LACROSSE DYING?

Ottawa, March 1—The Ottawa Citizen says:

"The announcement from Montreal yesterday that the National Lacrosse Club was not likely to be re-organized for the coming season caused considerable surprise in local sport circles, as the National Club has been the mainstay of lacrosse for many years, and its suspension would probably mean the death of the national game in the east. Lacrosse is practically gone at Toronto and in many other cities, but it was holding on grimly at Montreal. If the Nationals drop it, it may be all off."

TORONTO CHAMPIONS

Ottawa, March 1—The Journal-Press says:

"Ottawa's win over Canadiens at Quebec last night practically makes Torontos champions of the N.H.L. second half season. A triple tie is still possible, should Canadiens beat the blues in Toronto Saturday night, and Ottawa win from the same team next Monday. But in the event of such a thing happening the team with the best for and against goal percentage, would win out. Ottawa would have to score 6 goals in their next game without being scored on, while the Blues would have to have ten scored on them without tallying any themselves to win out."

EX-CZAR'S FAMILY PLAINLY HOUSED

Former Emperor of Russia Has No Modern Facilities in House

USUAL DAILY ROUTINE

Grand Duchesses Taking To Work to Pass Time

Says a despatch from Paris recently: Though things Russian are rather in disfavor just now a short account of the life led by the Romanoffs, the former imperial family, may prove of interest to our readers.

Toblosk has been called the "City of Death," its temperature rarely rising above the freezing point. Most of its houses are built of wood, the one where the Imperial family lives being one of the few brick dwellings in that part of the country. Its ground floor is occupied by a company of soldiers installed there as a guard. The two upper floors, consisting of fourteen rooms, most simply furnished, constitute the apartments of "Col. Romanof."

There is neither running water nor gas, neither electricity nor bathroom. The servants are obliged to draw from a nearby well the water needed for household purposes. The rooms are heated by brick ovens which burn wood. The largest room is not more than 16 feet by 10 feet.

The windows of the house look out on an unattractive landscape. There is not even a garden where the ex-Czar might dig and forget his boredom. A narrow balcony and a courtyard enclosed by high brick walls furnish the only breathing spots for the Imperial prisoners.

Nicholas Romanoff and his wife are practically condemned to the lives of recluses. Their sole outing consists of attending mass at the Cathedral of the Annuciation or at a neighboring monastery or going to the public baths, where as a special favor, the revolutionary authorities permit them to bathe once a week. Whenever they go out they are escorted by a platoon of soldiers commanded by officers of the guard.

The fare imposed upon the prisoners is of the most frugal nature. Once accustomed to the delicate refinements of French cooking, they are forced to be content with ordinary Russian dishes.

The people of Tobolsk show neither hostility nor sympathy toward the exiled family. Life in the small town is consistently monotonous. The existence of the former Emperor drags along in drab sadness. Now and then he is authorized to receive the visit of two faithful high fumnctionaries whom the revolutionary Government permitted to accompany him in his exile, Count Frederiks and Gen. Voyekov. To them he confides his regrets, his memories and his hopes.

Nicholas Romanoff said recently to Gen. Voyekov in an accent of profound resignation:

"Has my life not always been that of a prisoner? I do not regret my lost power. All I ask is to be allowed to retire to Crimea, where I could live surrounded by flowers. I feel more than ever that I would be peaceful and happy as a simple citizen of a republic."

His resignation in no wise is shared by the former Czarina Alexandra. Everything in her new mode of life wounds, shocks and irritates her. She was allowed to bring little luggage, fifteen trunks in all. Though at first glance this seems a large amount, it is not excessive when one takes into consideration that it comprises the complete wardrobe of five women and of the former Czar, who knew that their departure was forever.

It is almost impossible to buy suitable clothes at Tobolsk. The princesses took with them only four dresses. They left all their jewels at the Winter Palace. Rumor says that the ex-Empress found means to send secretly to Darmstadt before the revolutionary outbreak a great part of the crown jewels.

Nowadays Alexandra devotes herself to her children, whom she teaches not to resign themselves, but to remember. What makes her most indignant is that she is allowed neither to write nor receive letters that are not opened by the revolutionary officers. She constantly repeats to her daughters:

"Never forget what we are forced to bear at the present moment."

