CANADA'S GREAT HOLIDAY.

HUNDREDS OF THOUSANDS JOYOUSLY CELEBRATE DOMINION DAY.

The Yelling Masses Recreate—Glorious Weather Favors the Outings—How the Day was Spent in Toronto—Incidents, Accidents and Misadventures.

Dominion Day had a right loyal celebration yesterday. It was quite a royal coming of age. Never was a holiday more generally observed, and as became the occasion the rejoicing was multiform. There were practically no drawbacks. The sun shone brilliantly from a cloudless sky, the temperature rolled high, albeit a pleasant breeze prevailed which agreeably tempered the midsummer heat. On the whole the coolness was invigorating and most delightful, and the same may be said of the thousand and one rendezvous so agreeably studded on the lake shore. With meteorological conditions so favorable, and a welcome relief from the irksome cares of business and household duties, what was there to overcast the pleasures of the day? Truly some enjoyed themselves "not wisely but too well," but The World is glad to believe that these were the proverbial exceptions which but prove the rule. Certainly the epigram of the French cynic was not true of Toronto's thousands—they did not take their pleasures sadly.

What these pleasures were is not to be here recapitulated. They were as varied as the idiosyncrasies of the crowd. To the contemplative and phlegmatic basking in the sun, reclining in the shade, was the no plus ultra of enjoyment. Yet not those of more volatile disposition chide or condemn them for this, for fresh air and rest are no bad medicine for a fevered body or tired brain. In south, the means of enjoyment were legion. Boating, athletics, base-ball, cricket, bicycling, picnicking, science, music, each had its host of votaries, to say nothing of those enchanting diversions which doubtless will be out of fashion—fishing and fishing and fishing.

Toronto, the Queen City of the West, is a peerless place alike in business and pleasure. If all the holidays in the circling year were more heartily enjoyed than Dominion Day, Canada yesterday took Time by the forelock and began with the lark in the morning, and a hearty breakfast dispatched, were en route to lake or railroad apparently resolved to have as long an outing as possible. To mention their destination would be to give a list of show and favorite places in the Province. The railway companies gave the usual facilities for cheap traveling, apart from the numerous "jaunts" and the passenger receipts were heavy. The steamboat companies were taxed to the utmost of their power to transport the many thousands who had said for the notice "Bayside, dull care." The street railway had a busy time of it in the forenoon and evening, but the middle of the day was a slack time.

The scene at the Union Station and the wharves was lively and exciting one. Crowds thronged in all directions, the fair sex resplendent in their summer finery and their loving lords and adoring chaperons attired in holiday garb, seemed interminable. Good-humored pushing was inevitable, and it was exceptable if some little impatience was manifested because the expected trains and steamers was a little tardy.

"Are the cars ready?"—"Are there the tickets?"—was the cry of patient endurance and good humored. Slowly trains, packed trains, swarming steamboats were the order of the evening, yes till after darkness fell and midnight approached.

The story of the day, its celebrations and its pastimes, would not be complete or realistic if "The World did not add that there was the usual "chapter of accidents." These, however, it is matter of satisfaction to add, were not of any very serious or lamentable character. In so far every fact the majority of cases the days recreation will bear this more than a passing.

How the Vics Spent the Day.

The Vics have gone. In leaving they were loud in their praises of Toronto, gratified with the reception they had met with, and satisfied beyond as they had passed a very pleasant time. About one hundred of them went to Niagara by the seven o'clock boat, and were enabled to pass two or three hours in sightseeing. Of those who remained many passed the afternoon on the Island, and others strolled around the city in company with members of the Queen's Own, Royal Grenadiers, Body Guard, and of the Infantry School. At six o'clock the sergeants of the visiting corps were dined at the Sergeants' Mess of the Queen's Own, and that they enjoyed themselves is made known by the fact that the party did not break up until the last moment prior to the time when they were called to make ready for the return trip. Between 8 and 9 o'clock the regiment formed up on King-street between Toronto and Church streets, and to the sound of martial music marched down to the Union Station, where the special train was in waiting. It had been expected that the Vics would wave their kerchiefs from the car windows at 9 o'clock, but it was nearer 10 when the train bearing them home steamed away from the depot. There was another scene of wild excitement and enthusiastic cheering, and waving handkerchiefs while were visible as long as the train remained in view. Several of the non-commissioned officers did not leave with the battalion last night, but remained behind to pass a few hours longer with their brethren in arms of this city. Sergt. Lewis, it may be mentioned, is now the only member of the Victoria Rifles who was with that corps at Ridgeway in 1866.

