SAY GIBRALTAR LESS VALUABLE

Some in England Would Exchange Famous Rock for Ceutra

Matter of Moment Since Mediterranean Becomes Gravity Centre for Navy.

LONDON, Aug. 18.—A visit by Major-General E. B. Ashmore and Air Vice Marshal J. M. Steele to Gibraltar to investigate the possibilities of its aerial defence draws attention to the question whether, assuming that Spain were willing, Great Britain should surrender the historic rock in exchange for Ceuta, on the African shore of the Straits.

The matter has become crucial since the Mediterranean has replaced the North Sea as the centre of gravity for the British Navy. It is argued that modern weapons greatly discount the value of Gibraltar as a fortress and as a secure base for the fleet. Experts who declare that Gibraltar is out of date point out that modern howitzers firing from the Spanish mainland could prevent ships entering the harbor.

Space is so restricted that taking-off and landing by aeroplanes are difficult, and the establishment of an effective aircraft base is said to be almost impossible. If sea communications were for any reason interrupted and at the same time Gibraltar was denied supplies from Spain, they says its resources could not maintain its garrison for long.

CEUTA'S CLAIMS

Ceuta, on the other hand, provided that a sufficient hinterland was included, would offer more favorable conditions for defence in time of war. There would be more room for manoeuvring the mobile elements of its military garrison; aircraft defence could be provided; its approach by land would be a difficult matter for an army of any size, owing to the natural difficulties of the surrounding country, and it could remain independent of supplies from overseas for a greater length of time.

The strongest argument on the other side is that heavy expenses and considerable delay would be involved in converting the harbor at Ceuta into a suitable naval base. In view of the large sums spent at Gibraltar in the past, and the urgent need for national economy, this would undoubtedly carry great weight.

There is also a sentimental argument. Gibraltar has been regarded as a vital British possession ever since Admiral Sir George Rooke, with Dutch aid, captured it in 1704. Its defence by Sir George Elliot in the great siege from 1779 to 1783 is one of the outstanding events in British history, and the story of how the chief attack from the sea was defeated by red-hot shot will never be forgotten. To abandon a fortress with such great associations would, no doubt, cause a vehement outcry.

A section of Spanish politicians vigorously demands the return of the rock to Spain, but there has been no suggestion of giving Great Britain Ceuta in return.

The Two Ports

Gibraltar is three miles in length and varies in breadth from one-quarter to three-quarters of a mile. The rock rises to 1,400 feet and is 12 miles from the African coast. The enclosed harbor covers 440 acres.

Ceuta is situated on a promontory connected with the mainland by a narrow isthmus. The promontory terminates in a headland with seven peaks, the highest of which—one of the "Pillars of Hercules"—rises 636 feet. The port is on the north side of the isthmus.

Hopi Indians Are Ready For Picturesque Snake Dance

Canadian Press.

WINSLOW, Ariz., Aug. 18—A three-day hunt completed, during which they rounded up and captured every available rattlesnake in the vicinity of their reservation, preliminaries for the annual snake dance of the Hopi Indians got under way in earnest at Walpi, their village near here, today.

The snake dance will take place tomorow, and tourists are gathering to watch the spectacle. The priests have made innumerable "prayer sticks," and today they are preparing charm paints and emetics. The Hopis are bitten frequently by the rattlesnakes during the ceremony, since they handle the reptiles without restraint, but no Indian has ever been known to die from a reptile's poison. The preparation used by the Hopis to counteract the poison never has been made known to the white man.

The snakes are washed and sprinkled with sacred meal. The prayers of the tribe are bestowed upon them and they are turned loose to carry the benedictions to the "snake mother," and to the "spider woman of the underworld."

ANOTHER VICTIM OF DEADLY MONOXIDE

Staten Island Motorist Falls Asleep in Garage With Auto Motor Running.

NEW YORK, Aug. 18—Tired from a long dirve, J. Frank Valentine, a purchasing agent, is believed to have fallen asleep at the wheel of his automobile as he brought it to a stop in the garage adjoining the home of his parents, with whom he lived, on Staten Island. The motor continued to run. The garage door swung shut and several hours later he was found dead from heart failure induced by carbon monoxide poisoning.

Valentine was 34 years old and unmarried.

The garage was small and the one window was shut. In a few minutes the fumes from the running motor began to fill the room. Valentine slept on while the rapidly forming poison commenced its work.

When the family arose and heard the engine running in the garage the father went out to investigate. He swung open the door and saw his son at the wheel and smelled the fumes. As soon as he could with safety he carried the body outside and called a doctor.

Efforts to revive the man proved useless.

SWINDLED WOMAN

Man Who Posed as Physician is Given Five Year Sentence.

