For many years he was a member of the Colborne Street Methodist Church. The funeral will be held on Saturday from his residence, 803 Colborne street, to Mount Pleasant Cemetery. Rev. J. Kelly will conduct the services.

LONDON WILL NOT GET ASSUMPTION COLLEGE FOR SOME TIME YET

Head of Sandwich College Makes Announcement To That Effect Today.

[Special to The Advertiser.]

Windsor, Jan. 23.—There is no prospect of the removal of Assumption College from Sandwich to London in the immediate future at least, it was learned here on good authority today.

Negotiations were completed recently for affiliation with Western University, and a provision made at that time for erection of an arts college in London, should the number of pupils warrant establishment in London. In any event, the present buildings at Sandwich will be retained for high school purposes.

Father Muckle, president of the college issued the following official statement today:

"The affiliation of Assumption College with Western University was entered into recently looking forward to the time when it might become practical to move the college department (arts) to London. Since that time there has been no further development of the plan on the part of the college. Rome was not built in a day."

WELFARE COMMITTEE OF "Y" TO LEND SUPPORT TO ORGANIZATION OF GIRLS IN TEXTILE BUSINESS

Widespread Interest in Meeting Is Shown—Some of Those Concerned Getting Only $6 a Week, Says Organizer.

Widespread interest is being taken in the organization of the local textile workers. When the organization meeting is held in Hyman Hall on Tuesday the industrial welfare committee of the Y. M. C. A. will take a hand. The meeting is an open one and besides the work of organization there will be a musical program.

Parents of employees, especially of the girls, in the textile mills, are invited to the meeting to listen to discussions and talks on various phases of the conditions and work in the mills.

Some Low as $6 Weekly.

John Thomas, international organizer of the craft, will be present. By investigation he declared that he learned that many of the girls were earning as low as $6 per week.

According to information given at the meeting of the trades and labor council on Wednesday, the secretary of the union, who is a girl, was discharged by an under-boss at her place of employment, but when the manager of the firm returned from a trip to an outside point she was reinstated. It was said also that under-bosses had been making threats as to what would happen to anyone joining the union.

Watching With Interest.

Members of the trades council organization committee—which recently has been greatly strengthened—will attend the meeting next week.

Welfare workers in the city are said to be watching, with a great deal of interest the movement to organize the girls, the majority of whom are in their teens. It is claimed that the bettering of the working conditions and higher wages in any plant tends to raise the moral standard of the employees there.

Hundreds In District Have Failed To Fill In Tax Papers or Entered False Statements, Says Inspector

Declares It Will Be Well For Them To Rectify Matters in Income Returns in Order To Avoid Prosecution, Which May Follow.

In referring to a news item from Ottawa, which intimated that the Government would at last take action in collecting income taxes that citizens all over the country had ignored, Inspector George Tambling of this district declared today the Government was in a position to prosecute hundreds of people in this part of the country who had failed either to fill in their reports or had made false statements as to their income or in other ways ignored the law.

They Know.

"These people don't have to be told who they are," said Mr. Tambling today, "and the best thing they can do is to rectify matters before it is too late. It is the transient population that is evading the law more than the citizen who has settled down. We have a list of names of persons who have either made what we believe to be false reports or who have not reported at all. We are not eager to prosecute; in fact, that is the last resort, but we will do so if all other means fail.

Good On the Whole.

"As I said before, it is the transient population that we have difficulty with, but on the whole I am well pleased with the way the people here have complied with the law. Most of the income taxes that have not been paid are for amounts under $10.

"Ottawa has all the information from us on the subject that is necessary, and can prosecute at any time it desires."

INAUGURAL MEETING.—The Humane Society held its inaugural meeting for 1920 in the city hall last night. The election of officers for this year was left over till the next meeting, owing to the absence of the president. The report of the work, as given by Inspector W. H. SUNDAY NIGHT ORATORIO.—"The Messiah" will be sung next Sunday night by the First Methodist Church choir augmented to 100 voices. This is another of the annual givings of this great oratorio by this choir, and because of more than usual practice, and the high qualities of the soloists, this year's rendition of the work promises to be one of the best. The soloists are Miss Hilda McMillen, Miss Lula Laymon, Thomas C. Muir, William Howland, both gentlemen of Detroit. Mr. Jordan will preside at the organ and direct.

ONE LESSON LEARNED.—Dundas street, in the neighborhood of Richmond street, was turned into a nice little skating rink about 10 o'clock this morning when employees of the public utilities commission endeavored to put in a new hydrant near the corner without turning off the water at the main. The water spouted several feet in the air before racing down the sidewalk in both directions. Finally a hole was chopped through the ice to the safety valve and the free flooding was stopped.

