The Manitoulin Expositor urges the local government to give additional representation to the districts of Algoma and Muskoka and says: "It is simply folly to expect one man to represent a district 800 miles long." The Expositor also thinks that townships where there are a hundred families should be incorporated into municipalities.

In answer to representations from a farmers' delegation the executive council of Manitoba replied that the council was always ready to do its best to aid railways, that the province could not legally undertake the construction of the Hudson's Bay route outside its own limits, that the chartering of local railways to connect with the American system south of the boundary would be beyond the power of the province, and that the government intended at the next session of the legislature to grant powers to the municipalities enabling them to assist in the building of elevators and grain warehouses.

Mr. F. Vivian, formerly of Chatham, Ont., was in Chicago with a friend, when both were touched on the shoulder by two detectives, who told them to accompany them to the station. They wanted to know why they were arrested, and protested their innocence of having done anything wrong. In spite of their protestations they were placed in the coolers and were kept there for four hours, when a letter of introduction to the proprietor of the Grand Pacific, belonging to Mr. Vivian, having been verified, they were released. It was explained that they had been taken for two forgers, whose photographs they resembled.

Dr. Orton, M.P. for Centre Wellington, replying to the toast of the dominion parliament spoke at such length that the company became impatient and finally hooted him down. Mr. Royal made a patriotic speech, scouting the idea of looking to Washington for redress. Attorney-general Miller warmly defended himself against charges that he had snubbed a grievance delegation.

PROMINENT PERSONS.

The governor-general will attend the Royal Canadian yacht club ball here on Jan. 11, but will not go to Niagara as at first intended.

B. Frank Reese, member of the reportorial staff of the Buffalo Commercial Advertiser, is dead. In 1882 he married Miss Gertrude Elliott, daughter of the late Major Elliott of Toronto.

Very Rev. Monsignor Loviz Hostlot, D.D., of the archdiocese of New York, now rector of the catholic American college at Rome, is seriously ill and was unable to attend the New Year's reception of the pope.

Prof. Leopold von Ranke, who celebrated on Dec. 21 his 88th birthday, has just completed the fourth volume of his Universal History, which bears the title, "The Empire in Constantinople, and the Origin of the German-Romance Kingdoms."

Advertising pays. The fortune of Holloway, the London pill-maker, is estimated at $25,000,000. A correspondent of the New York Sun says: The pills and ointment cost almost nothing, but his advertising, which began with $25,000, is now more than $250,000 yearly.

John B. Gough contemplates a departure from the lyceum platform to religious revivalism. He told a reporter that profanity was his besetting sin. He was not at all inclined to intersperse his ordinary conversation with oaths, but when suddenly excited a whopper was apt to pop out of his mouth.

It is stated that Millais, the painter, is to be made a baronet. He has sufficient property qualification, being worth a million of dollars, and is earning a large yearly income. He will be the first painter baronet as Tennyson has been the first poet peer. Mr. Millais's only sister is the wife of Mr. Lester Wallack. There have been various painter knights like Reynolds, Lawrence and Sir F. Leighton.

Charley wanted to give Clara a Christmas present, but couldn't make up his mind what it should be; so the next time he called he frankly told her the difficulty under which he was laboring. "Want to make me a present, Charley!" Clara exclaimed, in well-disguised astonishment. "Why, Charley, you forget yourself." Charley took the hint and offered himself on the spot.

Mr. Parnell's movements have been always wrapped in much mystery. He is seldom in Ireland, and there are not more than half a dozen to whom his London residence is known. His sudden disappearance from the scene in the midst of more than one great crisis occasioned some reflection, and for some while preceding his recent triumphant appearance in Dublin his Cork constituents could not hear from him or ascertain his whereabouts.

The famous Whitefield, who was a genuine revivalist and also a christian, was on one occasion passing along the street of a city when he was saluted by a wretched sot in the gutter: "How d' do, Mis'r Whitefield. Don't yer know me?" "No," was the reply. "Why, I'm one er yer converts, Mis'r Whitefield." "Well," was the reply; "you look as though you might be one of my converts. If the Lord had converted you you wouldn't have been there."

