But, alas, the cold fact renains that one may be a model of all the virtues, and yet be a most disagreeable individual with whom to live. Some of the best men in the world are the worst husbands. Many of the most conscientious, unselfish and self-sacrificing wives and mothers drive their husbands drink and send their children to the uttermost parts of the earth to get away from them. Few brothers and sisters ever quit fighting and get on friendly terms until they separate and go their different ways in life.

The truth is, it isn't their good qualities that make people pleasant to live with, but their little ways. education And so it behooves us all to take stock of our own personal peculiarities in order that we may correct such of them as daily and hourly afflict those with whom we live.

Let us, then, stop naggingeven the children. Let's say, a thing once and let it go, instead of harping upon it until we wear everybody's nerves to a frazzle.
