THIRTEENTH YEAR. MONDAY MORNING, JUNE 27 1892 ONE CENT.

FIGURING ON THE ELECTIONS

GLADSTONE'S MANIFESTO SPREADS DISMAY IN THE LIBERAL CAMP.

Balfour's Strong Address—Overwhelming Supply of Election Literature—Stanley Greeted With a Storm of Hisses and Derisive Cheers—His Wife in Tears—The New Irish Home Rule Bill.

[G. W. Smalley's cable to New York Tribune.]

LONDON, June 26.—Twice within a week has Mr. Gladstone disappointed his followers. They looked to him with eagerness for an answer to Ulster. He gave it at Clapham, and his best friends found it weak. They looked even more anxiously for the manifesto on which they must fight the election. The manifesto appeared yesterday morning and has spread something like dismay among those to whom the elections are a matter, not only of business, but of political life and death. On hardly a single point has Mr. Gladstone satisfied the expectation of his party—not on Home Rule, not on labor, not on the Newcastle program, not in the appeal either to class interests or class prejudices, both of which count for so much in such an emergency. There has been a growing feeling in his own party that the time had come when he must speak out on Home Rule, must show his hand, must produce his scheme, must at least define the meaning of the phrase which at present is only a huge political conundrum. He has not done it. What he has done is to hold out the hope that "before many days are over" he may say something "on the outlines of the proposal." That means that he will proclaim on the platform of Midlothian what he does not care to affirm or explain in his address to the electors of Midlothian. He does well to trust to the voice rather than to the pen. He wants space and air and an audience before him. Then only is his full mastery of a subject to be seen. Then only is a mood of comparative frankness possible to him. Thence also may come that trumpet note, that joyful battle cry which the soldiers of his army long to hear from their great captain and have not yet heard.

There are nevertheless in this address passages of such dignity and pathos and of such literary force as he rarely attains to when writing. Underneath it all is the proud consciousness that he is making a personal appeal to the people of England. He well knows the fascination of his own name and his own individuality. He knows that there, and not elsewhere, lies his best chance of winning this election.

Mr. Balfour's address is in all points in sharp contrast to Mr. Gladstone's. It is half as long and more than twice as clear. He has nothing to conceal, no secrets of policy to keep and no unrevealed scheme for breaking up the empire. He can say a plain thing in plain words, and does. It is the answer to what Mr. Gladstone says and to what he does not say on the one question which engrosses his mind. Limagine the Unionist party in this kingdom would be content to risk their case on this terse, lucid, frank and powerful statement. It embodies a program also and such promises for the future as may be based on six years of beneficial legislation for the people, on the firm maintenance of public law and individual liberty, and upon the wise conduct of affairs, alike foreign and domestic.

Election Literature.

The supply of election literature of the very first importance is simply overwhelming. Most of the leaders on either side of the House of Commons have now published their addresses, and the speeches of the week include at least a dozen from men of the highest political rank, Mr. Balfour, Lord Rosebery, Mr. Chamberlain, the Duke of Devonshire, the Duke of Argyle, Mr. John Morley, Sir William Harcourt, and many more. There has been a great meeting in Dublin in echo of the greater meeting in Belfast. There has been another in London. Yet it is not quite certain that much new light has been thrown on the situation. One point comes out in Lord Rosebery's speech on Thursday at Whitechapel not entirely new, but very timely. There have been rumors of dissensions between Lord Rosebery and Mr. Gladstone on foreign policy, and Lord Kimberly's name has been mentioned as a possible Foreign Minister in the Gladstonian Government instead of Lord Rosebery. The radicals of the party, or some of them, are believed to oppose Lord Rosebery, partly because he has a mind and will of his own, partly because of his opinion about Egypt and of the doubt whether he be willing to reverse Lord Salisbury's policy and fall down and worship France. Lord Rosebery's speech in this view curious and important. He says with that gravity which he can assume when he chooses that Mr. Gladstone has gone rather too far in his condonation of Lord Salisbury's foreign policy. Then he adds with equal gravity that the new Foreign Secretary, whoever he may be, will continue Lord Salisbury's present policy, "so far as we know it;" adding with some emphasis, "We intend to try the experiment of having a continuous foreign policy." If Lord Rosebery can persuade the country of that he will do much for his party. Most Englishmen who study foreign affairs, who remember Mr. Gladstone's five years of war and worry and humiliation and Lord Salisbury's six years of peace with honor, shudder at the prospect of another Gladstonian term with Mr. Gladstone himself running the Foreign Office as he did from 1880 to 1885. They discredit, however, the Lord Kimberly gossip. They believe that Lord Rosebery must be the Foreign Minister, that he will not be unless he has a free hand, and that he meant what he says about the continuity of English foreign policy, including much moral support to the Triple Alliance and the peace of Europe.

