themselves perfectly just and straightforward; but, moreover, of such a tangible and business-like shape, that when he takes them up he may have some prospect of bringing them, if not always a satisfactory, at least to an intelligible issue.

"Respecting all cases that are not perfect content with what is right and proper between man and man, as all cases of mere suspicion without evidence, or where the British subject has been part to blame in the first instance, or where, from carelessness and inattention, the circumstances have been allowed to become so complex as to require much explanation and unravelling, the undersigned must for his own credit decline to mix himself up in such transactions; and he has accordingly to request that British subjects will be careful in bringing cases of like nature before him.

Mortality on the Coast of Africa.—The barque Roderick Dhu, of Providence U. S. from Acera, reports at the British brig Sallman, from Sierra Leone for the leeward was at Cape Coast, March 25, with the loss of all hands except captain and second officer.

Dr Collier in England.—Dr. Collyer has been quite successful, according to the English papers, in several of the principal towns of that country.—He recently visited Cheltenham, where he created considerable sensation and not a little scepticism.

A novel, if not irrational mode of regulating the fare of passengers, has been adopted by the proprietors of waggons, on the National Road from Cumberland to Wheeling. It is literally by weight: each passenger being tested by the scales, and charged so much per pound. The price is double the weight of manufactured light as the stowage cannot be quite so close. The passengers are chiefly Scotch.—North America.

Quick Travelling.—Two gentlemen registered their names at the Tremont House, (Boston) at five minutes of seven o'clock on Wednesday evening, having left Montreal the day previous at nine o'clock, A. M. They came "in Baggage" Concord, performing the rest in 31 hours and 25 minutes. This may be called "through by daylight." The distance is 310 miles.

FROM TEXAS.

The steam ship New York arrived at New Orleans on the 13th from Galveston, with papers to the 11th inst.

The Civilian of the 1st inst. professes to possess a pretty correct knowledge of the nature of the recent advices received by the Government of Texas from the United States. The paper says—" ministers are not sanguine of the ratification of sensite, though President Tyler and Mr. Calhoun appear to be so." It then goes on to say:

"The United Sates government we understand, have, at length, though reluctantly, complied with all the conditions required by that of Texas preliminary to entering into negociations for annexation. The head quarters of Gen Gaines are to be made at Fort Jesup, the frontier of Texas, where three regiments of Infantry and the 2d regt. of Dragoons are to be stationed, and the remaining disposable force under this commannd is to be distributed at various points on the line; a fleet of ten sail is to occupy the Gulf; and notice [illegible] be given to Mexico that any demonstration against the United States, during the pendency of negotiations, will be considered as hostile and treated accordingly. This is very pleasant [illegible] posts, as the Scotchman said when middling [illegible] from the 14 story house; but how long it is to last, and what is to be the result we are not prepared to predict."

The [illegible] papers prove that the conditions requiring this [illegible] government to [illegible] forces to the Texas frontier [illegible] Gulf, were exacted by Texas, after [illegible] the recent movement of troops and vessels [illegible] been in compliance with these stipulations. Indeed the civilian publishes a copy [illegible] the commander-in-chief's order, dated April [illegible] the 3d regt. of Dragoons [illegible] then at Jefferson, to proceed to Fort Jesup, and says

THE SLAVE TRADE.—From a conversation we have had with Lieut. G. W. Chapman, the officer sent home from the coast of Africa in charge of the brig Uncas, we gather that the traffickers in slaves are prosecuting their iniquitous calling with renewed vigour the present season.

A small brig, the Volador, has successfully run the gauntlet of American and British cruizers, with three hundred negroes on board, notwithstanding the almost vigilance has been exerted to cut her off. The Baltimore built ship Crawford, a fast vessel, which formerly sailed out of this port, is now on the coast, and is thought to be waiting an opportunity to carry off a cargo of slaves, of which she would stow at [illegible] tons burthen, mounting [illegible] pounders, [illegible] numerous [illegible] some 80 or 90 men. The Sermon was preached by the Rev. Bishop, from St. John's Gospel, 20-21, "As my father sent me, even so send I you." From which text his Lordship took occasion to state plain the original Apostolic Archdeacon Wilks, and after the Ordination proceeded to the Church and received the Sacrament of the Supper.—Times.