The Officers of the Vics Entertained.

The reception tendered the officers of the Victoria Rifles, Montreal, by the members of the Royal Canadian Yacht Club in their club house on the Island yesterday afternoon, was a most successful affair, reflecting great credit on the Secretary, Mr. Bruce Harman, who had charge of the arrangements. The officers of the Grenadiers, G. O. R., Body Guard and Infantry School Corps, and a large number of Toronto's most prominent citizens were present to welcome the Eastern strangers. The party was conveyed to the club house in the Empress and two other steamers chartered for the occasion. The Vic's Band played musical selections, while Marmaduke's string band furnished the dance music. The military portion of the party returned to the city at 5.30 to attend the banquet in the Reform Club.

At the Island Till Midnight.

The Island at its chief points was crowded during the day. From the morning until late at night the ferry boats were packed with people seeking the fresh air and the cooling breeze to be always found on what sailors still term the "sand-bar." Until very late at night, indeed, for time had made a considerable inroad upon the evening before the last of the pleasure-seekers reached the city from the island. All of the places providing amusement and refreshment profited largely by the holiday, and those were many devices to catch the money that the holiday makers found themselves at liberty to dispose of. During the whole day the Citizens' Band provided music, and it was near midnight when the strains of "God Save the Queen" announced the end of the program. Despite the large crowds, the racing steamers and the Britilla of small boats plying around the bay there were no serious accidents—only one or two slight mishaps. In several instances parents were heard looking for missing children, and in the rush to the ferries at night two or three women fainted and baby carriages were smashed, but there was nothing more serious.

Boating on the Bay.

The yachting clubs, owners of private steam launches, yachts, etc., were all largely represented on the Bay, whilst those who had boats to hire did an enormous trade and reaped a rich harvest. The bay was at times literally crowded with boats of every size and color, and during the whole day presented a pleasant and animated appearance.

Unrehearsed Musical Efforts at Deer Park.

A correspondent writes: Christ Church, in the northern suburb, rejoices in a choir, also in a new organist; so, in honor of Dominion Day, the National Anthem was sung at the close of the service on Sunday evening, though not exactly in the shape that had been prearranged. The first verse was to have been given as a quartet, the second as a solo and the third as a grand chorus; but this little program was "knocked into a cocked hat" by a too spontaneous manifestation of loyalty on the part of a well-meaning colored gentleman. Not satisfied with participating in the quartet, he joined lustily in the verse intended to have been given as a solo by the leading soprano, and persevered to the very end, with a sublime disregard for the manifestations of intense disgust by the astonished choir and the tittering of the congregation. Unabashed by the strengthening looks of the agent of the nervous turning up of the whites of his eyes which indicated some left impression on the part of the choir, the enlightened African gave his share of the impromptu duet, while the lady maintained her parts to the finishing due unpleasant circumstances.

The Orkney and Shetland Society.

This society held its annual picnic yesterday to Falling Brook, at which about 140 members and friends were present. The day was spent most satisfactorily. A number of first-class prizes were competed for. Before leaving Falling Brook a rousing cheer was given for Mr. J. K. Storth, a member of the society, who had given the society the use of the grounds.

The Strikers Escort.

The cigarmakers on strike held no meeting yesterday, nearly all of them going out to the various pleasure resorts.

We Would Not Have On.

James McCann so far forgot himself on the Yonge-street wharf yesterday afternoon as to refuse to move on when ordered to do so by the police. As a result the patrol wagon was summoned and he was hustled off to Headquarters to answer a charge to be preferred against him to-day of obstructing the police.

Discussing the Merits of the Teams.

Martin Party and Thomas Marshman got into an altercation in the Toronto baseball grounds yesterday afternoon over the respective merits of the Buffalo and Toronto teams. One word brought on another until blows were exchanged, when Policeman Beaty ran the two enthusiasts into Wilton-avenue police station.

The Steamboat Traffic Immense.