"THE MICROBE OF REPEAL."

Prof. Tyndall Waxes Warm and Also Makes a Prediction.

LONDON, June 26.—In a letter sent to the Dublin Ulstermen's convention, Prof. Tyndall denounces the "evil genius of Gladstone" and blames the "arch-doctrinaire Morley for first planting the microbe of repeal in the brain of his venerable friend." Morley, the professor adds, was once a man of elevated mind; now he is degraded to the level of a professional politician.

Prof. Tyndall predicts that the first Loyalist blood shed in Ulster for the sake of Archbishop Walsh and Timothy Healy will rouse a feeling that will sweep Gladstone's Irish policy to perdition.

The total number of candidates who will stand in the elections is 1560. Nearly all the 670 seats in the House will be contested. A few Catholic candidates will stand in England. There will be only 10 Jewish candidates, of which number four are Liberals, four Conservatives and two Liberal-Unionists.

CHAMBERLAIN "IN COVENTRY."

People Not So Quiet There As in Lady Godiva's Time.

LONDON, June 26.—Mr. Joseph Chamberlain, while addressing a meeting at Coventry, was received with cries of "Three cheers for Gladstone!"

He tried in vain to speak, for the Radicals, who had packed the back of the hall, drowned his voice with their hooting and jeering.

Several fights ensued, and the police had to be called in to restore order.

Mr. Chamberlain was then given a hearing for about five minutes. A statement to the effect that Gladstonians had no monopoly of Liberalism was answered with cries of "Turncoat!" and "Traitor!" and in an instant the meeting was again in an uproar.

Somebody threw a cabbage head. It did not reach the platform, but fell in the crowd just in front of the speaker.

After two hours' pandemonium Mr. Chamberlain left the platform, completely exhausted, and he was assisted, half fainting, to his carriage.

HOTTER THAN AFRICA.

Stanley Africanus Howled Down in Darkest North Lambeth.

LONDON, June 26.—Henry M. Stanley's first effort to capture the suffrages of the costermongers in North Lambeth was a failure.

When he was introduced there was a roar of laughter, mingled with yells. For the first ten minutes he was able to make himself heard, although he was interrupted constantly with coarse remarks.

For a short time Mr. Stanley maintained his complacency; then he became embarrassed and showed symptoms of losing his temper. He stopped talking and glared fiercely at the mob.

Mrs. Stanley burst into tears, twice rose to her feet and then sank into her seat.

Before Mr. Stanley could resume his speech his wife sprang to her feet and cried:

"When all of you and I are dead and forgotten the name of Stanley will live, revered and loved."

Her words were followed by a burst of laughter and cries of "Shame!"

Churchill's Election Address.

LONDON, June 26.—Lord Randolph Churchill has issued an election address to his constituents. He says he still believes that it is impossible to put Home Rule Rule into a bill, and that if Mr. Gladstone obtains even so great a majority he will be deemed to political impotence and sterility as long as he exhausts his energies in trying to solve what is insoluble. The Unionists, adds Lord Randolph, have a clearer record of work and action than any party he has known or read of in modern times.

