Catarrh.

For this complaint the only substantial benefit can be obtained through the blood. VEGETINE is the great blood purifier.

Dyspepsia.

If VEGETINE is taken regularly, according to directions, a certain and speedy cure will follow its use.

VEGETINE acts directly upon the cause of these complaints. It invigorates and strengthens the whole system, acts upon the secretive organs and allays inflamation.

General Debility.

In this complaint the good effects of the Vegetine are realized immediately after commencing to take it; as debility denotes degeiency of the blood, and Vegetine acts directly upon the blood.

Miramichi Advance

CHATHAM. - - - NOVEMBER 20, 1879.

One Theme for the next Session of Parliament.

[From the Telegraph.]

Notwithstanding that the Ministers have an overwhelming majority of supporters at their backs, it may safely be predicted that they will find next session more troublesome than even the preceding one, in which they stood on the brink of disruption on the Letellier matter. Apart from the protests and petitions that may be expected from various parts of Canada against the more oppressive phases of the tariff at least, which even the present Government may hesitate to perpetuate, there is sure to be a discussion on the despatches which have just come to light in regard to the dismissal of Mr. Letellier. These despatches show that the Governor-General flatly refused to dismiss Mr. Letellier; that Sir John Macdonald then counselled a remission of the matter to England, giving out at the same time that it was the Governor-General, as an Imperial officer, who had determined on that reference, and causing the Conservative Press, with few exceptions, to assail the Queen's Representative, in no measured terms, for complying with the advice of the wily Premier! The terms in which Sir John originally announced to Parliament the conclusion arrived at, were unjust to the Governor-General who expressed his dissatisfaction therewith and required a second statement to be made. Nothing, however, transpired which disclosed or even hinted at the fact that the reference to England emanated from the brain of Sir John, although the Government before the session closed were compelled very fully to acknowledge their responsibility for the act. In one part of the note in which Sir John narrated what had occurred between the Governor-General and himself, an ambiguous expression is used and permitted to pass, the effect of which was to keep Sir John clear of the advice given by him, and to make it appear that the action was that of the Governor-General as an Imperial officer! Mr. Ouimet made some severe remarks on the Governor-General for resolving to send the case to England, holding that this was an infringement of Responsible Government—the very thing that Sir John had advised. Sir John, in replying to Mr. Ouimet still guards the secret and keeps up the deception, though Mr. Vallee and Mr. Mousseau both speak in the same strain and then come the denunciations of the Conservative Press against the unoffending Governor-General! The Toronto Globe's files of those papers enable it to make some extracts of the comments to which we refer, which to say the least, constitute very interesting reading. We quote:—

[La Minerve.]

"The Letellier affair has assumed a new phase. Sir John A. McDonald announced in the House yesterday that the Sovereign had reserved for transmission to England the dismissal of Mr. Letellier, which the Government had decreed. We have now two outrages instead of one. That's all, and the young man who represents the Queen at Ottawa is no better than the pirate who represents the Queen at Quebec. And England demands our affection?'

"Yesterday, in a few words, we expressed our opinion on the unhappy resolve of the Governor-General. It has been contemplated for a long time, and the most painful thing is, that he did not comprehend the duties of his position well enough to contemplate it with discretion. Advisers, strangers to his Cabinet, have had his ear and his confidence."

[Montreal Gazette.]

"The revival of Downing-street rule That is what is involved in this matter. * * * * There have been evidences of the most painful character lately of the tendency towards the revival of personal as distinguished from responsible or parliamentary government, and it may be that the old battle, which was so heroically fought, and, as everybody supposed, won, may have to be fought over again. If this is the case, we have no fear for the result. The people of Canada have enjoyed too long a system under which the Government of the country was carried on by Ministers responsible to the people, as represented in Parliament, to willingly give it up, and it will depend upon the action of the Imperial authorities whether a discussion which all loyal men would deeply deplore is to be forced upon the people of Canada."

[Ottawa Herald.]

"The whole thing only serves to show how anomalous is our quasi-independent position, and how at any moment the attenuated bond of British connection may be snapped apart. We are not amongst those who are afraid to look this issue squarely in the face. It must come sooner or later. Perhaps this crisis may bring it on sooner than expected."

Ottawa Citizen.

"We feel that His Excellency's decision, dictated, as we have said, by motives at once honorable and conscientious, to refer the matter to the Imperial authorities, is unfortunate. It at once suggests the question, 'Have we, as Canadians, any individual power to make precedents applicable to our system of local self government, and must all inter-Federal irregularities, if the term may be so employed, be remedied by our own constituted authorities, or by Imperial law officers?'"

[London Herald.]

"A young man of mediocre ability and no legislative experience, he was sent to Canada to remove him from the very unpleasant position to which court etiquette compelled him to submit. On public occasions he could not walk beside his wife, and dare not even venture to sit down in her presence where any other members of the Royal Family present. * * * By referring the question to the Home Government he did not at all shake the foundations of responsible government in Canada, but he made a rather humiliating confession of his own utter inability to fill the important and responsible position in which he is placed."

[Canadian, Quebec.]

"The act of the Marquis of Lorne is one of arbitrary interference in the exercise of responsible government in Canada. No thing can justify it. We shall have to bid adieu to popular liberties if the will of Parliament can be thus fettered continually by him who represents the Crown in our midst. * * * This attitude of the Governor-General is a fresh violation of the constitutional liberties of the people of the Dominion."