Given fine weather, on Canada's National Holiday and you may lay heavy odds on crowded boats to all parts. Yesterday being Canada's Day of Manifest, Torontonians turned out literally in tens of thousands, and from 7 o'clock till late in the afternoon the numbers eager to be afloat largely exceeded the capacity of the numerous steamships. The Chicora, for Niagara, had to leave hundreds behind; the crowds going east as far as Victoria Park and Scarboro Beach Park and all intervening places of pleasure had to refuse most of proper passengers, and in many cases to return money to ticket holders. Toronto Island the traffic was beyond all expectations. Delighful human groups of men and women, young and maidens, family groups, passed in an incessant stream along the streets leading to the bay, and although many were unable to go by the boat they had intended, they cheerfully waited for the next or took a trip to some other spot. Judging by the sunburnt grains who were streaming away from the bay up to a late hour everybody had a good time of it.

The Railroad Travel.

Owing to the great majority of the railroad excursionists leaving for the places where they proposed to spend Dominion Day on Saturday night so as to enjoy the double holiday out of town, the outgoing travel on the cars was not so large yesterday as it might have been under other circumstances. As it was, however, the Union Station presented a busy scene from early this morning until late at night, when the last of the excursionists returned to the city. The specialty noticeable feature of the day's business was that, though there was really a tremendous rush of travelers, west and east, not one single accident of any nature was recorded. The arrangements of the two companies were perfect and carried out like clockwork. The two large excursions of the day were the Oddfellows' to Collingwood and the Sons of Canada's to Jack-ass Point. The former contingent numbered fully 1500 and the latter 1000. Thousands took the suburban trains to the country resorts, and altogether the Union Station officials had their hands full.

Accidents and Misadventures.

The light little yacht, the "Little World," capsized off Gibraltar Point outside of the lagoon, dumping Mr. Henry Ward and three companions into the bay. The breeze was somewhat fresh at the time, and the boat was carrying a little too much canvas.

A sailing skiff containing Mr. Ab. Skinner and a companion, was upset near John Hanlan's boat-house yesterday afternoon. The occupants escaped with a severe wetting. Too much canvas said no center-board was the cause.

A young lady named Hawkins, living on Manning-avenue, narrowly escaped drowning yesterday afternoon. She with some companions, was playing on the Yonge-street wharf, and by some means fell into the slip. There were any number of willing hands to help him out, but there was no hurry of doing this—no pike-pole nor any other life-saving apparatus convenient for immediate use. For a few moments the large and excited crowd thought the accident would prove fatal. A mother, holding a child with each hand screamed, "My God, will no one save the bay!" A rescuer was at hand in the person of Mr. T. P. Phelan, manager of the Canada Railway News Co., who gallantly jumped in and swam with the bay to the wharf where both were landed little the worse for the ducking. Mr. Phelan received ringing cheers on leaving the wharf.

As the steamer Arlington was steaming out from Ward's dock on the Eastern Point of the Island, a young man, one of the passengers, fell into the water. The moment Capt. Andy Tynan heard the splash he jumped into the bay and rescued the drowning man.

Lydia Bailey of 243 Wilton-avenue is in the General Hospital with her left leg broken in two places below the knee. She states that yesterday afternoon she started to go to the Island for her holiday outing, that on her way to the steamboat she stopped to have a drink with one of her lodgers. When she had finished her drink she remembered she had forgotten to give water to some birds, and so she went back again. She entered the house, went upstairs to where the birds were, when turning round she saw a man, whom she describes as big and fair, just entering the room. He attempted to indecently assault her, and on her resisting struck her two terrible blows on the left leg with a bar of iron he had in his hand. She screamed, the man ran away, the neighbors ran in, found her in a terrible state and sent for Dr. Verner, who having attended to her injuries had her removed to the hospital.

Pirates at Hamilton.

HAMILTON, July 2.—Some time last night some thieves broke into the cabin of the yacht Cacique and stripped it of everything, from the carpets on the floor to the curtains on the skylights. Six lifebelts were taken and a number of lanterns and other things to the value of about $40.

A Youthful Horse Thief.

TOPEKA, Kan., June 30.—Sheriff Weaver of Lyon County has placed a juvenile horse thief named Charlie Roberts in the Reform School. The lad is but 12 years of age, but is a hardened criminal. The charge on which he was sent up was the stealing of a horse, cart and $270 in money. He was captured about 25 miles from the scene of the theft. He has been a devotee of yellow-backed literature, and attempted to imitate the example of the mythical terrors and desperadoes. The boy's home is in Buffalo, N. Y., but he has been wandering alone over the country a great deal.

PARNELLISM AND CRIME

O'DONNELL'S £20,000 LIBEL SUIT AGAINST THE THUNDERER.

