TECHNICAL COMMISSION AT CHARLOTTETOWN

Charlottetown, P. E. I., Aug. 8.—(Special)—Charlottetown now has the royal commission on technical education. The afternoon was devoted to the taking of evidence by the commission. Members of the government, board of trade and education gave evidence, pointing out the difficulty of extending industries here on account of lack of dependable transportation facilities at all seasons and the high rates charged for the existing facilities manufacturers could not contract with any certainty of supplying as agreed on.

ENGINEERS COMPLETE PORTION OF VALLEY RAILWAY SURVEY

Thursday, Aug. 10.

The Fredericton-St. John portion of the Valley Railway survey which is being carried on under the supervision of Reginald Maxwell, was completed yesterday. A crew of sixteen men arrived in the city yesterday afternoon by way of the Marsh road and worked from Haymarket square into Courtenay Bay. The party left the city soon after and went to Gondola Point, from where they will work into Westfield. The route followed in completing the Fredericton-St. John work was along the western bank of the river as far as the Reach, where the river was crossed. The party then worked along the bank of the Kennebecasis as far as Rothesay, from where they came to the city, crossing over the I. C. R. track at Torryburn. The distance covered from Fredericton to Courtenay Bay by the preliminary was seventy-one and a half miles.

Engineer Maxwell, who was in the city yesterday, said that on a fine location this distance could be reduced by two miles. In making the survey, Mr. Maxwell contended that his men adhered to the standard grades of the Transcontinental. He expects that all the survey work will be completed some time next month.

THE RELIEF WORK AT CAMPBELLTON

How Money Received is Disposed Of by Those in Charge

MR. McKENZIE'S LETTER

Chairman of the Relief Committee Gives Details in Letter to The Telegraph—List of Contributions Received Monday.

In answer to the numerous inquiries that have been made from time to time in the press as to the use to which the Campbellton relief committee was making of the money which they were receiving from time to time George G. McKenzie, chairman of the committee, has sent a letter to The Telegraph in which he details their plans for the coming winter and the manner in which they intend to provide relief. At the time the letter was written the committee had received the sum of $57,178.85 and had expended $2,159.85. Mr. McKenzie also enclosed a list of the money and supplies received on Monday. Following is the letter:

Campbellton, N. B., Aug. 8, '10.

To the Editor of The Telegraph:

Sir,—I notice from time to time inquiries as to what our committee is doing with the cash that has been received. This is a very proper question.

The funds received have been deposited in our three local banks in about equal proportions in the name of the financial committee as a relief fund. The amount received at this writing is $57,178.85 and $2,159.85 has been expended for food, supplies, building of relief station, household utensils, bedding and the administration of the general relief.

All our committee men, numbering ten, excepting the chairman of the general relief committee, are giving their services free. Of course we have to pay all our assistants, but in many cases their work is a form of relief to the families they represent.

The large proportion of our relief fund is intended to house the poor through the coming winter. To some of these we expect to give moderate aid towards rebuilding their homes but only those who have been rendered destitute through the late fire. Another class are utterly penniless but must be housed through the winter and we are striving to provide them with shelter.

We are now taking applications from those who think they ought to receive aid in rebuilding or who must be housed. In a few days we hope to have the list completed when our committee will have to decide who will have to be helped, and to what extent. This step has been delayed so that we may be able to judge what amount we will have at our disposal to do this work. The taking of these applications began on Saturday and now (Monday at noon) has reached 100. We fear that not more than one-fourth of the applications are yet on file. This is our most serious problem. We will also have to aid many families towards housekeeping, but to a very moderate extent, such as purchasing a stove or necessary bedding. Then again, we will have to provide food to quite a number—but this number is gradually diminishing and will diminish for quite a while.

There is plenty of work now for our working population and this will be true until the weather becomes too cold for building and other work of this class. When that time arrives we expect we will have to provide a great many families with food and fuel or assist them until the work again becomes active.

This is a bare outline of our plans and we know we have to face the situation.

Our town has been almost annihilated and we hope to retain the greater part of our population but to do this we must assist in the ways we have outlined. To do this we must have the generous assistance from the people of this dominion and elsewhere if it can be obtained.

Yours very truly,

GEO. G. McKENZIE,
Chairman Relief Committee.

Bathurst Contributions About $2,200.

