THE CENTENARY OF PRINTING.

Throughout Europe extensive preparations have been made for the appropriate observance of the day. At Leipzig, the 24th of June will be ushered in with the ringing of the bells; at eight o'clock the populace will assemble at the principal churches to give thanks; and at ten o'clock the various deputations and representative bodies are to form into procession, parading the principal streets, and arriving at the market-place, where an immense vocal and instrumental choir will deliver a selection of songs and other musical effusions, composed for the interesting occasion. At three o'clock the company are to dine at the Augustus platze, where accommodation will be provided for 3,000 persons. In the evening the city will be generally illuminated. On the 25th, a meeting of the literati, authors, printers, booksellers and publishers, will be held in the market-place; and at three o'clock the grand oratorio, composed in celebration of the event by Dr. Mendelsohn Bartholdy, will be performed, and continue faithfully to fulfil their this important point, as all the efforts emissaries known to be employed endeavouring to seduce the Queen's ance, will be effectually frustrated. w Brunswick enjoy a high and well Sir John Harvey confidently trusts n this and every other respect, up- all circumstances.
