HEARING CASE OF REED-SMOOT

Witness Owns to Three Wives and Thirty-Two Children—Judicial System of the Church.

Washington Dec. 19.—The hearing in the case of Reed Smoot, the Senator from Utah, whose expulsion from the Senate in sought on the ground of his Mormon connections, were resumed before the Senate Committee on Privileges and Elections.

Dr. J. M. Buckley, editor of the Christian Advocate of New York testified that during the forty-six years of his ministry he had devoted much attention to Mormonism.

"Thirty-five years ago I visied Utah," he said, "and saw Brigham Young in all his glory, and heard Orson Pratt deliver a sermon, so called, on the difference between Mormonism and Christianity. I delivered a sermon there on the difference between Christianity and Mormonism. I was entertained by a Mormon who had three wives, who expounded to me the whole creed. I met historian George Smith, who took me for a possible convert, and told me all about it. In 1901 I went to Salt Lake again, and last June I went again and attended a meeting in the Tabernacle.

Dr. Buckley said that President Joseph Smith presided at this meeting, which was a gathering of the young women of the Mormon Church.

Mr. Taylor asked what President Smith said at this meeting regarding polygamous cohabitation.

Dr. Buckley replied by reading extracts from letters he wrote at the time referring to the Mormon president's speech. "He intimated that God was both male and female," said Dr. Buckley, "and insisted that marriage was not only for this world but for eternity. He also spoke of frequent divorces, and declared that they could not exist in Zion with impunity.

"He alluded to the mothers of his children and thanked them for what they had done to him. He rebuked those who joke about mothers-in-law. A change took place in his manner and his voice rang out as clear as that of William J. Bryan. (Laughter.) He declared with great emphasis that he would not shrink from exile or imprisonment rather than put away his wives. He concluded by declaring that Mormonism was not a system of adultry, but a system of marriage, and warned his hearers to beware of adultry."

Q. Now, how about Mr. Smoot? A. I asked everywhere about him, and neither in California nor Utah nor anywhere else did I hear of any person who claimed that Mr. Smoot had more than one wife or had lived with any woman not his wife. He was everywhere spoken of in the highest terms.

George Reynolds was sworn. He is a Mormon living at Salt Lake City and is one of the first presidents of Seventies and first assistant superintendent of Sunday schools. He is also secretary of the missionary committee of the Apostles. His time is wholly occupied by church duties.

Q. (By Mr. Overman.) Do you baptize and marry people after they are dead? A. Yes, sir, by proxy. There is a form of baptism and marriage for those who are dead.

Q. (By Mr. Foraker). Are divorces granted from dead persons? A. I have known a very few cases where a living wife has asked to be divorced from a dead husband and has been granted a divorce.

Q. Have there been any cases where husbands have applied for divorces from wives who are deceased? A. Never to my knowledge.

Q.—Is that divorce granted on account of something he has done during his lifetime? A.—Yes.

The witness testified that notices of the desire of dead persons to be baptized were sometimes received in visions and dreams. Sometimes the dead were vicariously baptized on request of relatives who knew the deceased had not had the advantages of communion with the church.

Mr. Tayler produced the "Book of Discourses," containing sermons by Brigham Young. The witness had just testified that these discourses were read much less than they should be. Mr. Tayler read an extract from a sermon by Brigham Young declaring that his wives must "round up their shoulders to endure their burdens or leave. I gave them till Oct. 1 to decide."

Q.—Do you regard that as evidence of Brigham Young's power to divorce his wives? A.—I think that was a personal statement. He was annoyed and didn't mean what he said.

Q.—What did he mean by this sentence: "I will set them all free—even my first wife"? A.—I don't think he meant that.

Q.—Where did the president of the church get the authority to loose on earth—from the same authority that gives him power to bind? A.—Exactly.

