THE BLACKMAILING OF NEWSPAPERS

This Has Become Quite an Industry Over in England.

GIVES A GOOD LIVING

Many Shyster Lawyers and Professional Plaintiffs in the Game.

London, Sept. 2.—At last the English newspaper proprietor has revolted against the weird English libel law which has made the papers of Great Britain chiefly interesting for the news they don't print. A bill has been introduced in Parliament to amend the law and place it on a sound and sensible basis, by Sir G. Toulmin, a Lancashire newspaper-owner. It is supported by the Honorable Harry Lawson, whose father, Lord Burnham, is proprietor of the London Daily Telegraph, and by T. P. O'Connor, who is a famous journalist as well as one of the leaders of the Irish party.

At present it is an axiom in English newspaper offices that "you can't libel a dead man," meaning that pretty much anything that one can say about a living man is liable to be twisted into a libel carrying damages under the present law. And it isn't always a safe rule either, for there have been cases in which relatives of dead men have issued and recovered damages because things printed about the deceased held the living up indirectly to ridicule or contempt.

Under the law as it stands now the hands of the newspapers are tied in dealing with criminal cases or with notorious examples of political or municipal corruption. Unless a case actually comes into court it must not be mentioned, and then only the actual evidence given before the judge or magistrate may be printed. Thus we have here constantly affairs that need ventilation and yet are hushed up because the newspapers which know all about them must not print what they know.

A Fair Arrangement.

The proposed amendments to the law do not go far, but they constitute a decided improvement. They declare that an accurate report of the proceedings at any public meeting or at the meeting of any public board or authority is privileged unless it can be proved that the publication was made maliciously, and unless the paper printing it has refused to print a reasonable letter or statement by way of contradiction or explanation by the person aggrieved.

An important clause is that extending the privilege now afforded to court proceedings to a fair transcript or extract from any book to be ordered kept by an officer of state, police commissioner or chief constable in the course of his duty. This throws open for publication the police records of arrests with the particulars of charges against persons arrested, and thus makes it much harder to suppress scandals or to secure the discharge of accused persons by social or political influence. A case in point is that of a cabinet minister, the author of books known all over the United States, was arrested in London for intoxication and disorderly conduct, and a cadet taken to a police station and locked up. The police didn't believe his assertion that he was the Right Honorable Scandal-So, and laughed at his protestations of his identity until one of his colleagues came and secured his release. Every newspaper in London knew all about it within an hour or two, but not a line about it ever appeared in print.

Like the wasp, however, the bill carries its sting in its tail. The last clause is the most important, for it deprives the blackmailing litigant and the shyster lawyer of their occupation. At present anyone, whether he has a decent case or not, may enter suit against a newspaper for libel, if he can get a lawyer to do the act for him. If he loses he is ordered to pay the newspaper's costs as well as his own, but if he has no money and no property it is obvious that he can't pay, and the newspaper has to pay its own lawyer and costs. Even in the weakest case these costs will hardly come to less than a couple of thousand dollars, so that it has become the practice for London newspapers at least to try always to settle a case out of court for a couple of hundred dollars. A number of disreputable lawyers make a good living by hunting up poor persons and telling them they have been libelled and going shares in the proceeds. The last clause of the new bill gives any judge power, when a libel suit appears to be trivial, to strike it out, or order staying all proceedings unless the plaintiff gives adequate security for the defendant's costs. At the end of a year such an action stands dismissed automatically.

The bill stands a good chance of getting through this session as it is non-controversial, no one being bold enough to defend the blackmailing lawyers and plaintiffs at whom it is levelled.

MONSTER SUBMARINE DESIGNED BY RUSSIA

Protected Cruiser of 4,500 Tons Displacement Built to Fight Under Sea.

St. Petersburg, Sept. 3.—A submarine cruiser, 400 feet long, and displacing when submerged 5,635 tons has been designed by a Russian naval engineer named Shuravieff.

No submarine vessel yet built has a displacement of more than 500 tons, and the 1,000-ton mark is just being reached in England and in Germany with vessels laid down this year.

The apparatus would enable it to sink in three minutes, and when below the surface internal combustion motors of 4,400 horsepower would give a maximum speed of fourteen knots. The fastest submarines yet built are the British vessels of the D class, which can make sixteen knots on the surface and nine when submerged.

The submarine cruiser will be equipped with five 4.7-inch guns, so mounted that when the ship is about to descend they can easily be stowed away below decks. The vessel will also have the unprecedented armament of thirty torpedo tubes, all of which will, of course, be available in either the surface or submerged condition.

The Shuravieff cruiser will also be furnished with 120 submarine mines, which it will be able to lay in the form of a field without coming to the surface at all.

The value of the boat for blockade work—should it be adopted and prove successful—would be enormous, since it would be able to get into a harbor unseen, discharge sixty torpedoes at the vessels inside (two torpedoes being carried for each tube), and then lay a string of mines across the mouth of the harbor.

A deck of armor would cover the machinery and other vital parts of the cruiser, the total weight of armor used being 337 tons.

WESTERN HOLD-UP

Robbers Rifle Safe on a Southern Pacific Train.

[Canadian Press.]

Redding, Cal., Sept. 2.—Three robbers, one a negro, held up the southbound Oregon express on the Southern Pacific Railroad, a mile and a half north of Lamoin, and forty miles north of Redding, late last night. They blew open both safes in the express car, rifled them and escaped.

In their escape the three were accompanied by two other robbers, who had been riding on the roof of the car. No one was hurt. The value of the booty has not yet been learned.

The robbers boarded the train as it stood on a siding, and when it got under way three of them worked their way into the express car, holding up the messengers with revolvers. Only one of the bandits, the negro, was masked. They blew the safes, and at the sound of the explosion, the train slowed down. The robbers grasped what they could lay hands on and jumped into the darkness, where their two companions joined them.

A brakeman on the train says the men leaped into an automobile and headed for Dunsmuir.

Descriptions of the negro and the white men, who blew the safes, were obtained by the posses before starting in pursuit.