Gladstone and Scottish Home Rule.

LONDON, June 26.—The executive of the Scottish Home Rule Association is dissatisfied with the vagueness of Mr. Gladstone's replies to inquiries regarding the establishment of Home Rule for Scotland, and has written a letter to him, declaring that the association will be unable to support him in the approaching general elections.

Chat from Over the Sea.

Amede Ernest Bartelomy Mochess, the well-known French naval officer, scientist and writer, is dead at Paris, aged 71 years.

A total of 164 cases of cholera has been reported at Baku, Russia, during one week, with 70 deaths from the disease.

Detectives have started from Paris for London to arrest the Anarchists, Francois and Meunier, who caused the explosion at Very's restaurant on April 25.

Moore's Musee.

The Musee will open to-day bright, cosy and fresh, a comparatively new house. The corps of wax figure workers who have been hard at work during the last 30 days reproducing some of the most noted and worthy paintings now on exhibition in the Parisian fine art academy have concluded their labors, the result of which is a completely new musee. All of the old wax stations have been removed and new ones have taken their places. In every detail they are perfect reproductions of the pictures chosen, and from an artistic standpoint are without doubt the finest array of waxwork ever placed on exhibition in America. It is a class of work that will not only prove interesting but also instructive to all, both young and old alike. This rare display of artistic work will in no way interfere with the excellence of the entertainment offered in the other departments. In the lecture hall will be seen for the first time in Canada, Charles Schoof, the noted South African and West India explorer. He will exhibit one of the finest collection of relics that has ever been owned by a single person. On the opposite stage in the same department will be seen the clever Lazan Musical Children, aged respectively 7 and 10 years. They come highly recommended as musical prodigees, and no doubt their performance will prove a pleasing one to all those who may attend during the week. In the theatre Mr. Courtright's Congress of Stars will hold the boards. The company is a good one and includes some of the following clever vaudeville performers: Prince Wolff, the Trans-Atlantique violinist; Tambourine McCarty, the world's greatest tambourine spinner and juggler; Wilson and Brevarde, comedy sketch artists, and Moreland and Thompson, refined sketch artists.

Lucy, Cobourg; grand first vice-president, Thomas Bryne, Galt; grand second vice-president, William Memory, Toronto; grand secretary, P. Shea, Toronto; grand treasurer, P. Levoie, Paris. The next convention will be held in Galt on Saturday, June 12, 1893.

Temperance at Broadway Hall.

At Broadway Gospel Temperance Society yesterday Mrs. O.P. Henderson gave a very interesting address on the subject, "Are You in the Light?" illustrating the effect of drinking on the homes of many in the city. It was claimed that in England and Wales in one year 1389 children were suffocated while in bed with drunken parents. The address closed with a rendition of the poem, "The Tapestry Weavers." Short addresses were also given by Mr. Shedd, barrister, of Grand Rapids, Michigan, and C. Wardell.

There will be Zamora, the wonderful Mexican; Anzo and Lee, the men without bones; James Lovett, the champion club swinger. Performances will be given every afternoon and evening. The Toronto Ferry Band will also be on hand.

TORONTO'S KASPER HAUSER.

ALL THEORIES FAIL TO ACCOUNT FOR THE FACTS.

A Professor of Hypnotism Pays "The Boy" a Visit—A Good-Natured Interview—He Proves a Positive Subject—Some Fresh Facts Elicited—The Mystery Deepens Instead of Clearing.