Reynolds said his legal wife was dead and that he had two wives living. He had 26 children living out of 32 his three wives had borne him. Three of the seven presidents of the seventies were polygamists, he said. He understood the Woodruff manifesto to mean that all marriages already entered into should continue, but that there should be no more plural marriages. He had children by both wives since 1890. He had a daughter living in polygamy.

Under cross-examination by Mr. Worthington, representing Senator Smoot, the witness said that in Utah and elsewhere in the United States, plural marriages had been stopped. He had come to the conclusion that the intention of the president of the Mormon Church was to cover the whole world, and since then there had been no plural marriages with the consent of the church.

Mr. McComas asked if polygamy had continued in the church since the Woodruff manifesto. He said he knew of no plural marriages since the manifesto except that of his daughter.

Mr. McComas brought out that the witness had helped write the Woodruff manifesto.

Chairman Burrows asked the witness if he understood that the manifesto was inspired, and getting an affirmative response followed it up with this question:

"But you changed it?"

"Just to make corrections in the grammar and phraseology," said Mr. Reynolds.

"You mean to say," asked Senator Burrows, "that the grammar of the Lord Almighty was bad and you corrected the grammar of the Lord Almighty in an inspired communication?"

This caused a titter.

"We understood that it was an inspiration of the Lord to President Woodruff," answered the witness. "We did not understand that the phraseology had been inspired—merely the revelation, which was put into words."

Reynolds went on to describe the judicial system of the Mormon Church. The counsel for the church attempted to interpose here, but the witness was directed to continue. He told of a complete court system inside the church, having cognizance of private wrongs and the enforcement of justice between belligerents. The courts in a general way are composed of the ruling officials of the church.

Mr. Tayler read a judgment of one of the bishops' court directing one of the parties to deed a piece of land to the other party. He read also a judgment of excommunication after a contumacious litigant had refused to carry out the judgment of the court. A letter was also read urging a litigant to obey the mandate of Joseph F. Smith, president of the church, as the "mouthpiece" of God, under penalty of "destruction" and "misery here and hereafter."

This letter was sent by a president of a stake to a member of the church.

John Henry Hamlin, of Salt Lake City, was sworn. He is a brother of Lilian Hamlin, who was alleged to have been married to Apostle Abram Cannon, a polygamist, in 1896. The marriage was said to have been solemnized by President Joseph F. Smith on a vessel between Los Angeles and Catalina Island, Cal. Hamlin said he had proof that President Smith performed the ceremony, but that it was familiar talk. When Cannon died Lilian attended the funeral. Her child inherits the property of the Cannon estate.

Hamlin admitted that he had five sisters, and knew where they all were, with the exception of Lilian. He did not know whether she was in Canada or Mexico.

Q.—By Mr. Tayler—You have heard that she was married again to another Cannon.

A.—Yes, sir.

The committee at this point adjourned until morning.

Council Abolishes the Fees System in London

City Clerk Baker's Salary Placed at $1,500 Straight—Dundas Street Sewer Again.

The end of the fees system in the paying of civic salaries in London was reached last night, when the city council fixed the salary of City Clerk Baker at $1,500 per annum, and cut out all fees. In the past, the clerk has been paid a fixed amount and also the fees for the registration of births, marriages and deaths, the fees usually amounting to about $400 per annum.

Many of the aldermen expressed themselves plainly on the matter of fees, and Ald. Cooper stated that when the "fees business" went through it was put through in a queer way. He declared that in fact the former city clerk, Mr. C. A. Kingston, had secured the fees through misrepresentation.

"When Mr. Kingston came before the council and secured the fees," said Ald. Cooper, "he led us to believe that the Government would pay them, and I never knew this was not the case until the present time."

Others of the aldermen were also greatly surprised to learn that the city and not the Ontario Government paid these fees to the city clerk.

Ald. Judd drew attention to the fact that a bylaw is in existence against the paying of fees to civic officials. The city has been paying these fees illegally to the city clerk. This settled the matter and the recommendation of No. 1 that the clerk be paid a straight salary without fees was adopted.

Dundas Street Sewer.