When the despatches on this subject are dealt with by Parliament, and their study is facilitated by reference to the utterances of the supporters of the Government at the time and of their Press, all the tame Ministerial followers the House of Commons may contain cannot prevent a discussion which will be damaging to the Government, whose members must all stand by the Premier, as most of them did before in circumstances of the same trying character. Our readers may compare the Governor-General's plain and unvarnished statement with the utterances of the Government, their supporters and their Press at the time. In doing so they will wonder how the friendly relations between the Governor-General and the Ministry could have been preserved, and they will conclude that such a piece of political deception could not well be repeated. Here is what the Governor-General says as to his course when advised to dismiss Mr. Letellier:—

"I said that Sir John must know from what I had already stated to him on this subject, that I could not agree in the policy he recommended, but requested him to give his reason in writing, and told him I should put my reasons against such a policy in writing. He intimated that he would do as I requested. I said further that I considered that the dismissal of the Lieutenant Governor would set a dangerous precedent. On Wednesday, the 2nd of April, Sir John again came to me and informed me, that as an alternative he suggested that the question involved in the dismissal of the Lieutenant Governor of Quebec should be referred to Her Majesty's Government."

Comment is needless.

D. Lothrop & Co.'s Fall Books.

No publishing house in the country is making more active preparations for the holiday trade than D. Lothrop & Co., and their list of announcements exceeds in extent and attractiveness that of any past year. As usual, the strongest effort has been made in behalf of young readers, and the books offered for their delectation are as beautiful in their outside appearance as they are fascinating inside. Stories in prose and stories in poetry, funny stories, apthetic stories, stories in natural history and stories about people and places, delightfully written and charmingly illustrated, from a large proportion of the catalogue, while books adapted to the needs and capacities of older readers are not wanting.

Among the larger and more important books are Mr. Benjamin's American Artists, an elegant quarto volume, filled with portraits of some of our most famous painters, with illustrations from their own hands, drawn expressly for the work; a second volume of Poets' Homes, brought out in the same manner, containing portraits and biographies of Holmes, Bryant, Emerson, Paul H. Hayne, John Boyle O'Reilly, and other prominent authors; a new edition of Out of Darkness into Light, a volume which a New York critic calls "a rich work of art;" a red line, quarto edition of Pilgrims' Progress, on plate paper, with 17 full-page illustrations, splendidly bound; Story of Prayers of Christian History, by the author of Story of the Hymns; Thoughts that Breathe, consisting of choice extracts from the works of Dean Stanley, with an introduction by Phillips Books; a new edition of Jesus, Lover of My Soul; a gift book for young ladies called Christmas Pie, illustrated by Miss Lathbury; Christmas Snow-flakes, a large and elegant quarto volume of original poems by American authors, with choice illustrations, richly and uniquely bound, and Dr. Smith's America, our National Hymn, with several exquisite engravings and a sketch of the author.

Of the books for young people, prominent is Wide Awake Pleasure Book "F," uniform with the five volumes which have preceded it, yet with a richer and more attractive table of contents than either of them; Don Quixote, Jr., being a history of the further adventures of Miltiades Peterkin Paul; Miss Yonge's Young Folks' History of France and Rome; The Dogberry Bunch; Royal Lowrie's Last Year at St. Olave's; and Breakfast for Two, by Joanna Mathews. Others are in preparation and will be early announced.

But it is the children who have particular reason to feel grateful to the Messrs. Lothrop, who have provided for them a list perfectly bewildering in its variety and attractiveness. One of the first books to tempt the eye of little patrons is Child Lore, a beautifully bound quarto volume with engravings and colored illustrations. It contains the "Babyland Classics," old and new, with short rhymes and jingles, compiled and edited by Clara Doty Bates, and is good for all times and seasons of the year. Once upon a Time, by Miss E. E. Brown, is a charming book of story plays, illustrated of course, and bound in taking style. Then there are Stories and Pictures of Domestic Animals, and Stories and Pictures of Wild Animals, companion books, in large type, in chromo board covers; a new edition of Little Lucy's Wonderful Globe; Children's Funny Book, a big quarto, full of pictures; the Birthday Picture Book, with thirty full-page engravings and mottoes for each day in the month; and several "baby books," chief among them Babyland for 1879, Baby's Object-Lesson Book, and Baby's Portfolio.

Unusual attractions are also offered in the little "Libraries" and "Series." The Wide Awake Library, containing the eight volumes of the magazine, ought to be in the possession of every family where there are children, and no cheaper or more fitting present could be made by parents than this. The Out of School Series, consisting of four volumes by popular writers, is a special attraction. Then there are the Merry and True series of 10 volumes; Little Chats with Little Folks, 6 books in a box; Baby Classic Toy Books; Favorite Quarto Toy Books; the Natural History Series and Stories, and Johnny's Discoveries, in three volumes.

The presentation book upon which the Messrs. Lothrop are bestowing particular attention, and which, from its peculiar character, ought to have special attraction for every patriotic American, is Dr. S. F. Smith's America, which for nearly half a century has served as our national hymn. It is to be brought out in large quarto form, magnificently illustrated and bound, and containing, beside the hymn, an illustrated sketch of the venerable author, who is still living. It would be interesting if we could know the various important occasions upon which this hymn has been sung since it was first written. During the war it exerted a wonderful influence at home and in the field in the way of strengthening patriotic feeling, and it has lost none of its popularity or power since. The volume which presents it is artistic and beautiful, and it should be found in the household of every true American.

The five handsomely printed volumes which constitute the Idle Hour Series, and which have put off their light summer clothing for tasteful cloth covers, claim the attention of all lovers of choice literature. They have all been warmly praised by the press, and in their cheaper form have had a large and steady sale. Their character is not ephemeral, nor are they simply intended as "summer books,' One can enjoy the experiences of the Two Girls who Tried Farming by a coal fire as
