best of Health is Nature's Way.

Healthy beauty is the only kind that charms. Of what avail is the sallow prettiness of an invalid? Artificial beauty obtained by the use of lotions, washes and powders containing lead, zinc and bismuth is but a travesty—easily seen through. It is the plumpness of flesh and pure blood that makes people attractive. You cannot have health, good looks, rosy cheeks and bright, snappy eyes unless your blood is pure, rich and red. You cannot have that symmetry of development, that radiance of beauty and that healthy glow to your skin which is a guarantee of a pure, vigorous blood supply unless your stomach, liver and bowels are working together right. If you are constipated, if you have dyspepsia indigestion or an occasional attack of biliousness, there is reason enough why you have a bad complexion, but that is no excuse for your using cosmetics to cover up defects. Better use Smith's Pineapple and Butternut Pills to cleanse the blood of impurities, regulate the bowels and establish a normal condition of digestion and nutrition. Begin right and you will have no use for artificial beautifiers. Under the active influence of these wonderful little vegetable pills the blood is invigorated and enriched, the nerves are strengthened, the muscles take on new energy, the skin becomes rosy and red, showing the circulation is normal and active as Nature intended it should be. Try this plan, use Smith's Pineapple and Butternut Pills each night for two weeks and you will be astonished at the improvement. Depend upon it that these little pills will not only correct a bad complexion, but they always cure sick headache, constipation and biliousness in one night. Price 25 cents at all dealers.

LIPTON HAS HIS HOPES AND FEARS

Cannot Secure Watson as Designer, But He Still Wants a Shamrock IV.

London, Oct. 24.—"The man I wanted to design the next cup challenger," said ir Sir Thomas Lipton Saturday, "is Gen. Watson, who designed Shamrock II., the boat that came nearest to winning. Watson says he could not bear the strain of going to America, as his health is indifferent. It is a serious strain on any man, as I know, and so does Watson.

"I have not given up my intention of challenging for next fall yet, but Watson failed me. I do not know where to turn. The rumor about Crossley, of the Windermere Yacht Club, designing a cup challenger for me is absurd. He never was considered. It is work only to be committed to the very ablest and most experienced British designer, and Watson has shown himself to be that man.

"I am loth to give up hope of challenging next year and may be able to do so, feeling sure the New York Yacht Club will give we every possible facility to bring about a race."

Sir Thomas Lipton entertained about 300 officers and men of the United States cruiser Olympia at the Crystal Palace Saturday. In front of each man was a presentation pipe, pouch and tobacco.

Sir Thomas toasted the American navy and said he had good reason to know the merits of American seamanship, and "also of American generosity, gauged by the number of lickings they have ladled out to me."

He expressed the hope, however, that at no distant date he would take a Shamrock IV. to America.

JABEZ WHITE AND YOUNG CORBETT MATCHED

Jabez White, the crack English lightweight, who has been seeking a match with Yankee boxers for more than a year, is going to be accommodated. Young Corbett has decided to accept the Englishman's defi and he has found backers to make the match possible.

White and his backers have all along insisted upon a side bet of $5,000 on the result of any match in which the English champion was to take part, and it was this condition that prevented some of the Yankee boxers from seeing their way clear to do business.

Corbett had confidence in his ability, and when he expressed his willingness to fight, George Considine offered to back him for any part of $10,000 against the Englishman. Charlie Mitchell, who represents White and his English backers in this country, thought that a bet of $5,000 would be enough and the match was consummated. According to the conditions the contest will be decided in the States some time next January.

FOOTBALL.

THE VICS' AWFUL BEATING.

Hamilton Spectator: "That was an awful trimming you gave London last week," remarked the manager of the Victoria football team to Captain Dave McKeand, of the Tigers, when the Toronto kickers arrived at the cricket grounds on Saturday afternoon. But what happened to the London team wasn't a circumstance to the walloping the Tigers administered to the Torontonians during the two hours following. They simply ate 'em alive. When the slaughter was over Referee Max Yates, of 'Varsity, announced that the score was 80 to 2 in the local team's favor, but in doing so he admitted that the Tigers scored tries, rouges and safety touches in such rapid succession that he might possibly have overlooked a few of them. However, there was no person about who evinced a desire to argue the matter with him. Even the most enthusiastic of the Tigers' supporters were satisfied with the score of 80 to 2, and if the visitors' defeat was any more decisive than that they didn't want to know it.

Hay Fever Cured,

Never to Return, by Japanese Catarrh Cure.

Yes, we know that you have tried hundreds of remedies and physicians without success. But you have not used Japanese Catarrh Cure. Remember that the telegraph, typewriter, electric lights and automobiles were "impossibilities" until proven realities. Japanese Catarrh Cure is the only known cure for hay fever. It kills the germs and forever eradicates the disease from the system. The first treatment brings relief, the sneezing stops, the burning pain in the nostrils is soothed, the eyes stop aching, and you will enjoy a night's sleep in comfort.

Dr. R. S. Wilson, New York, says:—Japanese Catarrh Cure has met with the highest endorsement of the medical profession for the only reason that ever wins such endorsement, its distinct and proven value."

—TO THE—
ST. LOUIS WORLD'S FAIR
—OVER THE—Wabash Line.

The World's Fair is a grand success. In all probability none now living will see anything of its character approaching it in grandeur and magnitude, and the great Wabash is the best route to go by, because it saves many hours of travel and lands passengers right at the main entrance World's Fair grounds, before going to Union Depot. Excursion tickets on sale daily until Dec. 1. Passengers leaving London on evening trains arrive at World's Fair grounds next day at noon. For timetables, descriptive folder, address J. A. RICHARDSON, district passenger agent, northwest corner King and Yonge streets, Toronto.