Ald. Stevely again brought up the matter of the Dundas street sewer, and renewed his fight for its reconstruction out of the general funds of the city.

The sixth clause of No. 2 committee's report read: "In the matter of the Dundas street sewer, your committee recommends that provided the ratepayers petition within three months, for reconstruction of said sewer, between Wellington and Adelaide streets, as a local improvement, that the city pay half cost of the work. The ratepayers of said street to be notified to that effect."

Ald. Stevely declared that this was not satisfactory. The sewer was no good from the first day it was laid, and the city should rebuild it now. The people paid for it in good faith, and the city was in duty bound to put it in proper shape, even if it is necessary to reconstruct it.

Ald. Greenlees, seconded by Ald. Greer, then moved in amendment, that the section between Adelaide and Colborne street be constructed out of the general funds. This amendment was based on the report of the engineer which shows that as this portion of the sewer is not yet paid for, the city must keep it in repair, and this will cost almost as much as reconstruction.

Ald. Forristal made what he evidently considered a point. He said he was surprised to see Ald. Greenlees and Stevely favoring the expenditure of more money on sewers, while The Advertiser is calling the attention of the public to the extravagance of the council and the big overdraft of No. 2 committee.

Ald. Stevely replied that certain aldermen had made the statement that the city has money to burn and he knew of no place it could be spent to better advantage than on the Dundas street sewer.

This was a poser for Ald. Forristal, and a laugh went around the council board.

Finally a vote was taken on the matter, and Ald. Greenlees' amendment was defeated by a vote of 7 to 5. By a similar vote the clause of the committee was carried.

The Roberton Case.

Ex-Fireman Frank Roberton sent in a communication to the council, praying that the city pay him an amount of money sufficient to keep himself and his family until he is able to go back to work on the brigade. He stated that the sum of $500 offered him by the city in full for injuries he received in the Sterling fire is altogether inadequate. He is now practically helpless as a result of the accident, and is without any means of support whatever.

A wrangle followed the reading of the communication, but finally it was decided to refer the letter to No. 3 committee, and in the meantime the city will have both Roberton and Swanwick thoroughly examined, and hope then to know exactly what the injured firemen are entitled to from the city.

The Breakwater.

Ald. Forristal, chairman of the breakwater committee, made a strong plea for the proposal to construct a permanent wall to protect West London from floods. He proved that it will be money in the city's pocket to build the wall. For the past three years the repairs to the breakwater have averaged $1,410 a year, and the breakwater is no better for it. If the city issued $15,000 debentures to meet the cost of building a permanent wall, the interest and sinking fund would total $1,130 a year for 20 years, or $280 a year less than the unsatisfactory repairs now cost each year. The assessment of West London now totals $460,000, but if the wall was built, Ald. Forristal declared the assessment could easily be increased 20 per cent, or $92,000. At 22 mills on the dollar, this $92,000 would being in about $1,980, or $870 more than the sinking fund and interest on the amount of debentures the city proposes to issue.

"It is a pure and simple business matter," said Ald. Forristal," and I hope the citizens will see it in the proper light, and will vote for the bylaw. I also hope that every man who is offering himself for a candidate for any office will do all in his power to carry this bylaw, as it will not only prove a good thing for West London, but for the entire city as well."

A communication was read from Mr. J. A. Nelles, secretary of the Western Fair Association, stating that the bylaw framed by the city council re the extending of the lease of Queen's Park to the association had not reached the fair board in time for that body to pass upon it intelligently within the period of 20 days stipulated in the bylaw, and he asked the council to extend the time so that the board might be given an opportunity of legally accepting it.

City Solicitor Meredith stated in a communication, however, that inasmuch as the fair board had not accepted the city's agreement within the time stipulated in the bylaw, the agreement is now null and void, and it will be necessary to draw up a new bylaw and have the council pass upon it and send it to the fair board. The matter had come up before No. 1 committee last Friday night, and that body had recommended that the council passed a bylaw in accordance with the fair board's wishes based on the agreement of last August, but as the bylaw had not been prepared by the city solicitor, action was necessarily deferred until the next meeting of the council.