Bathurst, Aug. 9—The Bathurst committee named at a meeting of citizens here to gather funds for relief of the Campbellton fire sufferers, held a meeting last night. The work of the committee was most satisfactory, showing that $1,331.13 were forwarded in supplies, and that the sum of $800 in cash would be forwarded today. There are other amounts yet to come, which will make subscriptions from here total about $2,200.

Of this amount the committee received from Stonehaven $82, and $20 from Burnsville. Besides being the first to rush supplies to the sorely stricken town, the citizens of Bathurst have reason to feel justly proud of the noble way in which response was made to the appeal of the relief committee.

Campbellton, N. B., Aug. 10—(Special)—Two additional cases of diphtheria developed yesterday and were immediately isolated. Both cases are of a very mild type and the patients are comfortably settled. Col. Maltby of Newcastle arrived here last night and is looking into health matters in the interest of the provincial board of trade.

Excitement was created yesterday in the tented city when one of the large square tents caught fire from a stove pipe. The fire department speedily put the fire out and saved the contents of the tent.

Notices have been posted forbidding the erection of temporary or permanent buildings without a permit from the building inspector and that official has been busy issuing permits. The total amount of subscriptions received up to this morning is about $65,000. Many applications have been received for assistance to build, but as yet no definite action has been taken in this matter.

Jas. E. Adamson, architect, of Montreal, has been commissioned to prepare plans and specifications for the new Methodist church. Beside this he is to build several other buildings.

More Aid from Upper Canada.

London, Ont., Aug. 10—Bishop Fallon has ordered a collection be taken up taken up throughout the diocese of London in aid of the stricken residents of Campbellton. Already a large sum has been received and fully $2,000 is expected.

Toronto, Aug. 9—The first money collected by the Presbyterian church of Canada for the relief of the people of Campbellton was forwarded yesterday by Dr. Somerville. It amounted to $854. The money is to be used for general relief work and church building.

HON. G. E. FOSTER ON PUBLIC SERVICE

Addressed Canadian Club Members at Luncheon Last Night

The Theory of Government, the Sense of Duty and the Trouble Resulting from Indifference Explained at Length—The Debt of Each Citizen to the State.

Wedesday, Aug. 10.

Between fifty and sixty members of the Canadian Club listened to an address last night from Hon. George E. Foster, on Public Service. The president of the club, M. E. Agar, introduced the speaker. At the outset, Mr. Foster distinguished between public employment and public service. He sketched the rise of the democracy in which the power of government from being held by the autocracy came to be held by the people. The besetting sin of democracies, he contended, was indifference. There was nothing the matter with our theories, our ideals or our sense of duty; the trouble was that we did not live up to our lights.

The theory that the government of the country is of the people, by the people, and for the people, he said, was an excellent one, yet he would be a bold man who would contend that it was carried out in its entirety. "The theory that public office is a public trust was also an excellent one," said Mr. Foster, "and yet too often public office is used as a lever by a triumphant party. Not one of us will deny that we owe some debt to the state but when the draft is presented some of us do not honor it even by signing it. If we should do so under pressure, in nine cases out of ten we refuse payment."

Responsibility.

Mr. Foster, continuing, said that the first requisite in a democracy was that the sense of responsibility in the individual should be cultivated. "If the people do not govern well the power will soon fall into the hands of the corporations, the cliques, or the old family parties. The fault of the democracy is that the individual unit does not take his power seriously enough. Indeed, he often repudiates it altogether. In order to strengthen the democracy the unit must be strengthened, and the first lesson Canadians need to learn is their absolute debt to the state. One inefficient may not look serious, but when you multiply that by thousands and tens of thousands, it can be clearly seen what a menace is hanging over the country."

He did not wish to say anything against the government of Canada. He was convinced that, taking all things into consideration, Canada had done mighty well in that line. This did not excuse us, however, and we would have to commence training our youth seriously on the duties of citizenship.

