BOND PRICE FLUCTUATES

New York, Nov. 24. — Bond prices fluctuated within narrow limits in today's colorless trade selling. Selling pressure, which was directed against virtually all classes of bonds yesterday, relaxed somewhat, and a few recoveries were recorded. The market on the whole, however, merely marked time.

time.

Uncertainty over the French cabinet situation and the relief that the latest financial measures carried grave dangers of inflation led to further selling of French obligations early in the day. Support later appeared for the government's issues, and they recovered fractionally, but losses of a point or so were common among the municipal and railroad bonds.

CHICAGO Chicago, Nov 25.—Owing largely to an estimate from a British authority that Argentina would have an exportable surplus of as much as 168,000,000 bushels, wheat prices underwent an early setback today. Reports of better weather in Argentina counted also as a bearish factor. General selling on the part of commission houses took place, but the decline which ensued led to a noticeable increase of buying. The start 13%c lower to ½c advance (new noticeable increase of buying. The start, 1%c lower to ¼c advance (new style), was followed by a general set-back with December touching $1.59% und May $1.58.

Corn reflected wheat's weakness.

After opening %c to %e lower, corn
continued to sag.

Oats were almost stationary, the market keeping within narrow limits.
