Weather favored the curlers last night and the preliminary round of the bonspiel for the Walker Vase was played off in good shape, 25 matches being played, only one going by default. They were well divided among the different city rinks, and in all cases the ice was in splendid condition. Most of the games were fairly close and at the western rink R. B. Rice and Dr. Lesslie had to play an extra end. The biggest surprise of the evening was the defeat of the champion rink, as E. A. Badenach was beaten by T. Edmunds of Toronto by 4 shots. The match was well fought out and up to the last few ends it was any one's game.

The table at the top shows the number of rinks entered, knocked out and left in the race. All the scores:

FIERCE FIGHT, M'COY WON

Choynski Had Him Going in Second Round, But Went Out Himself in Third.

CLAIM OF FOUL NOT ALLOWED

Crescent A. C. Matches Mahoney and Dugan, 20 Rounds at 145 Pounds, for Jan. 27.

New York, Jan. 12.—At the Broadway A. C. to-night, Kid McKoy got the decision over Joe Choynski, in a bout which lasted three rounds. Choynski should have had the fight in the second round, were it not for an accident as to time keeping. In that round he floored the Kid four times, but the time keeper pulled the bell as McCoy was counted for the limit of ten seconds, and this saved the Kid from absolute defeat. Choynski's seconds protested vigorously, but Referee Johnny White, while knowing that the round was short by many seconds, stood by the official time keeper and ordered the men to continue when the gong rang again for the opening of the third round.

Choynski's cleverness outshadowed all of McCoy's clever ring work in that second round, and were it not for the unfortunate mistake of Choynski's own time keeper, the Californian would have received the decision.

Col. Mike Padden, who was time keeper for McCoy, said afterwards that the round was clipped by 40 seconds. McCoy was groggy and practically out when the gong rang and the bell saved the Ohio man certain defeat.

Choynski, while feeling rather sore, exonerated White, the referee, from all blame. "I had him licked good and sure," said Choynski, "and had the time keeper acted right I had McCoy out. However, I am satisfied that nothing was done by either the referee or official time keeper with the intention of doing me a wrong. It was an unfortunate thing that the time should have been miscalculated, as I had won and won cleverly."

After the bout Choynski and McCoy signed articles to meet again under the same conditions, the bout to take place at the Broadway A. C. on Feb. 20.

McCoy having escaped defeat in the second round was again lucky in the third, as the blow with which he sent Choynski down and out was delivered almost two seconds after the bell had rung for the completion of the third round. There was a great deal of noise in the building at the time the gong sounded, and undoubtedly neither man heard the clang of the bell.

In the northeastern portion of the building there was a tumult caused by one of the spectators dropping dead. The bout by rounds follows:

Round 1—McCoy was first to land with a left hook on the jaw. Joe broke away and McCoy forced him to his corner, where Choynski slipped to the floor. The Californian jumped up quickly and placed a left swing on McCoy's jaw, but the Kid sent back a couple of hard lefts on the face and a stiff right over the heart. McCoy had all the better of the round.

Round 2—When they clashed, Choynski sent the Kid to the floor with a right on the jaw. McCoy took nine seconds of the count, and when he got up Choynski sent him down again with a left on the mark. Twice more McCoy was floored, and he went to his corner bleeding badly from the nose and mouth.

Round 3—McCoy fought like a crazy man, when he rushed out of his corner, and Choynski was equally as erratic. They set all ring rules at defiance, but McCoy got the better of the Western man at close quarters. Choynski rushed McCoy, but the Kid was too spry on his feet, and Joe slipped to the floor in a vain attempt to land a swing. When Joe got up he ran into a clinch, from which the referee had to separate the men. Then Choynski landed a right swing on the jaw, and McCoy went down, taking nearly seven seconds of the count. When McCoy got up Choynski rushed at him, but his legs gave way, and he fell to the floor, but he regained his feet in an instant. McCoy was queer in his leg movement, but went in and mixed it up.

In a hot rally, McCoy hooked his right to the jaw. Choynski landed his left at the same moment, and both men went down. Just as they got up the men rushed at each other, and the bell rang while they were mixing things up in lively fashion. Neither man evidently heard the gong, and McCoy whipped his right over on the jaw, and Choynski fell. There were wild cries of "Foul! Foul!" as Choynski was carried to his corner, and the Californian was unable to respond when the bell called him for the fourth.

Choynski was out and had not an ounce of fight left in him. Choynski's seconds threw up the sponge as McCoy rushed from his corner for the opening of the fourth, but Choynski was still in dreamland, and McCoy was declared the winner.

