"ON THE PIKE."

The Sights and Scenes in the Exhibition Midway.

Ladies and gentlemen, lads and lassies, believers and scoffers,—THE PIKE. Behold the spice of the great show, and marvel. Walk up and taste of it. You'll never regret it; you'll never forget it. If you lose your money in trying to get the best of some plausible proprietor sharper than yourself, why you can hardly sorrow over so valuable an experience. It is possible the memory of such a loss can become dim.

When can their glory fade?
Oh, the big hauls they made.
Hurrah for the Pike brigade.

(The writer was half distracted by the shouts of the cane-sellers and couldn't think of another line, even though it promised to make him an immortal. This in confidence).

The pike is that broad, windy, chill thoroughfare with tents and rough board booths on each side. You've been through it, of course. It's a clamorous locality. That atrocity known as a merry-go-round wheezes and delights. The band at the horse show end of the street glitters and crashes. Compact gentlemen, smooth shaven and nimble fingered, bellow strange invitations at the shifting throngs.

That bent old man who originated beneath the sapphire skies of Italy is responsible for the hurdy-gurdy's wearisome grind. The musician wears a moustache of formidable proportions. As an object of profound admiration it ranks second to the monkey.

It seems ridiculously easy to toss a wooden ring over the head of a cane. You stand merely a few feet away and, as you pick the ring up and choose the cane with the dollar bill twisted through the handle, a pang of regret penetrates you. The benumbed and cheerful proprietor is doubtless a poor man. Why should you swoop down on his little enterprise and for a few coppers are permitted, through his largeness of soul, to practically rob him of his stock.

You throw the ring with easy confidence. You are mildly surprised when it clatters down between the cane heads, not around one. Another try, another one, and yet another, and they all go everywhere but in the place you want them to. You have paid your money. The choice has been taken.

There's nothing to be gained in showing discomfiture, but there's something particularly offensive about that cry:—

"Step right along, gentlemen. Here's where you get your chance. Canes worth a dollar won for a dime. The cane you ring is the cane you win." (Tremendous emphasis on the last two words).

A tattered spread of wind buffed canvas has a deadly fascination. It is painted. The work is not art. It suggests the dream of a man in the throes of the delirium tremens. You read and are enlightened; all that then remains for you to do is to pay and behold. You can see a few of the victims of old Mount Polee's displeasure, charred bones and the like. Through the tent flap can be observed a row of forms around a canvas enclosure. You join them and straightaway admire the nerve of side show proprietors in general.

The tent where tin type pictures are taken at dizzy speed, scarcely needs the exhortations of the photographer and assistants. The country visitors submit to the frenzied requests. They are fond of being taken in groups.

Ingenious are the devices for snaring you. The show men want your wealth; they hunger for it.

THE DAIRY COW

Instructive Talk by W. F. Stephen of Qu bec, and Mr. Robertson of Nappan.

W. F. Stephen, of Springbrook Farm, Trout River (Que.), delivered at 3 o'clock an instructive lecture on the points desirable in a dairy cow. Four cows, representing the Holstein, Guernsey, Jersey and Ayrshire breeds, were shown.

Mr. Stephen pointed out that the dairy exhibit was one of the most important in the exhibition.

The dairy industry was of the utmost value to Canada, for in a single year it represented $50,000,000. As an exhibit, dairy stock and products perhaps did not draw the largest crowds, but to the Canadian farmer dairying represented a good income. In order to realize the greatest profit one must own the best cow. The dairy animal had a conformation differing from beef stock. In a desirable dairy cow there should be large mouth, indicating good digestive power, large nostrils, showing lung capacity, and not too long nor short nozzle. The forehead should be broad and the eye full. Too great length of neck indicated a physical slackness. The shoulders of the well bred cow for dairying purposes ought not to be of unusual heaviness. The spinal column should be strong and the levelness will be set well back. A weighty brisket is not found in the ideal dairy cow, nor too great a hollowness behind the elbow, which is indicative of lung weakness. The length from rib to loin bone should be generous, also the space between the ribs. In the well bred cow the depth is carried well back, and there is not too great a shortness in the quarter. The bag wants to be carried well forward. It should not hang too deeply behind, and it is of importance to have it well balanced. In the real dairy animal the buttocks are of medium size, and the udder is carried well up.

Mr. Stephen took as an example the Ayrshire cow. The marking of the Ayrshire is as a general rule very pleasing to the eye. In an animal of that breed the head is uniform, the neck of medium length, the shoulder pointed, and the back straight and wedge shaped.

"What is chiefly wanted in dairy cows," said Mr. Stephen, "is the ability to fill the pail. The farmer wants plenty of milk, and a good percentage of butter fat. Beauty should not interfere with utility."