The more the case of "The Boy" is investigated the deeper becomes the mystery. It is now a week since he was discovered bound on the breakwater, with scarcely sufficient clothing to cover his nakedness. Since that time he has been daily exposed to hours of questioning by all sorts and conditions of men, but he has never given the least signal of breaking down or departing from his story. He is a simple, uneducated lad, and yet the cross-examination threats and promises of such keen-witted persons as lawyers, physicians, detectives, jailers and newspaper men has failed to make the least impression on him. The World on Saturday had recourse to hypnotism, thinking that if the lad could be thrown into a hypnotic condition the truth could be extracted from him. Prof. Seymour was willing to make the attempt and accompanied The World man to the jail in the afternoon. "The Boy" was found lying across his bed, attired in the suit of clothes contributed by a scribe the previous day. Prof. Seymour had called before and the lad recognized him. He has been subjected to so much questioning that it might be expected that he would be somewhat impatient of going through the ordeal again, but it does not appear to ruffle him a bit. On Friday he was under examination at Headquarters almost steadily from 10 in the morning till 3.30 in the afternoon and when he reached the jail he said he was very, very tired and at once took to his bed. These questionings are all the more tiring and trying because of the quite apparent incredulity on the part of the questioners.

A Good-Natured Youth.

On Saturday he submitted with much good-nature to be pumped by the Professor, The World and the officials, who each took a turn at the handle. He is a lad of nice disposition, answering all questions respectfully and as fully as he knows how. He preserves for the most part a serious and sincere air, although the reporter thought once or twice that he detected the shadow of a furtive mocking smile play about his lips. In the other hand he laughs out heartily and unreservedly when anything arouses his sense of humor. The public are already familiar with his story, and that need not now be dwelt upon, as he iterates and reiterates it whenever called upon. One or two new points may be mentioned, however. With a view to deciding what part of the world he hails from he was asked if he was a Canadian or American. He did not know. Did he live under the Union Jack or Stars and Stripes? He had heard of the Union Jack, but never of the Stars and Stripes. Did he ever see snow? No, he had never seen snow, but he knew what it was. It was frozen water. It was sometimes cold where he lived, however. He had never seen a woman except in pictures until last Monday. He did not know who cooked the food he ate. Martin brought it to him. He described the yard where he turned the crank as surrounded on three sides by a high stone wall with a wooden fence on top. The fourth side was the building that his room was in. It was a large brick building three or four stories high. It will be seen that this is the exact description of a public institution. Indeed, leaving out the wooden fence, it is an accurate enough description of the jail itself.

As to Mesmerism.

The Professor took him in hand. "Do you know anything of hypnotism?" he asked. "No," was the reply. "You told me the last time I saw you," exclaimed the Professor, "that you did."

Finally the Professor used the word mesmerism and the boy answered, "Oh, yes, I understand that; Martin told me about that. A man of strong mind gets a man of weak mind under the influence."

The Professor did not agree with the definition, but let it pass. Presently he said, "You have scars, I see," and he placed his two fingers on either side of the lad's nose, beside the eyes.

"Do you feel any vibration?" said the Professor.

"Don't know what that is."

"Trembling," translated the hypnotist.

Hard to Hypnotize.

After a while he said he thought he did. "Are you trying to mesmerize me," asked the boy.

"Yes," was the answer. The reporter narrowly scanned the lad's face and eyes now. It was likely that he would show some signs of alarm under these circumstances. But he did not. He smiled. "You can't mesmerize me. There was a fellow here the other day and he could not do it."

"Oh, he was only a pupil of mine. I am the teacher." The lad made no reply. "Do you feel sleepy?" the Professor said after a while. "No." The Professor began to pass his hands over the lad's eyes and face, but after a considerable struggle he gave the attempt up.

One of the interesting conversations was with respect to his knowledge of age. "Which is the oldest man in the party," he was asked. He immediately picked out the right man. "How do you know he is the oldest," was the next query. "Because he is bald," was the quick response. "Which is the older of us two," said the Professor, indicating himself and The World man. After some hesitancy he awarded the palm of honor to the Professor because, as he explained, he had some gray hairs. The question naturally arises, would a boy brought up in the solitary way this boy declares himself to have been brought up know anything about the effects of age on men.

Questioned about religious matters he said he knew about God, that he was a spirit and made everything. He knew the Lord's prayer and that it was wrong to tell lies.