Her only confidante is Countess Narischkline, who was her lady-in-waiting and who was allowed to follow her to Tobolsk.

If the Grand Duchesses are allowed to come and go freely in the town without the vexation of any surveillance the same thing is not true of the ex-Czarevitch. Prince Alexis, who is familiarly known as Alioscha, can go out and play in the public parks whenever he likes, but he is watched by guards specially attached to his person. He is besides always accompanied by the giant sailor Derevenko, who is known by his many photographs and who carried the little Prince in his arms after the mysterious accident on the Imperial yacht. Alexis is well now, but his right leg is still a bit stiff.

The daughters of the former Czar lead a simple life. Grand Duchess Olga, the most serious of them all, has enrolled herself among the voluntary nurses of a military hospital to which are sent convalescents from Siberia and where she conscientiously passes several hours a day.

Grand Duchess Marie has taken up stenography and typewriting to help her father write his memoirs. But he dictates nothing and writes nothing. Sometimes he leans out of the only window, which overlooks the town, and watches his children when they go for a walk. He wears the undress uniform of a colonel of the Presvbajenskys and puts on a dignified air as soon as he thinks he is being observed. But when he thinks himself alone his back loses its stiffness, he hides his care-lined face in his hands, and this man whose hair has turned quite white, falls into melancholy brooding.

ALIEN SLACKERS.

By Courier Leased Wire

Washington, Feb. 28.—The alien slacker bill, barring from citizenship and authorizing the deportation of aliens of draft age who claim exemption from military service was transmitted to the Senate to-day after having been passed by the House last night by a vote of 244 to 21. The bill also authorizes the drafting of aliens for agricultural and manufacturing work.

The State Department, which has signed draft treaties with Great Britain and is completing some treaties with France and Italy, opposes the alien slacker bill on the ground that it might embarrass the United States in its negotiations.

LOOK AT CHILD'S TONGUE IF SICK CROSS, FEVERISH

When Constipated or Bilious give "California Syrup of Figs"

Look at the tongue, mother! If coated, it is a sure sign that your little one's stomach, liver and bowels need a gentle, thorough cleansing at once.

When peevish, cross, listless, pale, doesn't sleep, doesn't eat or act naturally, or is feverish, stomach sour, breath bad; has stomach-ache, sore throat, diarrhoea, full of cold, give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," and in a few hours all the foul, constipated waste, undigested food and sour bile gently moves out of its little bowels without griping, and you have a well, playful child again.

You needn't coax sick children to take this harmless "fruit laxative," they love its delicious taste, and it always makes them feel splendid.

Ask your druggist for a bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which has directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly on the bottle. Beware of counterfeits sold here. To be sure you get the genuine, ask to see that it is made by "California Fig Syrup Company." Refuse any other kind with contempt.

McFARLAND GAVE BOXING EXHIBITION

Says Training is Valuable to Soldiers When They Reach Front

By Courier Leased Wire

Louisville, Ky., Feb. 28.—Packey McFarland, boxing instructor at Camp Taylor, the new national army cantonment near Louisville, returned to-day from Frankfort, where last night he participated in a demonstration in the interest of a bill before the state senate legalizing boxing in Kentucky. An interested audience composed of members of the legislature, a number of women, business and professional men applauded the performance.

McFarland boxed four rounds with an amateur and delivered an address outlining why the government is teaching boxing at the national army cantonments, asserting it taught soldiers how to handle themselves when they came to grips with the Germans in the trenches, where space to use the bayonet might be too restricted.

It was indicated that the exhibition and the explanations of McFarland had gained considerable support for the bill, which is on the calendar of the senate.

NO FURTHER WORD.

Washington, Feb. 28.—No further word from United States ambassador Francis as to his plans for leaving Petrograd had been received here early to-day and Secretary of State Lansing, when asked about unofficial reports that the ambassador and some of the other embassies had departed, declared the State department had no information whatever.

PEACE APOSTLE DEAD

Rome, March 1—Ernesto Teodoro Moneta, formerly known in Italy as the "apostle of peace," has died in Milan, at the age of 85. Although a soldier of considerable prominence during his early years, Signor Moneta had devoted himself for nearly 50 years to the cause of international peace. He received the Nobel peace prize in 1907.