[illegible] Proceed to give an account of this terrible tragedy we copy the following:

"After the coin was despatched, the murderers proceeded to secure work on the rest of the crew who were not interested in the conspiracy, who unconscious of evil were dispatched in cold blood, without being able to make any resistance, as each made his appearance on the deck, and their bodies thrown overboard. Finding them secured by the command, called a meeting, harangued them in a speech in which he assured them of being under a commander who could appreciate their services and who would not bully them as "Sandy" had done; and explained his designs with regard to their future destination, as we have before stated.

It pleased the Almighty to crush this daring villany, and the evidence attendant upon his success had embodied, by the very instruments through whom his unhallowed designs had been executed.—The second tragedy was as horrible in its incidents as the first, though it may be perceptibly traced the avenging dispensation of that Being who neither slumbers nor sleeps, by whom even the very hairs of our head are numbered, and who will in novice spare the guilty. The very circumstance which in his fiendish cunning he had calculated upon to ensure his safety, led to his destruction.—Dark hints of their being yet too many on board led each one to consider his own safety involved and to suspect the designs of their tyrant. To prevent it is supposed any fatal results which might ensue from the quarrelsome dispositions of such a gang of desperadoes, all of which a specimen [illegible] a coronet at the head [illegible] were dismantled, all the fire arms, and all weapons whatever at hand were thrown overboard, with the exception of the Captain's gun. Fielding, however, had concealed weapons for his own defence in a case of need. The had been discovered in a [illegible] pistols and knife we [illegible] his possession [illegible] man questioned he [illegible] and not satisfied with his reply [illegible] and whole night [illegible] consultation the next [illegible] threatening the mate [illegible] to throw him overboard [illegible] and then the villain [illegible] he which he had sent [illegible] crime to their last [illegible] crime lead to another [illegible] only be presently [illegible] to guilt, and may [illegible] involved what of the [illegible] the poor lad had [illegible] though a witness of them, and [illegible] consenting, so far as he might be allowed. [illegible] man to whom it was given to spare his life, an overboard, appeared inclined in charge to throw [illegible] led by the threats of others [illegible] his own safety, to unclasping wretch met the [illegible] miserable fate as his shriek. Thus early had retribution [illegible] justice followed perpetrators of crime, [illegible] effect upon the violators of the law of God and man.

Nothing extraordinary appears to have occurred between this time and the wreck of the vessel, save the scenes of riot and disorder that might have been expected. The figure [illegible] was disguised, and the name of the vessel painted [illegible] with painted canvas—her guilty crew must have carefully avoided speaking vessels on their voyage.—One of the chief hopes they sank, [illegible] as a precautionary measure against any [illegible] of the crew escaping in her; and the long [illegible] which they were in the act of fitting up, and [illegible] tended to leave the ship after [illegible] was sunk one night in a storm [illegible] short-sighted precautions prove the means of speedy apprehension.

The Prisoners will be tried by the High Court of Commissioners, a court distinct from the [illegible] Vice Admiralty, and appointed to take cognizance of crimes of mutiny and piracy upon the high seas. The names of the prisoners are—Carl Galloway, Johnston, Tarleton Jones, and Anderson—the last [illegible]

Challenge.—In recommending Mr. Goodman's system of Penmanship to the favourable attention of the Public we challenge the annals of literature to produce any thing on the art of writing, to equal the ease, elegance and rapidity which this system affords. Those who have contracted the most pernicious habits, can, in a few hours of plain study, attain perfection in their hand-writing. The well-authenticated specimens of improvement made by ourselves and friends, are sufficient to [illegible] the most doubtful.