Then the Professor tried another tack. The boy was talking about getting out on Monday and going to Mr. Piper's to get educated, and the Professor said: "Oh they can't let you out till they know who you are. They will keep you here forever till they find out your name."

A very serious look came over his face. "I'd rather die than stay in jail," he said. "You'd rather die?" said the Professor questioningly. "Yes, I'd rather die," he said, while his eyes flashed and a very determined look came over his face. "I have been kept shut in all my life and I want to go out and see the world now."

Theories All Lame.

There is no disguising that the case is a most extraordinary one. No matter what hypothesis is adopted it will be found before it is followed far to be full of inconsistencies. His knowledge of things in general is sufficient to dispose of the theory that he has led a totally secluded life since infancy. It is simply impossible to suppose on the other hand that he got on the breakwater and tied himself. It has not perhaps been made sufficiently clear that the place where he was found was not the Island breakwater, but the breakwater on the north or mainland side of the gap. It was simply impossible for him to get there except by rowboat or vessel of some sort. Someone must have taken the vessel away. Then on the theory that the whole thing is an imposture, what is the motive or object of the imposture? If there is some deeply laid scheme would the fellow-conspirator choose this simple unlettered lad to carry out so difficult a plan?

The Professor's theory with regard to the story is that it is not true but that the boy nevertheless believes it. "He is slightly demented," said the Professor, "and is self-hypnotised. You will never get him to vary from the story he has told."

Altogether it is truly a bewildering case.

All sensible people use Adams' Tutti Frutti Gum to maintain first-class, robust health. It is nature's invigorator of the entire system.

HAVING A GOOD TIME.

The Knights of St. John in Love With Toronto—Never Been So Well Entertained.

The most successful convention ever held by the Knights of St. John is drawing to a close, and the visitors, one and all unite in praising the beauty of the city and kindness of the citizens.

On Saturday the delegates met at the Pavilion and transacted considerable business.

Password and Sign Adopted.

For five years or more one of the burning questions in the Union has been the adoption of unwritten work. A petition signed by representatives of over 50 commanderies was sent in to the Resolution Committee this year praying that in order to protect the commanderies from intruders and imposition it is necessary to adopt a password and sign, these to be subject to approval of the ecclesiastical authority in each diocese; the password to be sent by the Supreme President quarterly to the subordinate commanderies.

A letter from Archbishop Walsh, the Supreme Spiritual Adviser of the union, was read as follows: "You may, in my opinion, adopt such passwords and countersigns as will protect your meetings and deliberations from intrusion by those who are not members, provided you agree that such passwords and countersigns may be made known to the competent ecclesiastical authority if asked for."

The reading of these documents elicited the most enthusiastic cheering, and the motion to adopt the resolution was carried amid applause from all parts of the house.

The convention will meet to-day at 9 o'clock, when the officers will be elected. S. W. Cheesum of Indianapolis is almost certain to be elected supreme commander. Pittsburg has been selected as the place for the next convention.

At Moss Park Rink.

The garden party held in Moss Park Rink on Saturday night under the auspices of the Knights was a success. About 2500 people gathered together in the spacious inclosure and all had a pleasant time. Heintzman's Band was in attendance and a splendid orchestra rendered the dance music. The ladies of the different parishes had labored hard to make the affair a success and they are magnificently rewarded.

How They Spent the Sabbath.

Sunday was spent by the knights in different ways. In the morning they visited the different churches. A large number went to the cathedral, where an able address was delivered by Rev. Father Teefy, C.S.B., Archbishop Walsh officiated, assisted by Fathers McCann, Ryan and Kelly.

In the afternoon many of the visitors went over to the Island, while others drove around and viewed the city.

Grand musical vespers were rendered at St. Michael's in the evening. Rev. Father McCann led, and Father Rohleder directed the choir. Father Ryan preached an eloquent sermon, taking for his text, St. Luke iii., 4, "The soldiers came to him (John the Baptist) and asked him saying, 'What shall we do?' and he said to them: 'Do violence to no one. Be not calumniators of any man, and be content with your pay.'"