The Trial of the Action Began Yesterday at London Before Lord Chief Justice Coleridge—A Lean, Nervous, Bilious Looking Junior Counsel Opens the Case.

LONDON, July 2.—The trial of the action of Frank Hugh O'Donnell against The London Times for libel in its articles on "Parnellism and Crime" was begun to-day. The court room was packed. Lord Chief Justice Coleridge presided. Mr. O'Donnell was represented by Mr. Rigby, a junior counsel, who is a lean, nervous, bilious-looking man. Hepburt Williams, Arthur O'Connor and many other prominent persons were present. Herbert Gladstone sat by Mr. O'Donnell's side. The Times was represented by Sir R. E. Webster, Attorney-General, Sir Henry James, Lumley Smith and William Graham Davitne.

Rigby, in presenting the case for the plaintiff, declared that Mr. O'Donnell was not in sympathy with the Irish extremists, but held their methods in detestation. The Times had no ground for coupling his name with that party, and the plaintiff, therefore, claimed £20,000 damages. Mr. Rigby also said that Mr. O'Donnell had not been connected with the Parnellite party since 1884.

Mr. Rigby's voice was not strong and his manner of speaking was monotonous. The impression created upon the auditors was not altogether favorable and the court did not appear particularly interested.

The first witness was Henry Lucy, editor of The Daily News. He said he considered that the references in the articles on "Parnellism and Crime" included Mr. O'Donnell.

At this juncture Mr. Parnell entered the court room.

On cross-examination Mr. Lucy gave testimony which tended to prove that O'Donnell was present at National League meetings where violent speeches inciting to murder and arson were made, and against which he offered no protest.

The Lord Chief Justice ruled that questions concerning Mr. Gladstone's anti-league speeches in Parliament were irrelevant.

The Sangerfest at Baltimore.

BALTIMORE, July 2.—Thousands of singers and friends of the singers are now in Baltimore attending the National Sangerfest. At the headquarters of the Executive Committee it was ascertained that there are behind the scenes some societies now in Baltimore represented by 2100 singers. These, together with the 400 singers of the home societies, will make an aggregate of 2500 singers. The visitors are accompanied by about 1000 people, including ladies, daughters, friends and honorary members of the societies.

Arrest of an Adventuress.

LONDON, July 2.—The woman Brown, as Mrs. Gordon Baillie, who some months ago collected money for the relief of the Scotch Crofters and applied it to her own use, was been arrested on the charge of fraud and obtaining money under false pretences. The woman's real name is said to be Mary Ann Sutherland. She represented herself as Mrs. Gordon Baillie, a wealthy lady of the Highland and a descendant of the Earl of Moray.

DETROIT, July 2.—Deputy United States Marshal Galloway lodged Henry Mesott of Corunna in jail Saturday night on a charge of forgery. Mesott is a business man at Corunna, and has a wife and seven children. He says he was arrested by an officer from Owosso on a telegram from Seaforth. He learned from the officers that he is charged by James Wilson of Seaforth, Ont., with forging a $48 note. He also says that he is innocent, and that the charge results from spite, as his father and Wilson have been having a lawsuit, and his father was victorious.

A STRATEGIC CONSIDERATION.

Further Measures Urged for the Severance of the Reich-land from France.

BERLIN, July 2.—The North German Gazette, referring to the passport regulations, says: "The absorption of Alsace-Lorraine by Germany was partly a strategic consideration with a view to the protection of Germany against a French invasion. The impression that the Vosges form the frontier line must be strengthened and made permanent. The passport regulations work in this direction, but they are not sufficient. Further measures will have to follow if the secession of Alsace-Lorraine from France is to be systematically obtained."

Drowning Accident Near Brantford.

BRANTFORD, July 2.—John Beers, a young man aged about 20 years, was swimming at Lowjoy's pond this afternoon and was drowned. He took a dive, came up above the water standing on his feet, with only hands raised above water, then sank the third time with both arms, fell backwards in the water and did not rise again. His companions thought he was in sport. His body was found about an hour afterwards a short distance from where he went down. IN THE CHAUTAUQUA PARK.

PATRIOTIC ADDRESS BY THE HON. G. W. ROSS.

Canada's Extent, Resources and Prospects—Pain Reasons for Faith in Canada—Opening of the Amphitheatre this Year—Dr. Wild Speaks—The Grind by Temple.