Oddly associated with the name of Benjamin Disraeli is a Blenheim bitch belonging to Bulwer's wife: "The little dog was her constant companion, and its name, Fairy, she had painted on tiny visiting cards, which she used to leave with her own upon her friends and neighbors. She was deeply affected by the death of this little animal, which occurred about the same time as that of Mr. Wyndham Lewes, the first husband of the late Lady Beaconsfield, to whom she wrote a letter of condolence on that event, comparing their respective losses, and lamenting her own as being, in the nature of things, the heaviest and most irreparable of the two."

THE WORLD AT LARGE.

In the English queen's bench lately it was held that marriage with a niece of deceased wife is illegal.

Mr. Alma Tadema denies that he arranged Mary Anderson's dress as Galatea. He was not even present at the stage rehersal. She was dressed, he says, from the design of Mr. Frank D. Millett, the New York painter. He thinks the impression of the piece more Parisian than Athenian.

The War Cry, the official gazette of Gen. Booth's salvation army, is published in English, French, Swedish, and several other languages. They sent out last year 250,000,000 copies, and $85,000 worth of musical instruments, uniforms, and badges. The grand army comprises 630 corps, 130 of which are abroad.

Mr. Burt, the English M.P., who has been recently visiting the mining districts of this country, writes that the wages of workmen connected with the iron trade is $2.50 a day, and of ordinary laborers from $1.25 to $1.50, but that work is irregular. Trades unions are not strong, and co-operation, which has taken such deep root among the colliers in England, does not flourish here.

At Leeds lately Mr. Arthur Nicols delivered a lecture on Snakes and Snake Charming," in which he gave an instance of the appearance of the sea serpent which occurred in his own experience. It turned out to be the body of a dead whale around which were collected thousands of gulls and albatrosses, and which simulated the shape and form of a monster with a main and long tail. It is a pity that every master of a vessel from which the sea serpent is seen has not courage enough to steer close to it, so that its real nature may be made evident.

A well-known clergyman in the north of England entertained recently a brother clergyman from some distance. The evening being unpropitious, he asked him to remain for the night. At dusk the clergyman asked his guest to step into the manse while he gave orders to have his conveyance ready in the morning. As the visitor entered the manse the clergyman's wife mistook him in the dusk for her husband, and, seizing the pulpit bible which was on the lobby table, brought the full weight of it across his shoulders, exclaiming emphatically, "Take that for asking the ugly wretch to stay all night."

In Bavaria it is illegal to criticise, even in a friendly spirit, the actions of the king. Soon after the termination of the Franco-German war a story was told of a meeting in the streets of Munich between the king of Bavaria and a wounded soldier, during which the king finding that he was not recognized expressed his surprise. "How should I know your majesty?" said the soldier in explanation. "You never go to the army, and I never go to the play." To the publication of this anecdote may probably be attributed the determination taken by the king not tolerate remarks of any kind on his private movements.

Several relics of Sir Joshua Reynolds will be seen at the forthcoming exhibition of his works at Grosvenor gallery, in London—among them his silver spectacles, snuffbox of tortoise shell, trimmed with gold, and three pen and ink sketches which first attracted attention to his precocious powers, one a little picture of a perch, drawn from life; next a little interior of a library, copied "with all the minuteness and delicacy of Cullo or Della Bella," and third, a perspective on the back of a Latin theme, done when he was only eight years old.

The Copland system of asphaltic wood pavement, introduced in London, is claimed to meet some of the most important requirements for the purposes which have hitherto been unfulfilled, and, though more costly at first than some other methods of roadway construction, its durability and satisfactory wear more than meet that point. The advantage of simplicity is at once presented, namely, a bed of concrete, with a layer af asphalt over it, upon which are laid transverse courses of red pine blocks, with intermediate spaces; these spaces are filled in partly with heated mastic asphalt, and then with coarse lime and gravel grout, flushed with hot air, to the surface of the roadway. Finally, about an inch of rough gravel is spread over the whole, and left to be worked in and compacted by the ordinary effect of traffic.

A school-girl on bangs—"With all they're false I love them still."

A Wife for a Quart of Beer.

From the London Telegraph.

Before Mr. Justice Denman at the Liverpool assizes yesterday, Betzy Wardle was charged with marrying George Chisnal at Eccleston bigamously, her former husband being alive. The case was a peculiar one. It was stated by the women that as her first husband had sold her for a quart of beer she thought she was at liberty to marry again.