The local commanderies entertained the visitors in grand style at their quarters in Adelaide-street last night, and all departed speaking highly of their Toronto friends. One young man said to The World: "We have been in many cities in the United States, but never yet have we enjoyed ourselves so well as in your city. We want you to thank the citizens and the knights of this city for the really grand reception they have accorded us."

The Little Zouaves.

A company that attracted a great deal of attention in the parade was the Weber Zouaves. Their very picturesque costume, resembling somewhat the Turkish garb, made them the centre of observation. This corps hails from Indianapolis. About five months ago the company was started there and was called after Father Weber of St. John's Cathedral. The uniform resembles that worn by the Papal Zouaves during the war with Garibaldi. They are here under command of Second Lieutenant Wells, and are exceptionally well drilled. They usually carry rifles, but were not permitted to bring these across the lines. Captain Fox, Inspector of Police at Indianapolis, has drilled the company and they have profited by his directions to such an extent that they are now second to none. They leave to-day for home on the Chicora.

Death Through Fireworks.

BUFFALO, June 26.—Frank Donohue opened his bank, took out what money he had saved and bought some fireworks. On the way home he set off a firecracker, and a spark dropped into his pocket, where the rest of them were. In less time than it takes to tell it the boy's clothing was a sheet of flame, and before any assistance arrived he was so frightfully burned that he died in an hour.

Sermons by Eminent Divines.

Yesterday's special services at the Church of the Ascension, Richmond-street west, were conducted by two eminent English clergymen, Rev. T. J. Madden, M.A., vicar of St. Luke's, Liverpool, and Rev. R. B. DeWolf, M.A., vicar of St. Mary's, Sheffield. At 11 a.m. Rev. Mr. Madden preached an earnest sermon, taking his text from 1. Peter ii. 7. A large congregation was present. Rev. Mr. Madden addressed a large number of young men at 4.30 in the afternoon, urging them to shun the prevalent vices of the day and strive to lead pure and noble lives. In the evening Rev. Mr. DeWolf conducted the service, preaching from the text, "Prepare to Meet Thy God." The earnest sermon was attentively listened to by the congregation, which filled the church. The musical portion of the services was excellent.

THE NEWS OF NEAR TOWNS.

SUICIDE OF A HAMILTON MAN IN BUFFALO.

The Intemperate Language of a Temperance Candidate—Another Tragedy of Niagara Falls—Grand Trunk Station Destroyed by Fire—A Brakeman Falls From a Train and is Killed.

BUFFALO, June 26.—At 8 o'clock Saturday morning Officer Tom Leonard, on duty at the Erie depot at Michigan-street, found a man in an insensible condition lying against the flag shanty. When the man was taken to the hospital it was discovered that he was suffering from opium poisoning. Two one-ounce bottles of laudanum were found in his pockets, and a bottle of rough on rats, half emptied.

All efforts to revive him proved in vain and he expired within half an hour of being admitted to the hospital.

The only clue to his identity is the name W. Lewis on his underclothing and the fact that he told two young men at the track early this morning that he was from Hamilton.

A Remnant of a Suicide.

NIAGARA, Ont., June 26.—Along the lake shore about three miles from Niagara was discovered the leg of a man floating in the water near the shore. Upon examination it was found that it was the portion of the leg from the knee downwards and it had been in the water for some time. It was apparently the limb of a cripple, as the boot in which it was encased had a high heel, and was of a very fine make, showing that it was made especially for the foot.

It is generally supposed that the limb was that of a man who had gone over the falls and floated down to where it was discovered.

Killed By His Horse.

BRUSSELS, Ont., June 26.—Daniel McKenzie, foreman at Coleman's salt works, was dragged to death by his horse. Coleman while driving home dropped one of the lines and got out on the wagon tongue to get it. In getting back he slipped and fell and was dragged by the affrighted team. When found there was an ugly gash about 4½ inches long on the right side of the head, the skull being crushed in, caused either by the wheel or the hoof of one of the horses. He lived 15 minutes.

