To Clean Buckskin Gloves, and Breeches, &c.—Take six pounds of the finest whitening powdered very small, put it into a tub, add to it five gallons of cold water, let it remain two or three days, stirring it occasionally. Take six ounces of gum dragon, and put it into four quarts of boiling water and cover it up close for two or three days; when the gum is well dissolved take a fine sieve and strain it into the whitening, which must be well stirred at the time, take half-an-ounce of stone blue, and dissolve it well with the colouring, this gives it a clear gloss, let it remain a day longer and it will be fit for use. The gloves, &c., must be placed on stretchers and any very dirty spots washed with warm water, then the preparation applied evenly and lightly with a brush; be careful that it is not too very fine, and that it is quite free from lump.

Chinese Army going into Action.—The following extract from the instructions of the Council of the Celestial Empire, to the generals commanding their armies, has, we believe, never been published in this country:—"Take notice of this in particular; you have to deal with people who wear breeches so tight that when once the soldiers fall, they cannot get themselves up again. Your first endeavour must be to throw them down. Paint your faces as fantastically as you can, and when you approach the enemy shout out and make the most hideous noises and grimaces possible to frighten and make them tumble down. When prostrate they are at your mercy."

A New Discovery.—Some attention has been excited by the alleged discovery, by an engineer of some celebrity, named Andrand, of the means of seeing the air. If, he says, you take a piece of card coloured black, of the size of the eye, and pierce with a fine needle a hole in the middle, you will, on looking through that hole, at a clear sky, or a lighted lamp, see a multitude of molecules floating about, which molecules constitute the air. We shall see whether the theory shall obtain the sanction of the Academy of Sciences, to which it has been submitted.

A delicate distinction.—The consistory of the Lutheran Church in Prussia has just prescribed to the clergy that in marrying a pair who have been notoriously living together previously, in an unlicensed intimacy, they shall not employ the word jungfrau, which is frequently taken to mean "virgin," and which is the word given in the formulary used on such occasions, but shall substitute for it a word signifying the "betrothed female," or "the future wife." The application of this rule, it is apprehended, will in some cases be found rather inconvenient; and people are the more dissatisfied with it, because an exception is to be made in favour of brides of noble birth, who are to be designated fraulein, a word which signifies "young lady," and which has no other meaning.

Hair Powder.—The consumption of hair powder by the soldiers of George the Second was something enormous. It was calculated that, inasmuch as the military force of England and colonies was, including cavalry, infantry, militia and fencibles, 250,000, and each man used a pound of flour per week; the quantity used in this way was 6,500 tons per annum: capable of sustaining 50,000 persons on bread, and producing 3,059,351 quartern loaves.

Nicknames of American States.—New York is the Empire State, Massachusetts, the Bay State, Steady Habits; Rhode Island, Banners State, or Green Mountain Boys, called also Little Rhody; Vermont, Plantation; New Hampshire, the Granite State; Connecticut, Freestone State; Maine, Lumber State. The Yankee States.——Pensylvania, the Keystone State; New Jersy, the Jersy (pronounced Jarsy) Blues; Maryland, Monumental; Virginia, the Old Dominion; North Carolina, Rip Van Winkle; South Carolina, the Palmetto State; Delaware, Little Deleware; Georgia, Pine State; Ohio, the Buckeyes; Kentucky, the Corn Crackers; Alabama, Alabama; Tennessee, the Lion's Den or Red Horses; Missouri, the Parkes or Pakes; Illinois, the Suckers; Indiana, the Hoosiers; Michigan the Wolvermes; Arkansas, the Toothpickers, and the Bear State; Lousiana, the Creole State; Mississippi, the Border Beagles, or Swellerheads; Wisconsin, the Badgers.

To make Blacking.—Put one pound of ivory-black into a pan, add three-pennyworths of spermacetti oil, mixing them well, then add two-pennyworths of treacle, and after that two pints and-a-half of vinegar. When it has stood two hours skim off the thick matter, and carefully add three-pennyworths of vitriol, pouring it down the sides of the pan.

Terrible Explosion.—Saltillo, Mexico, has been the scene of a disaster, causing the loss of a number of lives. "The powder and other munitions of war that had been deposited in the City Hall, by some means unknown caught fire, and with an awful explosion blew up the building, burying in its ruins over fifty persons. Among the victims were several highly respectable persons belonging to Saltillo."