His Lordship—That is not what she stated before the magistrate. She said then that he was idle and would not work. When she left him she took the child with her, and he said if she would let him have the child he would not trouble her any further. He added that he would sell her for a quart of beer.

Prisoner—Please your worship, he did so. [Laughter.]

His Lordship—Is there anybody here who knows that?

Yes, my lord, Alice Roseby and Margaret Bown.

His Lordship—Call Margaret Brown.

Margaret Brown thereupon stepped into the box and was cross-examined by his lordship. She said she was present at the second marriage. She knew the first husband, Wardle, was alive; she was told that he had sold her for a quart of beer.

His Lordship—You believed it would be binding? Yes, sir.

His Lordship—And you thought it right she should marry again? She wished me to give her away and I did so. [Laughter.]

His Lordship—You helped her to commit bigamy. Take care you do not do it again or you will get yourself into trouble.

Alice Roseby was next called and said she saw Wardle drink one glass of the quart.

His Lordship—Who was the bargain made with? With George Chisnal.

His Lordship—I am not sure that you are not guilty of bigamy or of being accessory before the fact. You must not do this sort of thing again. People have no right to sell their wives for a quart of beer or anything else. (Laughter.)

George Chisnal, the second husband, apparently just out of his teens, was the next witness called.

His Lordship—How did you come to marry this woman? Witness (in the Lancashire vernacular) — Hoo did what? (Laughter.) Question repeated. A bowt her. (Laughter.)

His Lordship—You are not fool enough to suppose you can buy another man's wife? Oi. [Laughter.]

His Lordship—How much did you give her? Sixpence. [Great laughter.]

His Lordship—You are as guilty as she is. You are an accessory before the fact to her committing bigamy. You have committed bigamy yourself. Everybody has committed bigamy in this case. [Laughter.] Go down.

The witness left the box with alacrity, but was immediately recalled by his lordship, who asked him how long he had lived with the prisoner.

Witness—Going on for three years.

His Lordship—Do you want to take her back again?

Witness—Awl keep her if you loike. [Laughter.]

His Lordship—You need not keep her if you do not want. She is Wardle's wife.

Mr. Swift, addressing his lordship, said all he wished to say on behalf of this unfortunate woman was this, that she seemed to have met with a bad husband in the first place, and an ignorant man in the second. He could only venture to hope that his lordship would not think it a case in which she ought to be punished, at least not severely.

His lordship directed that Wardle should be called and this was done without eliciting any answer.

His lordship (addressing the prisoner)—It is absolutely necessary that I should pass some punishment upon you in order that people may understand that men have no more right to sell their wives than they have to sell other people's wives, or to sell other people's horses or cows, or anything of the kind. You cannot make that a legal transaction. So many of you seem to be ignorant of that that it is necessary that I should give you some punishment in order that you may understand it. It is not necessary that it should be long, but you must be imprisoned and kept to hard labor for one week.

—Grigg House, London, August 1883. To the Manager Merchants Co.: Dear Sir—I have pleasure in reporting on the merits of "Nonsuch" which has received a thorough trial in my establishment. "Nonsuch" does all that you claim for it. It thoroughly cleans the clothes without the usual labor and trouble; the washboard is not needed, and boiling and wringing are about all that are necessary to bring out the clothes a beautiful white color. Please send me one gross for use at my hotel. I am, dear sir, Yours, etc., Samuel Grigg. For sale by all grocers. Lowden & Co., 55 Front street, Agents for Toronto.

TO THE ELECTORS OF ST. DAVID'S WARD

FELLOW ELECTORS.—Having been nominated as one of your representatives in the City Council, against my own will and seeking, I beg to state that I should have retired from that position on nomination day had it not been for certain remarks. Having taken these remarks into consideration, in justice to myself and in deference to your wishes, I place the matter entirely in your hands.

Should you from past experience of my readiness to promote improvements in the ward of which I have been so long a resident, deem me worthy of your suffrages, I respectfully solicit your votes, and pledge myself to endeavor to promote the interest of our ward, and the affairs of the city. To prove your sincerity, and to show that you have no sympathy with party feeling, place at the head of the poll.