Not Temperate in Language.

WINNIPEG, June 26.—Robert Watson, the new Minister of Public Works in the Greenway Government, is with all other candidates, just now passing as temperance candidates. At a public meeting at McGregor Saturday he declared he had never drank, and the statement was promptly challenged by an elector, who declared he had drank with him. Watson called the man a liar, and jumping from the platform started in at his opponent. It was some time before the row was stopped.

A Female Shoplifter.

SARNIA, Ont., June 26.—Last night Mrs. William McAusland of the fourth line, Sarnia township, was arrested on a charge of shoplifting on complaint of W. J. Proctor. Mr. Proctor had for some months missed goods from his store, and on Saturday evening watched Mrs. McAusland. When arrested she had a lot of goods stowed away on her person, being prepared for handling a large quantity. Late last night her house was searched, and a large amount of goods found. She is out on bail.

Fell Dead While Chopping Wood.

NEW WESTMINSTER, B.C., June 26.—Ernest Paulette, aged 24, of Hillside, fell dead on Thursday afternoon while chopping wood upon the farm of Robert Wilshire. Paulette was subject to epileptic fits. The body was not found till several hours after death.

A Relic of Long Ago.

NIAGARA, Ont., June 26.—A night-line set for fish at the mouth of Niagara River brought up from the bottom of the river an old flint-lock musket. It was covered with an incrustation of mud, shells, etc., that was as solid as though petrified. It is supposed to have been lost by some of the French soldiers who were stationed at Fort Niagara when the fort was in the possession of the French.

Whisky Killed Him.

BRANTFORD, June 26.—At the adjourned inquest on the body of Richard Griffiths, found dead in Lawrence-street, the medical evidence was taken and the conclusion of that testimony was that death had resulted from congested apoplexy, accelerated by over-indulgence in liquor. A verdict to this effect was returned by the jury.

City Council Scathed and Sir John Thompson Denounced by Rev. J. C. Madill.

The annual sermon of the Lady True Blues, as preached by Rev. J. C. Madill yesterday afternoon, was a sensational effort. At 4.30 o'clock Broadway Hall was crowded by the ladies and their friends of both sexes. The preacher complimented the Lady True Blues on their organization and its aims. He then proceeded to attack the members of the City Council on the ground that they had made a grant of money for the purpose of entertaining foreigners who had sworn to "take the Queen's Crown and trample it under foot." Ald. Bell, who was on the platform, came in for a full share of the speaker's wrath, but had no chance to talk back.

Mr. Madill next went for S. H. Blake in no measured terms, the ground for his attack being the stand taken by Mr. Blake on the separate school question. Roman Catholics, the speaker maintained, had far greater privileges in Toronto than Protestants. He had grave doubts as to the Protestantism of the City Council, the Catholics being able to get anything they wanted from the aldermen.

Rev. Dr. Douglas' famous speech next claimed his attention. He fully endorsed the Rev. Doctor in the stand he took regarding Sir John Thompson's religion. Sir John, Mr. Madill said, was worse than the Pope himself. Speaking on the prohibition question, Mr. Madill attacked his brethren of the Ministerial Association, alleging that they were afraid to commit themselves on the temperance question. The address was evidently enjoyed by the audience, the speaker's remarks being frequently interrupted by applause.

A VOICE FROM THE EAST

Raised by Rev. P. C. Parker Against the New Isolation Hospital Site.

Rev. P. C. Parker of the First-avenue Baptist Church preached last night from the story of the theft of Naboth's vineyard, as told in I. Kings, xxi. Pathetically he repeated the story of Naboth's murder and the theft of his inheritance by the rich and mighty Ahab. Then he drew a comparison between King Ahab and the municipal authorities of the city of Toronto in their dealings with the people of Riverside as regards the location of the Isolation Hospital. "Put down through the ages," he said, "the student of history will see the story of Ahab's sin repeated. The poor and industrious are continually being robbed of their rights by the rich and by those in authority."

