WEDNESDAY MORNING, JUNE 2 1886.

Cheap Tobacco and Dear Cigars.

This rather indefensible combination of circumstances is what the Chicago Times affirms the American people to be enjoying at present. The tobacco leaf is so "beastly cheap" in the market that many producers are going out of the business, not being able to see anything in it. Two years ago Congress reduced the taxes on manufactured tobacco and on cigars to just half the former figures; but that did not help the retail buyer a cent. The man who smokes or chews has still to pay the same prices as before the reduction of duty, the wholesale price of the raw material having meantime gone down, and down, and down. So says our Chicago contemporary, or words to that effect.

It is easy to say that spending money for tobacco is a self-imposed tax, and that any individual may rid himself of the tax by simply ceasing to "use the weed." But that does not meet the point that a commercial wrong of no small magnitude is being perpetrated somewhere, and by somebody. That a large reduction of duty should be made—a reduction which the community knows to be a permanent one too—without any reduction of price to the consumer following, is not reasonable. The people have a right to know why this is thus, and who pockets the many millions of taxation that the Government has ceased to collect. The fact stated by the Times is calculated to throw doubt on the old free trade maxim that the consumer always pays all the duty. Coming to details, it may cause us to doubt very much whether the barrel of flour or the ton of coal would fall in price as much as one red cent—to the retail buyer, we mean—were the present duties remitted. The greater probability is that in case of remission, the duties would be quietly pocketed by the American exporters and by the railways together. As a general rule, when we increase our duties, these identical parties decrease their rates, to a considerable extent, at least—in order to hold this market. All which is respectfully submitted.

Bright and Spurgeon.

In this country sufficient attention has not yet been directed to the fact that Mr. Gladstone's Home Rule Bill is opposed by both Bright and Spurgeon—two men whose words carry immense weight with the people called Dissenters, or Nonconformists. No other two of equal weight with Dissenters generally could, in fact, be named; and the importance of their opposition is beginning to appear. A letter from Mr. Spurgeon is now being circulated as a campaign document against the Bill. As for Mr. Bright, he has not yet spoken out as he is wont to do on great public questions, although his opposition to the measure is no secret. He has promised to speak in the House before the vote on the second reading—provided his health and strength permit, he adds. Whether he will speak at all or not is, however, still considered doubtful. Opponents of the Bill are confident that, should he be unequal to the effort of a speech, he will at least send for publication a ringing, vigorously-worded letter, which will have great effect throughout the country. The opposition of these influential two to Mr. Gladstone's Home Rule Bill may be set down as one of the most remarkable features of the present extraordinary situation.

Bogus Butter.

Many sins, both of omission and of commission, have our alleged wise men at Ottawa been guilty of. But one good thing they have done this session—they have passed a law to the effect that bogus butter shall neither be made in Canada nor imported hither from other countries. On this question our neighbors are still struggling a long way behind. The most that Congress can brace itself up to is a proposal to impose on the stuff an internal revenue tax of ten cents per pound. This, however, is opposed by a powerful lobby, and a vigorous effort is being made to bring the figure down to 2 cents. On the oleomargarine question the Dominion is ahead of the Republic.

The Washington correspondence of many of the United States journals is of a sickening character. Absolutely nothing about the approaching marriage of the President was given to the press; to make up for the facts, the enterprising correspondents despatched to their papers the most silly stuff they could imagine. No reporter is to be allowed at the ceremony this evening; after it has taken place a bulletin of the facts will be given to the correspondents by the President's Secretary.

The esteemed Mail's acute anxiety to write down Mr. Edgar in West Ontario can only have the effect of inducing the Reformers of that riding to hold him up. Grover Cleveland is not the only politician who is loved for the enemies he has made.

Timothy Warren Anglin is booked for a picnic in North Simcoe. Dalton McCarthy's picnic will be held on polling day.

The town has had a twenty-hours' laugh at the Globe's eulogy of Donald A. Smith. Donald is one of the magnates of the C. P. R., a group of gentlemen who have done the State some service by fighting our great transcontinental highway to a finish, which achievement the truly good but altogether silly Globe characterised for years as among the impossibilities. In recognition of his share in that great work the Imperial authorities have seen fit to confer upon him a title, and the Globe professes to have a horror of titles, unless they be of the brevet order, like that of Deacon, for instance. Moreover, the Globe has also been for years teaching those who have found time to read its editorials that the promoters of the C. P. R. are public plunderers, without conscience and without bowels, and that every Canadian who accepts a title is a parvenu tuft-hunter, who looks not to a free people but to an effete feudalism for the honors due to moral worth and mental capacity. In about a column of gush, the Globe takes this all back and puts the cup of humiliation to the lips of the democratic members of the Liberal party, who are made to feel that the edge of one of their most potent weapons has been turned by the Globe's prostration of itself before a brand new title. They know that Tory writers and Tory stump orators will quote the Globe against them when they assail the C. P. R. millionaires and the wearers of "tin titles," and they are therefore disgusted. The Deacon's turpitude is fun for the Tories, but it wounds genuine Liberals and Independents, who are consistently hostile to the acceptance by Canadians of the cheap decorations which are considered good enough for colonists, and which honor neither the giver nor the receiver. Sir John A. Macdonald, Sir Richard Cartwright, Sir Charles Tupper, and all the other colonial "Sirs" are neither more nor less now than they were before they got their ornamental handles. In fact they are rather less as political factors in the changeful condition of Canadian affairs. "A breath can make them as a breath has made." The Canada of the future—and we have already crossed the border line of that future—is to be ruled by plain men, by what Beecher calls "the common people," and the tools will be for those who can use them. Were the Globe not in the state of decadence which is so generally remarked upon, its defection might be regarded as an obstruction in the path of the Canadian idea, but fortunately the Canadian idea has outgrown and overshadowed the Globe. It will also outlive that journal.
