The Regina Calamity.

The editor wishes to thank those subscribers in the West who have kept him supplied with newspapers giving descriptions of the disastrous cyclone at Regina, also all those who have sent written reports of the calamity. In a small paper like the Guide-Advocate it would be impossible to publish these lengthy letters, notwithstanding their interest to many, and also because the reports sent us are in many respects similar to those already published in the Ontario city papers, and have been read by nearly everyone.

Probably one of the most interesting of these letters was from Mr. J. A. Fowler, of Watford. He had just returned from Sunday School when the storm struck. The window in his room was open and before he could get it closed the room was filled with dust and the clothing flying in all directions. No one was hurt in his boarding house. He helped to take eight persons out of a nearby building. A little boy and his mother were saved, the rest killed. Mr. James Hindson's beautiful house was in the storm centre and was completely wiped out. The family were all in the house at the time except Harry. Mr. Hindson and Fred started for the cellar but before they got there the house was a wreck. Fred being killed and Mr. Hindson caught in the ruins. The rest of the family got severely bruised. Mr. Wm. Hindson got off with about $800.00 damage. Hastings & Willoughby lost their shop, but their other property was but slightly damaged. Mr. Fowler closes his letter in these words :—"It might not be a bad idea for the Guide-Advocate to open up a subscription list of small amounts to aid the sufferers here. I know it would be subscribed to liberally."

Any of our readers wishing to act on Mr. Fowler's suggestion can leave their donations at this office and they will be duly forwarded.

JULY REDUCTIONS

The best way to avoid poor values in buying shoes is to let us sell you good shoes. Our new style Oxfords really need no comment. All we need to do is to show them.

We'll give you a demonstration in shoe service that is out of the ordinary. Just at present we're reducing prices to make room for the Fall Stock. That means making it worth your while to buy quickly.