In an Ayrshire the nozzle is longer and the horns longer than in a Holstein, and while further describing the differences between the breeds, Mr. Stephen drew attention to the fact that in all cows the milk veins and wells should be well developed.

The Holstein belonged to one of the greatest milking breeds in the world.

The Guernsey is dull orange in color and the great characteristic of the breed is to give abundance of rich milk.

The Jersey is also celebrated for the richness of its milk and the true cow of that breed has black feet and head with mouse colored nose.

Talk by Mr. Robertson.

A brief address on the Guernsey bull was given by Mr. Robertson, manager of the government experimental farm at Nappan (N. S.) A splendid appearing bull, the property of Mr. McMonagle, was driven up and Mr. Robertson declared him to be about as fine an animal of the type as he had ever seen.

In judging Guernsey bulls Mr. Robertson pointed out that a man could hardly be guided by the evidence seen in the animal as in examining sheep or horses. He would have to have an ideal in mind. To be a successful dairyman one must constantly study his business and in arriving at as correct estimation of an animal he must depend largely on his experience.

The Horse Show.

In class B, section five, there were ten entries: Doc, by J. P. Kiervin; Lulu Lumps, by H. H. Mott; Frank, by J. P. Gillespie; Bertha McKiney, by S. A. Fowler; Billie, by C. H. Peters; Black Sheep, by Mrs. A. H. Bell; Wilkes, by W. H. Barnaby, and Banker, by Geo. McAvity. The class was single gelding or mare, in light harness to suitable vehicle. Doc, Bertha McKinny, Billie and Banker were retired, and the other six had another spin around the track. The first prize finally went to Kid McCoy, owned by W. H. Barnaby; second to Lulu Lumps, by H. H. Mott, and third to Star, by A. L. Fowler.

In class C, section two, saddle horse ridden by lady, the entries were Willie C, owned by J. H. Bond and ridden by Mrs. Coster; Brownstone, owned by D. C. Clinch and ridden by Mrs. Guy Hart, of Halifax; Chief Clark's horse, ridden by Miss Markha[illegible] Valkyrie, owned and ridden by Mrs. M[illegible] of Halifax. The four ladies [illegible] subject of many admiring comme[illegible] their skill in horsewomanship. [illegible] went to Mrs. Hartt, the second [illegible] Coster, and the third to Mrs. McKinnon. Mr. Clinch's horse was thus the winner.

In a pony tandem competition, H. H. Learmont, Montreal, got first prize, and F. E. Came, St. Andrews, second. There were only two entries.

Then followed a gymkana race between six troopers, Sergt.-Major Cother, Sergt. Porter, Corp. Smith, and Privates Ryder, Fitzgerald and Izzard. First prize went to Smith, second to Fitzgerald, and third to Ryder.

In class A, section two, harness horse shown to two-wheeled cart, there were four entries. H. H. Learmont took first, W. J. Pearson second, and Stampede, owned by W. J. Dickey, of Gagetown, third. The other entry was Rydale Fashion, by F. L. Fuller, Truro.

In class A, section seven, unicorn, first went to Pearson and second to Learmont, both of Montreal.

The six troopers next competed in a running race. J. Izzard took first, Corp. Smith second, and Sergt.-Major Cother third.

In the sporting tandem, W. J. Pearson took first, and Nellie and Islington, entered by Allison and Bond, second.

In class B, section eight, championship single horse, the entries were of horses that had won first prizes. Pearson, of Montreal, took first; S. A. Fowler, of St. John, second; J. B. Gillesp[illegible] Frank, third. The other entries we[illegible] Kensarge Jr., by J. D. Reid, Frederic[illegible] and one by Holmes Bros., Amherst.

In class C, section seven, combination and saddle and harness horse, there were six en[illegible]s. Learmont took first, W. S. Allison, with Islington second; and D. C. Clinch, with Bro[illegible]one, third. The other entries were N[illegible] Invernenty, by Dr. M[illegible] Large Jr., by Reid; Guardian [illegible] Fowler, M. P.

The troopers raced ag[illegible] won again, with Smith second [illegible]

In class A, section six, [illegible] single horse, in heavy harness, [illegible] took first; Pearson second, and [illegible] The other entries were by [illegible] Dickey.

Class nine, section one, gentleman saddle horse, was a repetition of a former one. Learmont took first, D. C. Clinch second, and W. S. Allison third. The other entries were Nellie C, by Bond, and one by Pearson.

George McAvity's matched pair of carriage horses were the only entry in class eighteen, section one. This concluded the horse show.

It is no unusual thing for a vessel plying between Japan and London to carry 1,000,000 fans of all kinds as part of her cargo.