NEW YORK, Aug. 18.—George Hamilton, 42 years old, of Boston, who swindled many women of small means out of their savings by posing as a wealthy physician and advertising in newspapers for a governess, was sentenced by Judge Mancuso in General Sessions to serve five years in Sing Sing. He had pleaded guilty to a charge of grand larceny in the second degree.

Hamilton readily admitted victimizing many women and freely discussed case after case with Captain Stapleton, to whose questions he sometimes replied by saying, "Well, I guess I got her, too. I don't remember exactly. What did she look like?" or "Let's see, how much did I get from her? Oh, yes, now I remember." He admitted obtaining amounts ranging from $10 to $650. He used such names as "Dr. La Grande, Dr. Lamonde, Dr. Leroy," and many others.

TUG OCEAN KING MAY NOT BE REPAIRED

Survey Shows Much Damage and Thought Repairs Would Cost Too Much.

Decision regarding whether or not the tug Ocean King will be repaired will be made within the next few days following a consultation with the insurance underwriters. The probabilities are said to be that the tug will not be repaired as the recent survey placed the cost at approximately $80,000. This was announced this afternoon by Frank G. Wilson, local manager of the Saint John Drydock and Shipbuilding Co. Ltd., on his return from Quebec.

The tug was badly damaged by the collision with the steamer Marloch about two months ago and the chains used in lifting the tug from the bottom of the river, he said, had also added considerably to the damage. There was a large hole in the side of the vessel near the engine room extending from the keel to the guard. The boiler had shifted and the woodwork and machinery were badly damaged from their sojourn at the bottom of the river.

The towing work of the company at Quebec, he declared, was being carried out at present by tugs secured at that port. The hole in the Ocean King had been temporarily patched up, and the vessel removed from the drydock pending a decision regarding whether or not repairs will be made.

WANTS RAILMEN ON C.N. DIRECTORATE

Mackenzie King Urges Change —Meighen Questions International Union Rule.

OTTAWA, Aug. 17—The great railway labor organizations of Canada should have representation on the Board of the Canadian National Railways, said Premier MacKenzie King, in the course of an address which he gave before the executive board of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen in session here today.

The Prime Minister was dealing with steps which had been taken to ensure labor a voice in the government of Canadian railways as well as of the country. He pointed to the appointment of Hon. James Murdock, Minister of Labor, as illustrating the fact that labor was represented in the government by a man who had risen from the ranks and been a member and official of one of the greatest railway organizations.

Right Hon. Arthur Meighen told the delegates that he believed in labor unions, but he did not know whether or not he favored international unions. The first duty of every Canadian was to Canada. "Don't let your fidelity to your great organization lead you to forget that," he counselled the delegates.

RAIN AIDS HARVEST IN WESTERN FIELDS

Second Largest Crop in History is Anticipated This Season.

CALGARY, Alta., Aug. 17—Alberta farmers are not in the least concerned over the three days' rain which interrupted harvest proceedings generally throughout the province.

Indeed, unless the rain is followed by frost it is felt that it will be a benefit, not only to the crops, but to grain being harvested now.

In some districts the straw became so brittle from the long season of hot, dry weather, that the heads broke off when touched by the binder. The rain will soften this straw and save a large percentage of the yield that would otherwise have been lost.

RICHEST CROP EVER HAD.

TORONTO, Aug. 17—A special despatch tt the Toronto Evening Telegram from Ottawa says: "With another two days without frost, the West will have the second largest crop in its history, and if present prices prevail, the most valuable of any," said Hon. W. R. Motherwell, Minister of Agriculture, who returned to the capital from the West today.

"In Alberta and Saskatchewan," he said, "coarse grains like barley, oats and flax will be below the average."

DECLARES CANADA NEEDS ADVERTISING

Swedish King's Attorney Urges Plan of Mixed Farming Here.

LAKE LOUISE, Alta., Aug. 17—"If Canada wants immigration she must learn to advertise her prosperity like the United States," Sir Adolph Johnson, the Swedish King's attorney at Minneapolis, said here today. Canada has the prosperity and everything else which goes to make a great nation, said Sir Adolph, but it has not the right system of letting the rest of the world know about it. Sweden, he said, has realized for years something that Canada has just begun to take notice of, and that is, that extensive wheat farming is poor business. As soon as Canada wakes up to the necessity of intensive and diversified farming it will not only attract Swedish but many other northern European immigrants who are well educated in this necessary system to a country with this climate.

One satisfied immigrant writing home to his friends is better than one million circulars, he observed. Canada is already getting some valuable free advertising out of its currency value in the United States. Let it set its farming situation right, and it will go ahead with the same effortless trend which has caused the United States to have to shut down its doors to immigration, he declared.

The nature of the documents was not revealed.