The chief question in settling which site the hospital should occupy had been of finance—a discussion as to whether the real estate in Broadview or Winchester should be depreciated. To the speaker, however, it was a question as to whether or not the 15,000 people living east of the Don should be sandwiched between a foul ward and a diphtheria hospital. There were many parks, he said, in the city, yet the Mayor and aldermen had pounced on the only part east of the Don, and prostituted it for the headquarters of infection. It was the duty of legislators to protect the masses against the classes in this affair the Mayor had shown his duplicity. He had at first expressed himself in favor of the higher site, and afterwards in conference with the Attorney-General he favored the site near the Junction.

He had evidently thus shifted because the second site was farther away from his own property and from the property of people of his own political stripe. Their representatives in the Local Legislature had showed themselves traitors by sacrificing the people's interests to the interests of party.

The preacher did not feel that by taking this position he had himself liable to be charged with inhumanity to the suffering. He had often visited those sick of diphtheria at the risk of taking the disease home to his own children, but he did object to the people's only breathing place being made a source of disease. The hospital should be located outside the city limits.

Eleven Were Killed.

HARRISBURG, Pa., June 26.—The total number of victims by the wreck of the western express on the Pennsylvania Railroad Monday morning is 11. In addition, about 20 were more or less injured. The story of the accident is brief. The first section stopped within a few hundred yards of the Union Station, and was just starting when the second section, a heavy train, made up of Pullman sleepers and one express and baggage car combined, plunged into the handsome private car of Westinghouse and drove it forward, crushing the three day coaches ahead into kindling wood in the twinkling of an eye. Not a single member of the Westinghouse party was scratched. In the day coaches the awful carnage was taking place. Many passengers were half asleep, and were awakened by the horrible crashing and grinding of the timbers, the breaking of glass and the hissing of escaping steam, while others never knew the fate which overtook them.

H. S. Hayes, the telegraph operator at the Belton tower, adjudged before the coroner's inquest this afternoon that he was responsible for the wreck, having given Engineer Kelly the white signal to go on, without first having been notified that the block was clear. Hayes, who is a young man of 22, was arrested to-night on a charge of manslaughter.

The Grand Master's Big Lunch.

On Friday morning last Mr. J. Ross Robertson, proprietor of The Toronto Evening Telegram passed through Orangeville and dropped off at the C.P.R. station to have a lunch. He was charged 35 cents for three sandwiches and two cups of coffee, and kicked like a steer at the price. On Monday he had an editorial in The Telegram criticising the C.P.R. for allowing such a rate to be charged. J. Ross has a pick at the C.P.R., but he should know whereof he speaks when he ventures before the public. He would be charged 10 cents a sandwich at the Grand Trunk refreshment rooms, whereas the charge is only 5 cents here, and every restaurant on the line of the G.T.R. charges 10 cents for a cup of coffee. J. Ross should have known this, but it may be that he carries a lunch basket with him when he travels on the Grand Trunk. Very likely he expected a complimentary address and a free lunch when he struck the Orangeville station.—Orangeville Post.

A Policeman Roughly Handled.

Shortly after 8 o'clock Saturday night P. C. McRae [201] was called to eject a man named Robert Nodwell. No. 8 Nodwell-street, from a Yonge-street car near Bloor. Walker was allowed to proceed on his way, but, it is said, he became very boisterous and the policeman followed him, judging it best to take him into custody. A large crowd had gathered, and when the officer proceeded to arrest his man they closed around him and used him very roughly, inflicting several cuts and bruises. He stood the racket forbearingly for a time; but the kicks and thumps were coming in faster and he drew his baton and charged the crowd. It took three extra policemen to keep him from getting square with them. Nodwell was taken to the station and today will answer to the charge of having assaulted the policeman.