A few yards from where Lake Ontario lays its shores a little way below Niagara-on-the-Lake stands the Hotel Chautauqua, a large, airy building with broad piazzas and spacious halls. Two hundred people may stay there without inconvenience to the managers and with comfort to themselves. The grounds, one hundred acres in extent, are shaded with old oaks and apple trees, are picturesquely divided by avenues and driveways, and handsome cottages are beginning to lend their adornment to them. Various improvements are soon to be in progress, among them being a conservatory and a new hotel. A gully which winds in from the shore a few hundred yards is being scooped out by dredges so that a pretty lagoon may be formed in which guests may disport themselves as fancy leads them. The lagoon will be called Lake Lansdowne.

The amphitheatre is a place capable of seating about one thousand people. It is situated in the centre of the park, three minutes' walk from the hotel and it was formally opened yesterday. President Withrow occupied the chair. He stated that they desired to open the building publicly on Canada's natal day even though they ran the risk of a small attendance by not being able to arrange excursions. Dr. Wild conducted the devotional exercises.

Hon. G. W. Ross, Minister of Education, made the inaugural speech, occupying the platform for nearly an hour. Though not immediately concerned with the Chautauqua nor responsible for its educational work he approved of the work done. He concurred in the selection of this day as a fit day for opening the place, and he regretted that there were not more societies to celebrate the day likewise. He regretted that the people of this country did not gather in many places to inform themselves of the greatness of their country and read its future from facts which might be laid before them. It was time for Canadians calmly to deliberate on what sort of country they had, its resources and its prospects.

Canada was 21 years of age to-day, and though there had been a little want of harmony here and a little friction there, on the whole these 21 years were spent contentedly. He could say without minimizing or exaggerating that Confederation was a fact. The province had shown an inclination to leave, but there was no deep-seated desire to do so.

In looking at what kind of country Canada was he might first take the area. It was 3,500,000 square miles larger than the United States, including Alaska; it was within 100,000 square miles of the whole of Europe; it was 60 times larger than Great Britain. The climate was, besides being genial, of such a quality as to produce a strong hardy race. The great problem of the hour was the peopling of these broad Canadian acres. Canada was not barren as were the marshes of Holland, or the sandy Sahara. The country had wealth of mine, forest, farm and river. Since 1867 products of the mine to the value of $44,550,000 had been exported; products of the forest to the value of $420,380,000; products of the farm to the value of $430,000,000, and products of the fisheries valued at $112,000,000. As years went going by these exports were constantly increasing.

Canada's commercial and commercial position was compared favorably with those in the countries of the world. In situation Canada was more favored than the United States, being much nearer the world's great mountain and lake system. Unlike the United States, Canada was the first power in the world. She was ahead of France, Russia, Italy and other great powers, and building ships meant that something was to be carried. The spirit of the energy required to place Canada in this position was convincing proof that he sons had the brain and the force of a vigorous and energetic people. In the building of railways, too, as well as shipping Canadians showed great energy. They had the longest line of railway on earth. They had 1 mile of railway to every 447 people, as compared with the United States' 1 for 421, Great Britain's 1 for 1900 and Germany's 1 for 2000. They had better telegraphic service than any country in the world. There was one mile of telegraph line for every 1821 people, as compared with the United States' 1 for every 3871, Great Britain's 1 for every 5500 and Germany's 1 for every 3000. The postal office mail route if placed continuously would reach twice around the earth and more. Their banking institutions were fully equal to their commercial needs, there being a paid-in capital of $61,000,000, and deposits $112,000,000.

The people themselves were from the acquisitive dominant European nations. Thirty per cent. were of French origin, 22 per cent. of Irish, 21 per cent. of English, 13 per cent. of Scotch, 6 per cent. of German, but 85 per cent. were Canadian born. He saw in the assimilation of these a better, nobler people than any of the stock from which they were originally drawn.

Canada's educational outfit was unexcelled if not unequalled. There were the 15,551 public schools, the 2245 high schools, the schools of medicine and pharmacy, the commercial colleges, the veterinary schools and others. The judicial system was a powerful educator; so also the M.P.'s and M.P.P.'s who enthusiastically enlightened the electors on public questions of the day. Municipal organizations did much to educate the public. The press was a great power when rightly directed. Canada's newspapers were conducted with caution on the whole, but he would greatly like to see the finished artistic style of the English and some of the American newspapers prevail more in Canadian newspapers.