McCoy was a prohibitive favorite in the betting. A few wagers were made at odds of 100 to 30, but there were many offers refused at 100 to 25.

Danny Duane and George Jansen, both of this city, met in the preliminary, and Duane stopped Jansen in less than two minutes in the first round. The brevity of this bout induced the management to put on another, and, as Duane was in such good shape, he was pitted against Jim McKeever for a six-round go at catch-weights. Duane had his hands full in his second bout, as McKeever gave him a hard battle, and what looked to be a good draw was changed to a decision in favor of Duane by Referee Johnny White. The referee's decision was roundly hissed.

Welterweights Matched.

The Crescent Athletic Club has matched Tom Dugan of Australia to meet Young Mahoney of Philadelphia in the star bout of 20 rounds at the Bijou Theatre the night of Jan. 27. Mahoney is one of the best known men in the ring to-day at his weight, and the club believes it has secured a man who is likely to lower his colors. Dugan is under the management of Mike Campbell of Chicago, who always delivers the right kind of goods, and he writes that he is confident that his man will beat the Quaker city boxer. Dugan has been fighting bigger men than himself all his life time, and his terms with Campbell were for no matches above 145 lbs., at which limit he meets Mahoney. Dugan's latest fight was with Kid McCoy last summer at Davenport, Iowa, and that he received a beating goes without saying, Dugan being 15 lbs. heavier than Mahoney. Dugan is now training in Chicago, and two more weeks will get him in perfect shape for the contest of all fighters in Philadelphia.

After a draw with Harry Long, champion of Australia, and defeating the following men, Dugan came to America: Dan Lowry, Dan Dougherty, Tom Allen, Joe Allen, Lene Lewis, Harry Weldon, Starlight, Frank Jennings and Frank Boyd (heavyweight). His only defeats are by the middleweights, Kid McCoy and Frank Craig. The Cooler secured the decision over Dugan after 12 rounds in '96. His victories were as follows:

How John L. Became a Fighter.

Baseball was not so much the topic of conversation about the offices of the magnates yesterday as was fight. A discussion of the McGovern-Dixon battle Tuesday night led to talks of other fighters and other days, and, as usual in any discussion of fighters, the name of John L. Sullivan was the figure about which many interesting tales were hung. According to President James A. Hart of the Chicago Ball Club, it was baseball that led to Sullivan's entering the ring, in the following manner:

"As a boy in Boston," said Mr. Hart, "Sullivan was an enthusiast in baseball, and, as a matter of fact, he always has been a red-hot-to-wool fan. Like many other boys, he lacked the means to gratify his passion for the game, and, unable to pay his way into the grounds, had to be content to lounge around a hole in the fence.

"There used to be a great deal of rivalry among the boys as to who could get the best holes through which to see the games, and now and then bitter fights were waged for their possession. In these scraps Sullivan usually managed to hold his own. One day a new boy—a strapping, strong fellow, bigger than Sullivan—came along and defied the young Sullivan's point of vantage. The result was a regular pitched battle, bare fists, any old rules and an entire street for a ring. Finally Sullivan delivered the first knockout blow of his career, and went back to occupy his place at the fence undisturbed.

"John L. gained some little fame among the boxing clubs for his battle for the hole, and was taken up by some of the Boston fighters. He did a little sparring until he was accounted quite a likely fellow. A little later a benefit was to be given for Joe Goss, and Sullivan was proposed as a good man to pit against him. Goss had been considered one of the best men of his day, and it was thought he would have an easy time of it with the untried Sullivan. John L. went in with such good-will that he practically had Goss out in the second round, and from that time on his reputation began to grow."

"Yes, Sullivan was a great admirer of baseball," put in Fred Pfeffer, who had dropped in to say "Good-afternoon" to President Hart. "He never missed a game if he could help it, and always sat in the bleachers. He liked to be with baseball men, and was especially fond of 'King' Kelly. These two were great chums, and Kelly seconded John L. in one of his first fights. At this time he was a big, rangy fellow, strong, and a first-rate athlete. Ed Williamson was probably the fastest runner of the baseball men of his day, and yet I once saw Sullivan beat him out in a 100-yard race run at New Orleans. Sullivan was the biggest-hearted man I ever knew, and I never heard of him doing an injury to any person."—Chicago Record.

McCoy had a method in his madness when he quibbled about the gloves. He knew it was cold in the ring; therefore he steamed his feet before he went in, and then he started an argument so that Maher would have time to get chilblains. It worked all right.