Mr. Foster strongly commended the teaching of patriotism to the children in the schools. Patriotism was hard to define, but it was a fact and worthy of all cultivation. The child as it grew up in its home threw out tendrils of its being which became attached to the locality. By and by when it preached maturity, it absorbed the great traditions of its country, its literature, its art, its struggles, and, at last, the waving of the flag or the singing of the national anthem had power to move even to tears. There was no true service without love. Patriotism, love of country, not a bigoted love, not an ignorant love, was what must be built on for public service of the truest kind. At the time of the South African war, Mr. Foster said, every young Canadian felt strongly that he would like to draw the sword in the defence of the empire and, figuratively speaking, stand as a bulwark on the battlefield against its foes. That, said he, was the picturesque love of country. It was against the known and tangible dangers of the country that these young men longed to be engaged. How much more glorious the service against the insidious foes of our land which were hourly sapping its strength and power, and how much more necessary the service.

A Necessary Sacrifice.

But many young men, said Mr. Foster, might ask if it were necessary for them to give up a portion of their time, their pleasure and their substance to the service of their country. He would reply to such a question that if the young man loved himself, if he loved the family he hoped one day to found as he ought, it was well that he should. We were born into this environment because our fathers had or had not done certain things and we were bound to hand it on to our successors not only in as good condition, but better. This national life of ours was in reality a public trust. Generations had fought, and labored, and invented, and gone the way of all the earth, leaving it to us. Out of the future children yet unborn were calling to us: "Tread carefully, act wisely, for everything you do and everything you neglect to do will add to our burden." These, said the speaker, were some of the thoughts which incited to public service.

It was easy for us to let our responsibilities fall from us. "Public office is a public trust, no one will uphold the opposite. Yet it is not in reality so regarded. Nothing but education and training will instill the proper ideals into the public mind. The family, the school and the church are excellent elements in our public life." What he pleaded for was that these should be projected through our public life.

In conclusion, Mr. Foster said that the best kind of public service was that which was given with some sense of sacrifice. He urged that we should not fall below the level of our fathers, who had left all that was valuable and beautiful in their lives for the sake of a principle.

When the speaker had resumed his seat the chairman thanked him in behalf of the audience, and the gathering dispersed after singing the national anthem.

FAMOUS GEMS OF PROSE

HIS POLITICAL CAREER

By Gerrit Smith (New York).

From a letter to the constituents of his congressional district in 1852. From biography of O. B. Frothingham, 1878.

MY NOMINATION, as I supposed it would, has resulted in my election, and that, too, by a very large majority. And now I wish that I could resign the office which your partiality has accorded to me. But I must not—I cannot. To resign it would be a most ungrateful and offensive requital of the rare generosity which broke through your strong attachments of party and bestowed your votes on one the peculiarities of whose political creed leave him without a party. Very rare, indeed, is the generosity which was not to be repelled by a political creed, among the peculiarities of which are:

1. That it acknowledges no law and knows no law for slavery; that not only is slavery not in the federal constitution, but that by no possibility could it be brought either into the federal or into a state constitution.

2. That the right to the soil is as natural, absolute and equal as the right to the light and air.

3. That political rights are not conventional but natural—inhering in all persons, the black as well as the white, the female as well as the male.

4. That the doctrine of free trade is the necessary outgrowth of the doctrine of human brotherhood; and that to impose restrictions on commerce is to build up unnatural and sinful barriers across that brotherhood.

5. That national wars are as brutal, barbarous and unnecessary as are the violence and bloodshed to which misguided and frenzied individuals are prompted; and that our country should, by her own heaven-trusting and beautiful example, hasten the day when the nations of the earth shall beat their swords into ploughshares and their spears into pruning hooks; nation shall not lift up sword against nation, neither shall they learn war any more.

6. That the province of government is but to protect—to protect persons and property; and that the building of railroads and canals and the care of schools and churches fall entirely outside of its limits and exclusively within the range of "the voluntary principle." Narrow, however, as are those limits, every duty within them is to be promptly, faithfully, fully performed;—as well, for instance, the duty on the part of the federal government to put an end to the dram-shop, manufacture of paupers and madmen in the city of Washington, as the duty on the part of the state government to put an end to it in the state.

7. That as far as practible, every officer, from the highest to the lowest, including especially the president and postmaster, should be elected directly by the people.

I need not extend any further the enumerations of the features of my peculiar political creed; and I need not enlarge upon the reason which I gave why I must not and cannot resign the office which you have conferred upon me. I will only add that I accept it; that my whole heart is moved to graititude by your bestowment of it, and that, God helping me, I will so discharge its duties as neither to dishonor myself nor you.
