PROCLAMATION

Whereas, the Dominion Association of Fire Chiefs has petitioned the cities of Ontario to assist and indorse the holding of a

CLEAN-UP WEEK
COMMENCING
Monday, May 5th, 1919

And, whereas, the fire loss of Canada has assumed alarming proportions, and now amounts to over $33,000,000 per annum, 65 per cent of which might have been prevented, and in Ontario the fire loss amounts to $40,000 for every day in the year, two out of every three fires occurring in the home, and eight out of every ten being considered preventable;

And, whereas, a clean city has few fires, and conditions similar to those which cause fires often breed disease, and unsightly and insanitary surroundings are a menace to life, health and property;

Therefore, let us endeavor to make London clean and attractive, safe from fire and free from disease, by removing accumulations of rubbish, empty cans, waste paper, straw, ashes, etc., about our houses, in attics, cellars and back and front yards, and particularly in the vicinity of stoves, furnaces and heating pipes;

And, whereas, for years our sons have been fighting to make the world "a better place to live in," while those at home sacrificed and saved for them and for humanity's sake;

Therefore, this year of all years, we should unite in making our own city "a better place to live in." In the years of war we have necessarily neglected, for the world's cause, conditions in our midst, and we can best maintain the high ideals for which we have striven by making our homes attractive, clean and bright, typifying thrift and civic pride, and our city the cleanest, healthiest and most beautiful city in the Dominion.

These presents are to make known that I, Charles Ross Somerville, mayor of the city of London, do proclaim the week commencing May 5 to be Clean-Up Week, and request all citizens to do their part in reducing the risks of fire and sickness and in making London a place of which we may all feel justly proud.

Given at the City Hall, London, this the 30th day of April, A. D. 1919.

C. R. SOMERVILLE, Mayor.
Ap. 30, M. 2.

MY HEART AND MY HUSBAND
ADELE GARRISON'S NEW PHASE OF REVELATIONS OF A WIFE

What Bess Dean Whispered To Madge As They Prepared To Listen To Dicky's Talk.

"Police! Help! I'm sinking! Will nobody throw me a rope?"

Dicky piped the words in a high falsetto, throwing up his hands in a ludicrous pretence of being overwhelmed by the weight of his mother's remarks.

"Richard!" His mother uttered his name as if she had just flicked it from the end of a whiplash. "Stop that nonsense at once. I never permitted such conduct from you while you were a child, and I shall certainly not begin the practice now."

"Can't help it," he returned, unabashed—and indeed, I had hard work to keep back a smile at her assertion, for I had guessed long before that my husband had always been a spoiled child—"if you will persist in forcing the dictionary down my throat, mother, you must not be surprised at any kind of exhibition from me. Big words always affect me that way, and I'll bet you had more polysyllables to the square inch in that last spiel of yours than even Madge here can manage, and she usually takes the cake, the icing and the chocolate filling in that direction."

His mother rose with drawn brows and flashing eyes.

"I will not stay here to be insulted," she began, but her volatile son had reached her side before she had fairly gotten away from her chair, had put his arm tenderly around her, and was looking down into her face with laughing, audacious eyes.

Mrs. Graham's Suggestion.

"Don't be mad by me, Mumsey," he pleaded, giving her the old pet name which I knew he had used in his childhood. "I didn't mean to be bad. But they were awfully whoppers of words, now weren't they?"

He pushed her gently into her chair, watched with dancing eyes the little smile that evidently against her will crept around her grim lips. Then he kissed her again and went back to his seat.

"There seems much wisdom in the mater's suggestion," he said to me. "Is there any decent place for eats in Bayview?"

"Oh, yes, there is a very good little inn about a half-mile from the school. It's called the Rose Garden, because in summer the roses in the grounds are wonderful. Any one can tell you where it is."

"All right," Dicky returned nonchalantly. "I'll blow in there a little before noon, order lunch, and send a taxi over to the schoolhouse for you. No, ma'am, I won't be in it." He answered the involuntary question in my eyes "As I remarked before, I won't appear at that there 'skewl howse' until I'm escorted there by me wedded wife. What time will you be ready?"

"At ten minutes of twelve," I answered promptly, "and I must be back at twenty minutes of one, so don't order too elaborate a lunch."
