With block and tackle borrowed from the neighboring monumental works, he was hoisted out and promptly removed to the Montana House, where he changed his briny duds for drier ones without the aid of a physician. At least this is the story of one of the the rescuers. He is on deck to-day as large as life, but more careful than before.

THE MARKETS.

(Via L. J. Atwater's Private Wire.)

Chicago, April 22.—Wheat market ruled firm early and prices advanced 1 1-8c. per bu. over last night's closing on favorable advices from abroad. Liverpool market showed a decline of only 1-2d in spite of our weak close last night, and reported very good consumptive demand. Continental markets were generally unchanged, with exception of Paris, which was strong on unfavorable weather for growing crops. On the advance, there was heavy selling by local bears, which proved too much for the market, and prices broke 1 1-2c. per bu. from the highest point, and at the time of writing are rather heavy. Receipts at the N. W. 307 cars against 371 last week, and 287 a year ago.

Trade has been fairly large all day, with local bears in control of market. Legitimate position of wheat is strong and we look for a continuance of cash demand. Our Liverpool friends cable us their receipts likely to fall off, and this fact alone should stimulate their market. There is no country outside of America, except Russia, where Europe can buy her supplies, and this country has only limited amount to spare.

Corn and oats ruled dull and heavy all day with only limited demand and light trade. Cash demand for corn slack, but there was fair inquiry for oats. We look for coarse grains to go lower.

Provisioned opened easier in spite of strong hogs, and light receipts but there was steady pressure to sell lard. We look for no special weakness. Believe pork should be bought on soft spots.

HE BEAT THE RAILROADS.

Queer Story of a Long, Lonesome Ride to the Fight.

The Southern Pacific train that reached New Orleans a few weeks ago had on it one passenger who had taken his place in railroad history. When the great prize fight was in prospect the railroad advertised a through Pullman car for Carson City. On the starting day only one passenger showed up. He told the agent he would give it up; the railroads couldn't carry one passenger, and so he'd quit. But the agent told him the car would go through, if it went empty, and urged him to go. Accordingly he bought his ticket, which included a written contract for a through Pullman car from New Orleans to Carson City and return.

But, while the ticket agent was earnest and unanimous, the men who run the railroads were not long in discovering that it didn't pay to carry a whole car for one passenger going at excursion rates. Pretty soon the wires were busy with orders on the subject, and, at the first junction point, the traveller received notice that his car was to be dropped and he was to go into the car ahead. He declined to move. "Why," said the astonished conductor, "it's orders." But the passenger was obdurate and the car went on. At the next station the division superintendent entered and summarily ordered his man out of the car.

"We can't afford to carry you this way, and we won't," he declared.

"You can't afford not to," was the reply, "and you will."

"It'll cost us $160 just for the mileage if we do," said the superintendent.

"It'll cost you $10,000 for damages if you don't," said the passenger. "Here's my written contract, and I'm going to Carson City in this car."

There was a lot of bluffing, but the man was immovable. Conductors showed him telegraph orders directing them to cut off his car and they begged and threatened, but he sat still and he won. The car went through and it came back and this one passenger had it all to himself.

His story spread. The newspapers along the route got hold of it. Railroad men gossiped to one another, and pretty soon the car became the centre of interest. At way stations outsiders would board it; between stations passengers would go back to it. Everybody wanted to congratulate the man that could beat the Southern Pacific railroad and Pullman company.

One night, when his fame was young, he was awakened by two tall fellows standing in front of the section where he slept. He didn't like it, and thought they might be there to throw him out for the railroad.

"To what am I indebted, gentlemen," he asked, "for this midnight visit?"

"To your d—— pluck, stranger," was the reply; "shake."

And he made his way home in triumph, just because he had made a railroad stick by its contract. Several people from the east were on the train and by their accounts the affair was evidently most amusing throughout.—Hartford Courant.

"NOT EXACTLY RIGHT."

Thousands of people are in this condition. They are not sick and yet they are by no means well. A single bottle of Hood's Sarsaparilla would do them a world of good. It would tone the stomach, create an appetite, purify and enrich the blood and give wonderful vigor and vitality. Now is the time to take it.

HOOD'S PILLS cure nausea, sick headache, indigestion, biliousness. All druggists. 25c.
