THE FARMERS AND LEGISLATION.

Whatever difference of opinion may exist as to the advisability of a third party movement under the leadership of the Farmers' Alliance or any similar organization, there is no doubt that the condition of some of the farming sections is such that an effort ought to be made to devise legislation in their interest. The matter is a very difficult one to deal at present insurmountable, but discussion is always timely and out of free discussion good is almost certain to result.

In the course of his well-timed remarks at the opening of the fair, Lieut.—Governor Dewdney suggested that it might be timely to think of holding a provincial exhibition. On account of the torpidity of the liver (an accompaniment of indigestion) little or no bile is poured into the bowels, and the fluids of the intestines being dried up by the feverish action there, the partly digested stuff from the stomach becomes hard and solid in the lower bowel, and clogs it. Then it putrities, producing all the evils from which our friend suffered. Seigel's Syrup cured him by setting things right at the source of the trouble.
