S TO CAMPAIGN CONTRIBUTIONS.

In connection with the exploded charges against Whitney and Hanna, it was alleged and admitted that a firm which had dealings with the government had contributed $500 for party fund purposes.

It was not charged that they were threatened or had anything hinge upon such a gift, but simply that said sum was handed over to Mr. Hanna.

It is well known that such monies are contributed and always have been by men on both sides of politics.

The maintenance of party machinery both in the country at large and in each riding separately, always involves much expense and always will, especially about election time.

Take the situation locally.

It is well known that Liberal manufacturers, some of whom have received Government patronage, have been free contributors to their own side. This is not quoted in the sense of blame, but as an illustration. For instance when Hon. Mr. Paterson ran in North Grey a large local fund was contributed by his friends here and that, too, on top of their help in South Brant a short time before when Mr. Paterson met with defeat at the hands of Mr. Henry.

It is somewhat of a fine point as to what should, or should not be done in this matter. That it is done by both Liberals and Conservatives it would be the part of arrant hypocrisy to deny.

In the Old Land they go at matters even more extravagantly than we do here. In fact it is not an uncommon thing there for a man to spend thousands on a campaign and the central organizations are maintained at very heavy expense. Even in the case of Labor members, the unions find that they have to afford them heavy financial backing.

There was once in the British House a gentleman named Cross of Newcastle-on-Tyne. He was a very prominent member and considered in the stump, and especially at heckling meetings as the leading speaker of the day. In fact after one campaign his speeches were put in book form and the volume to this day ranks as a political classic. His majorities were always enormous, until one election he decided to eschew any contributions, or organization, and go to the electors on his merits alone, and they were, admittedly, very great—in fact he was of cabinet timber.

The result was that he was returned by a majority of less than ten votes and this—plus contributions and organization—was accomplished by a very inferior man. Cross never tried the experiment again.

Until we reach the milennium campaign funds are sure to exist.

TWO QUERIES FOR THE LOCAL GRIT ORGAN.

"The Courier tries to make a noise like a public ownership organ. Yet, so far as is known, our contemporary, actively or passively, supported all public service franchises in this city which are now held by private corporations, and not long since expressed an adverse opinion to the acquisition by the city of the Brantford Street Railway, a policy which it is now urging.—Expositor.

You're wrong, as usual.

1.—The Courier fought for municipal ownership of the Waterworks while the Expositor was fighting to hand over the concern to a private U. S. corporation.

2—The Courier fought for telephone competition while the Expositor at the start off wanted a continuance of the Bell monopoly, and the