He traced Canada's history, showing that there was nothing to be ashamed of and everything to be proud of. In several important reforms Canada had led the world. This was a great and glorious country. It was difficult to tell the strides that might be made in 50 years, but even at the present rate the population would be 20,000,000. Those now living might see this country a nation powerful among the nations of the earth.

In the afternoon Dr. Wild delivered an interesting address.

Opening of Grimsby Park Temple.

The opening of the new Temple at Grimsby Park yesterday attracted excursionists from all over the province. Fully 10,000 persons were on the grounds, and two-thirds of that number were assembled under the spacious dome of the Temple when Rev. Manly Benson of Toronto called upon the band to open the exercises with music. Rev. Mr. Benson read a telegram from Sir John regretting that public business of pressing importance prevented the possibility of his attendance.

President N. Phelps then gave a graphic description of the construction of the temple in which 200,000 feet of lumber, 4 tons of nails, 2 of round iron, 75 pounds of tacks and 25 barrels of paint have been used. The temple is 142 feet in diameter, 100 feet in height and will cover from 6000 to 7000 people.

Rev. Dr. Griffin and Sutherland delivered stirring addresses, and Messrs. S. F. Lazier and E. Geller welcomed the visitors in fitting terms. Dr. Stephenson of New York, J. R. Clarke and Rev. Mr. Hiraiwa of Japan spoke briefly.

In the evening the National Band gave an enjoyable concert in the Temple.

Yesterday's Boating Decided It.

If there were any doubts about the merits of Alfred White's flannel shirts yesterday settled them. It was unanimously acknowledged that his white and plain colored flannel boating shirts with latest fronts were unquestionably the thing for stylish boating and holiday wear.

THIRY SILVER, GET THIRD.

The Office of Saturday Night Again Visited by Midnight Marauders.

Early yesterday morning the office of "Saturday Night," Adelaide-street west, was visited by burglars, who, after making a thorough search and destroying valuable property in the way of desks, etc., departed without succeeding in securing any booty. The occurence was reported to the police in the morning, and by 3 o'clock in the afternoon Detective Davis had four boys who are named James Hornshaw, John Henry, Peter Harrison and John Peters under arrest on suspicion of having had a hand in the work. The operation of that the prisoners though ostensibly newsboys are in reality members of a gang of youngsters who live by the proceeds of crime. This makes the fourth time that Saturday Night has been victimized by thieves.

Departmental Examinations.

The departmental examinations for second and third class teachers' certificates commence to-morrow. There are 122 entries set apart for conducting the examinations, and according to the returns recently received at the department 5000 candidates will write for both grades. The papers for second and first class certificates were prepared by the University examiners and the third class by the Central Committee of the Education Department. As before, the answers of the candidates will be read by examiners appointed by the Minister of Education, the transferring of setting the papers to the University having been done with a view to assimilate the departmental examinations with those of the University. The first time candidates for first class grade C certificates will be examined at local points, of which there are 120. The examinations begin July 10. There are 200 candidates on the list for this examination. With regard to first class grade A and B, the department does not, any longer exercise any control, these being grades after the candidates undergo a specified course at the universities. The examinations for admission to high schools and collegiate institutes will begin on Wednesday and will last until Friday afternoon following. These examinations are not exclusively held at high schools, the policy of the department being to set apart additional centres considered of convenience to pupils. It is estimated that 12,000 candidates will write on the entrance papers, and where diplomas, grades and Univers ty examinations are taken into consideration, it has than 20,000 to 25 Ontario will be examined on some sphere of education during the coming six months. The University examinations will be conducted at the same centres and on the same days as those for teachers' certificates.

A Parkdale Case Often Quashed.

Judge Ferguson and Judge Robertson have given judgment at Osgoode Hall in the case of The Queen v. Webster. Mr. George Webster was convicted some time back by Mr. Wingfield, J. P., in Parkdale, of keeping and working a steam engine contrary to the bylaw of the town which forbids the operation of any such engine without obtaining the consent of the property-holders within 100 feet and also the sanction of the corporation. Their Lordships quashed the conviction on the grounds that the bylaw was void inasmuch as it attempted to regulate trades that were dangerous to life or property, and that such a bylaw so framed by the municipality was likely to discriminate between parties engaged in the same calling. Judgment was given without costs, though their Lordships agreed that if the defendant's costs if so presented could be shown. Mr. G. W. Holmes, on behalf of Mr. Webster, asked their Lordships to establish a precedent, but they did not feel inclined to do so.