SAYS CITY SHOULD HAVE CONTROL OVER BUILDINGS ERECTED

Town Planner Condemns Mixtures of Present.

WIDER STREETS NEEDED

And All Construction Ought To Be Planned for City's Benefit.

The need of Canadian cities for a town-planning scheme was outlined by Thomas Adams, town planning adviser for the Dominion Government, at a luncheon tendered by the members' council of the local chamber of commerce, in the Tecumseh House at noon today. He pointed out that the scheme which the London ratepayers approved at the municipal elections meant much in the development of the city. He criticized the narrow streets in London and every city in the country, and impressed upon his hearers the importance of studying the plan of the city.

The cities of this province should go to the Provincial Government and insist upon an act which would enable a municipality to dictate the kind of buildings to be erected, and also to state where they smhould be located, Mr. Adams stated. This country, he said, was a free and democratic country, but it also was just. It was not justice to permit any man to do that which imposed a hardship upon his neighbor. The city should have the power to prevent the erection of a factory in a purely residential district, when its erection meant that the real estate surrounding it was going to decrease in value.

Look Afield.

He considered it impossible to simply plan an industrial city, but an industria district was proper. London, he said, shoud be interested in the surrounding country, for with the development of power it was no longer absolutely necessary for the manufacturer to locate in the city, where his growth was hampered. This city should develop the district between here and Port Stanley, Mr. Adams thought, and in the advancement of London it was essential that the lake port should be developed.

One of the chief reasons labor is agitating for shorter hours in the larger cities is that in some instances two and three hours are lost in the laborer getting to and from his work. A man who had to hang on a strap to get to his home, for half an hour or more, was deserving of shorter hours. In many cases the hardest work of the day is getting to and from the factory.

Under the town planning scheme the railroads would not be permitted to enter the city anywhere the officials liked. The city would be able to go to the federal government and state where it wanted the railroad to enter.

Dangerous Topic.

In the past the transportation companies of the country, Mr. Adams said, have thought only of their own profits, without regard for the benefits the city might derive from the roads. He referred briefly to the local transportation question, but some of those about the table commenced laughing, and with the remark, "I guess I have said enough about that," Mr. Adams swung to another subject.

High buildings were not the best-paying, the speaker stated. This had been proven in the larger cities, where they are absolutely necessary in many instances. Real estate owners in the United States, he said, have learned that the smaller building pays best.

The mixing of industrial plants with residences was condemned by the speaker. He did not believe that even a grocery store should be erected on a street corner if it was going to affect the beauty of the street or make the land less valuable.

The streets of a city should be erected on the same basis as a hotel, in Mr. Adams' opinion. No architect would make the dining-room the same size as a bedroom, yet this was just what happened in the planning of streets. He did not think it proper in the interests of the city to have a uniform width for streets.

CHAIRMAN URGES BUILDING OF MORE DWELLINGS AT ONCE

Lack of Houses Great Detriment to City.

OUTLINES PLANS MADE

And Expresses His Idea of the Commission's Duties and Powers.

"The prime basic essentials for human existence are food, clothing and shelter. The man of moderate means, with family responsibilities, experiences many difficulties in these times of providing adequately these essentials of living," declared E. R. Dennis, chairman of the local housing commission, in his inaugural address at a meeting of that body on Thursday night.

"Owing to the period of deferred building during the war, the shortage of houses is serious and worldwide. Because of the heavy demands for material and labor in innumerable phases of post-war reconstruction, the great difficulty in overtaking the requirements for dwellings is obvious. It is a difficulty that must be squarely met.

"The governments of every progressive civilized country in the world are formulating and carrying out intelligent and vigorous policies to provide housing accommodation for their peoples.

National Need.

"Modern governments realize that the national spirit is not the individual, but the home. The nation is comprised of homes, and that nation is the greatest that has an adequate number of the best homes. Our own federal and provincial governments have realized that if Canada is to compete with rival nations, she must have a care also for the housing needs of her growing population, hence existing federal and provincial house legislation.

"If the city of London is to maintain its prestige and position of importance among Ontario cities, we must be at least as alert and industrious as they are in providing housing accommodation for our workers and citizens of moderate means.

"The function of this commission is not to provide a house on easy terms for this deserving and that needy individual, but rather to increase and better the municipality's housing facilities, with a view, thereby, of promoting the larger and general welfare of the whole city, insuring its advancement, industrially, socially—in a broad sense—and in matters relating to the health and efficiency of its population."

Other extracts from the address follow:

Conditions Bad.

