UNDER THE SEMAPHORE

Double-tracking the Michigan Central—July Earnings of American Roads.

The M. C. R. will be double-tracked from Niagara to Detroit in time for the World's Fair at Chicago in 1892. The work is being pushed forward very fast.

Mr. Van Horne says he does not anticipate much trouble with the United States. They are not the kind of people to smash a dollar class of their neighbors while they have a tenpenny class of their own exposed.

Bradstreet's report says of July was an month of moderate gain in railway earnings when the large increase last spring are considered. The percentage of gain is slightly larger than that for June. The earnings of 125 railroads, for July, aggregate $20,752,[illegible] an increase over July, 1889, of 8.69 per cent.

Mr. Geo. Stovel, railway contractor, Calgary and Edmonton Railway, now in Winnipeg, states that 28 miles of road is graded and finished ready for track laying. Culverts will have to be put in every mile or two. One hundred and fifty miles have to be graded this fall and track laid to Red Deer.

Officials of the N. P. and M. R. railway connection with Portage la Prairie, shippers in the east in Manitoba, have been astonished to find that the road has been discriminated against by the Manitoba and Northwestern railway, and that local rates had been charged on freight consigned by the N. P. and M. R., whereas through rates were granted when shippers consigned via the C. P. R. and M. and N. W. R. The Winnipeg Board of Trade has forwarded letters of protest against such action to Premier Greenway and Sir John Macdonald.

VOICES OF THE PEOPLE.

C. P. R. Time to Chatham.

To the Editor of the ADVERTISER:

As there is a difference of opinion among several of those who went to Detroit on the C. P. R. complimentary excursion to the civic corporations and Board of Trade regarding the time made on the run to Chatham from this city, you would greatly oblige a subscriber by publishing in your valuable columns the actual running time made on that trip. By actual running time I do not include the time lost for stoppage.

ROBERT ALEXANDER.

London, Aug. 16.

[NOTE.—Three stops were made on the run to Chatham—Komoka, Ft. G. T. R. crossing, Komoka, and Appin—the time at these points is estimated at twelve minutes, which would leave the actual running time one hour and eight minutes. The distance from Chatham to London is 55 miles.—EDITOR ADVERTISER.]

Sarnia's View.

[From the Sarnia Observer].

The London Free Press was for years in the habit of making political capital for Mr. Carling's benefit out of the location of the annual drill camp for the militia in Lambton. It claimed being that to Mr. Carling's influence, rather than to London's merits, was due the selection of that city for the camp. But Stratford has twice of late snatched away the plum and now Windsor said to have demanded a turn. The Carling influence is no longer paraded by the Free Press, as the all powerful lever at military headquarters, but instead, the Free Press has been exerting itself to neutralize London's successful rivals. Nothing was too mean or too absurd to apply to Stratford as a camp site, and to damn Windsor's prospects it recently gave editorial prominence to the following unfounded bugaboos:

Windsor is not exactly suitable for a military camp. First, the grounds are no better than at Stratford, and secondly it is undesirable that our militia force should be brought so directly in contact with the border populations, the constant interchange of familiarities there might possibly at some time ensue that quality of temper which familiarity is said to bring, resulting in riotous and disastrous which would be provoking in view of the amicable relations and good neighborhood which is the evident desire and prudent policy of both peoples to promote.

All of which will be read with broad smiles of incredulity by the border populations. A militia drill camp, more than double in size and numbers any ever held in London, was located in Windsor about fifteen years ago, when the friction between the border populations, arising out of the American war and Fenian raids was greater than it is now. There was then a plentiful exchange of familiarities between the border populations, and no resulting displays of loss of temper or good opinion occurred, such as the Free Press alleges would surely follow the presence of our volunteers on the frontier. The same might also be said of Sarnia, where the drill camp was twice located. Though Windsor and Sarnia were not well provided with water in those days, they are now in position to meet all the demands of a military camp with that necessary commodity, so that no complaint on that score need be feared.

We have always contended that the principle of rotation, which formed a feature of the militia camps when they were first introduced after the Fenian raids, is the proper one from a military standpoint, and that the points selected should be those on the frontier most likely to become points of attack, and the strategic points in the interior, which would form bases for supplies and supports. The lessons of the country and their military value and importance would be by means of these camps become familiar to officers and men, an advantage of first importance should the necessity ever arise for putting the knowledge so acquired to practical use. It was largely with this object in view that the annual camps were called into existence, the Fenian raid experiences showing that there was a grave lack of knowledge on the part of our military officers on the frontier.

The claim set up by London that because land for the purpose was purchased there from Mr. Carling the camp should be held there permanently, is not a good one from a military standpoint, and its other claims that all other likely places are inferior on frontier towns, totally unfit for camp purposes, are exceeding selfish, unfair and untruthful.

All men are everlastingly grinding some axe or another, but among them it is fearfully singular few ever get hold of the axe used for splitting the kindling wood.

Nothing impure or injurious contaminates the popular antidote to pain, throat and lung remedy, Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil. It may be used without the slightest apprehension of any other than sanitary consequences. Coughs, rheumatism, scrapes, bruises, cuts and sores succumb to its action.

"Will you love me when I'm old?" sang a maiden of uncertain age. "Will I?" murmured a crusty old bachelor. "Do I, moon?"

No medicine in the world is in better repute or more widely known than Ayer's Sarsaparilla. As a safe and certain remedy for all impurities of the blood, it is unsurpassed. Druggists everywhere recommend it, in preference to any other.