John Hyatt and others petitioned for a cement walk and curb and gutter on the east and west sides of Hyatt avenue from Hill to Grey streets.

The council also passed a bylaw amending the bylaw passed some time ago, which named the polling subdivisions, the four new polling places: Subdivision No. 2, ward 1, at Jane Nichol's house, 266 King street; No. 3, ward 2, at H. Colerick's store, 456 Richmond street; No. 4, ward 2, at William Smith's house, 565 Richmond street; No. 8, ward 2, at Mrs. F. I. Andrew's house, 70 Dundas street, West London.

Mayor Beck and all the aldermen were present.

SHOULD BE BIG WEEK AT LONDON

Vaudeville Programme Is Brim-Full of Good Acts—"The Best Yet Seen."

"The best vaudeville show ever seen in London," must have been the verdict of those qualified to speak who attended the London Vaudeville Theater last night, for the performance is without doubt the most pleasing yet produced. Nearly every act could be paraded successfully as a head-liner.

It is a "toss-up" between two acts to decide which is the best on the list. The acts of Melville and Azelle in "Jack the Hugger," and the York-Herbert trio, in a comedy acrobatic sketch, are the features of the show. Miss Azelle is a graceful dancer and has a delightfully fetching manner. Melville is a clever lightning sketch artist, and the act is built up with bright dialogue.

The York-Herbert trio have an eccentric and mirth-provoking piece. A burlesque of modern drama is given, and the audience takes up a laughing acquaintance with these clever artists from the start. Besides presenting an act replete with bright lines, they introduce a series of clever acrobatic feats, which make a lively climax to a well-played, legitimate vaudeville sketch.

Alf Holt fills the part of the mimic, whister and imitator, in a manner which makes him shake hands with each individual in the house. He is a whimsical sort of a fellow, and you laugh with him—more than at him. He imitates everything from the town-clock to the town dog-fight, and he is as good imitating one as he is the other. He is one of the best one-man acts ever seen here.

Marvell and Gleason are pleasing in "Brother Tom's Friend," and the audience likes them in a minute. Before they go off the stage, they are shaking hands with their friends on the other side of the footlights, and it is their ability to do this that win them this special attention.

Billy Andrus and his mule—"and her name was Maud"—wind up the show, and it is fitting as a closer. This funny-matched couple are second-growth hickory. They will prove a drawing card, especially for the children, and the matinees of the week should be crowded.

Arthur Barrett, a young artist, sings fairly well and does some clever whistling.

The kinetograph pictures are up to the mark this week: "Chased by Bloodhounds," is the feature of the series.

Adrian Adair sang "In the Valley by the Sea" in good voice, and he received a liberal share of applause.

"THE DIVORCED WIFE"

Stirring Melodrama and High-Class Specialties at the Grand.

"The Divorced Wife," a powerful and stirring comedy-drama, was presented at the Grand last night by the Jeavons Stock Company. The impression made upon the large and appreciative audience was an excellent one, both as to play and players. The piece is of that type of drama which gives large scope to the emotional actress, and Miss Jeavons, who heads the company, takes full advantage of a number of strong situations and scenes. Mr. Thomas Hoffman is leading man, and brings to his personation of the hero a fine presence and a method at once artistic and vigorous. The company gives excellent support to Miss Jeavons and Mr. Hoffman, being a well-balanced and thoroughly-trained organization. Between the acts a number of high-class vaudeville acts were introduced, notable among these being a high wire performance by the "Great Robetta," and the singing of Mr. H. T. Vickery, who possesses a baritone voice of great range and sweetness. The juggling feats of Prof. La Rose were also of exceptional merit. "Brother Against Brother," one of the melodramatic successes of the English and Amerjcan stage, will be put on tonight. Entirely new vaudeville will also be presented.