"At the present time, we know that the supply of houses is decidedly inadequate. No houses are to rent. Practically no houses are being built for rent. New families coming to the city are obliged to live in rooms, housed with one or more other families. Many families attracted to London by its multitude of advantages as an ideal home city, are deterred from coming here by the inability to procure houses. The storage warehouses of the city are overcrowded with household effects of families who cannot obtain houses. There are many dwellings in the city that would not be tolerated were it not for the acute shortage. Manufacturers are expanding; new industries are in prospect; we have abroad the spirit of a greater London. People are looking to locate their residence in London. This city, because of its relatively great area, requires more population—the only means in prospect of lowering the tax rate."

"The question is sometimes raised that in view of present high costs, scarcity of skilled labor and difficulty in obtaining supplies, is the commission justified in proceeding with a building programme? These prevailing conditions constitute valid and urgent reasons for earnest and efficient action on our part. Conditions referred to make it doubly difficult for the head of the homeless family to secure a dwelling. It is almost impossible for him to get one built for himself, he cannot find a house for himself, and if he manages to purchase one existing house, he simply puts another family on the street.

Lines of Action.

"Our policy for the current year would seem to resolve itself into three district lines of action:

1. Home site development.
2. Building of houses, by commission, on lots acquired by it—for sale to bona fide applicants.
3. Providing loans to individuals who have their lots and plans, and can meet the Government and city requirements.

"I would respectfully urge that the commissioners decide and plan, as soon as it conveniently can, the number of houses it will build this year, and then energetically set to work to complete the number decided upon, and no more."

"I would suggest that the type of houses to be built this year be selected from the most satisfactory and economical specimens already erected by the commission.

"All indications point to the prospect of another period of advancing prices during the present year. Our ever-present problem is the fighting and overcoming this tendency of rising costs by any and every available and legitimate means, through wholesale buying, mass production, planning, organization and adopting new standards."

"I am not yet convinced that the adoption of concrete construction will not, in a measure, reduce costs and facilitate rapid construction."

Not Self-Created.

"It must be borne in mind that this commission did not create itself. This commission was brought into being by the municipal council of the city of London, and the commissioners were appointed by the council and requested to act. I am sure that throughout the year the commissioners will receive the hearty support and co-operation of the council in its arduous and important duties, and in the spirit so admirably expressed by His Worship Mayor Little, in his inaugural address."

"I am deeply sensible to the loyal, faithful and efficient service already rendered to the city by Commissioner Hessel and Vice-Chairman Cunliffe, in face of many difficulties, inherent to the establishment of a new civic enterprise.

"Commissioner Jackson is a valuable addition to the personnel of the board. His financial training and experience gained from the business he is engaged in, will make his counsel of much value. We are also fortunate in having the advantages of Mayor Little's ability, experience and co-operation, as a member of the commission.

"The city of London has arrived at a point where it will either rapidly progress or retrograde. The future of the city is in the hands of its present governing boards, none of which have a more important work and responsibility than the housing commission."

WANT COMMISSION TO HEAR CHARGES

Complainants Against Ontario Hospital Not Satisfied.

Those instrumental in bringing charges of inefficiency and general laxness against the management of the Ontario Hospital for Insane are not satisfied with the provincial government's action in appointing Judge Talbot Macbeth to hold an inquiry.

While they express every confidence in Judge Macbeth's ability and fair-mindedness, they consider it would be better to have a commission of three outsiders, with a judge from another district, to conduct the probe, and they have had their lawyer write Premier-Elect Drury asking that this change be made.

As a member of the London Advertising Club, I wish to congratulate the pastor of this up-to-date church on this action.

All good things should be advertised, and if there is anything better than oldtime religion, I have yet to hear of it.

Watch this church grow from now on, and I'll prophesy that it will be a substantial growth. "OLD TIMER."

And Even After This, No Murder Has Taken Place

Zurich Bank Clerk Must Be Numbered Among the Heroes.

It happened in Zurich. The cause was the financial situation of this country and the falling off of the value of Canadian money in comparison with that of United States.

An old woman, she lived in the country, entered a bank at noon recently and asked to draw her savings account. As her account was in the neighborhood of three thousand dollars, it meant that to give it in cash would inconvenience a small branch bank, as it is not the custom of banks to keep large sums of cash tied up in a branch, so a marked check was offered her. This she refused, and insisted that cash be paid her. The clerk reluctantly complied with her request, made up the interest and proceeded with the closing up of her account.

The lady took no teller's word that she had the right amount, but took the money over to a desk and spent two hours in laboriously counting it. The hands of the clock pointed to 3 o'clock, closing time, as she finished her task. With a look of satisfaction that bespoke of returned faith in humanity and her country, she walked up to the wicket and to the surprise of the clerk pushed the roll of money to him.

"You can have this now," she said. "I only wanted to see if you had it. I have read so much in the paper about our money not being good and had heard that our banking system was all wrong and didn't have the money to pay accounts that I wanted to make sure."
