How to Kill a Town.

[Billings (Montana) Herald.]

Send away for everything that you can purchase two cents cheaper than the merchants of your town can afford to sell. If you have a few dull business days, advise every one you meet of the fact, stop your advertisement in the paper, and let your general dejection be most apparent. Do not attend any public meetings or assist any public improvements; and should any improvements be projected, find every possible fault with them, predict their failure, and publish your disapproval whenever an opportunity presents itself. Abuse all those who may happen to show a lively interest in the welfare of the community. Continue in this spirit throughout the affairs of your daily life, and when you have succeeded in attaining a sufficient degree of general nastiness, wonder why your customers have forsaken you; attribute the fact to the want of enterprise in the newspaper in which you will not advertise, and to the ill will of those whom you have vilified. Then you will perhaps find that the town is not as good as it should be, and that the great object which you have had in view is nearly accomplished. The town being dead, you will doubtless be happy.

How to build up a Town.

[Helena (Montana) Independent.]

Patronize all home industries and enterprises. If you buy of your neighbors they will buy of you, and all will prosper. If the men who deal in boots and shoes or hardware send away for dry goods and groceries for their families because they can save a little thereby, they break down the business of their neighbors who deal in these articles. To get even, they send for what they don't keep and you do, and destroy your trade. So, too, with professional men and mechanics. In order to prosper they must help each other. Every member of the community must do this, or those who find business unremunerative will leave and go elsewhere.

Every man who works produces something, and his neighbors should patronize his industry to retain him among them. If he and his family go to another place, every kind of business loses his custom and its profits. Contribute to all public enterprises that look to the general good. If a new school house or a new manufactory is to be built, contribute by subscribing, or at least say a good word for them. If you have a business, advertise it, and people will know what it is, and will patronize you. You cannot hide your light under a bushel and then expect people to see it; if you attempt it you will be the loser, and ought to suffer. Small hives hold but little honey, and the new bees have to swarm out and fly away from it. A large hive will hold honey for all its inmates and have some to spare. So in a community, if all help to build it up, it will grow large and your business expand accordingly.

Railroads may come and go, but of themselves will not build a city; they are only facilities to that end. The citizens must do that by a judicious use of their money, location, and the superior facilities afforded for commerce, manufactures and business. If you make these, railroads will come to you from every quarter and you will have a city indeed.

Marriage.

A new weekly paper entitled Marriage, and devoted to the promotion of that happy estate by bringing together the sundered halves of humanity, gives the following appropriate quotations:

Take the daughter of a good mother.—Fuller.

Of earthly goods the best is a good wife.
A bad, the bitterest curse of human life:
Simonides.

If you wish to marry suitably, marry your equal.—Ovid.

Never marry but for love, but see that thou lovest what is lovely.—William Penn

Oh, friendly to the best pursuits of man,
Friendly to thought, to virtue and to peace,
Domestic life in leisure pass'd!

Few know thy value and few taste thy sweets.—Cowper.

Remember that if thou marry for beauty only thou bindest thyself all thy life for that which perchance will neither last nor please thee one year; and when thou hast it, it will be be to thee of no price at all, for the desire dieth when it is attained, and the affection perisheth when it is satisfied.—Sir Walter Raleigh.

Try to appear cheerful and contented, and your husband will appear so; and when you have made him happy you will be so not in appearance, but in reality. The skill required is not so great. Nothing flatters a man so much as the happiness of his wife; he is always proud of himself as the source of it.—Justus Moser.

Marriage is the best state for man in general; and every man is a worse man in proportion as he is unfit for the married state.—Johnson.

It does not appear essential that in forming matrimonial alliance there should be on each side a party of wealth; but that in disposition and manners they should be alike. Chastity and modesty form the best dowry a parent can bestow.—Terence.

The reason why so few marriages are happy is because young ladies spend their time in making nets, not in making cages.—Swift.

Every effort is made in forming matrimonial alliances to reconcile matters relating to fortune, but very little is paid to the congeniality of dispositions or to the accordance of hearts—Massillon.

Men that marry women very much superior to themselves are not as truly husbands to their wives as they are unawares made slaves to their portions.—Plutarch.

I pity from my heart the unhappy man who has a bad wife. She is shackles on his feet, a palsy to his hands, a burden on his shoulder, smoke to his eyes, vinegar to his teeth, a thorn to his side, a dagger to his heart.—Osborne.

The best time for marriage will be toward thirty, for as the younger times are unfit either to choose or govern a wife or family, so if thou stay long, thou shalt hardly see the education of thy children, who being left to strangers, are in effect lost; and better were it to be unborn than ill-bred; for thereby thy posterity shall either perish or remain a shame to thy name—Sir Walter Raleigh.

By the bride a man selects does he show the quality of his soul, and what value he puts upon it.—Goethe.

General Notes and News.

A CURE FOR CHOLERA MORBUS.—A positive cure for this dangerous complaint, and for all acute or chronic forms of Bowel Complaint incident to Summer and Fall, is found in Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry; to be procured from any druggist.

AN INTERESTING BOOK.—W. Templeman, publisher for Mrs. McDougall, ("Norah") late correspondent in Ireland for the Montreal Witness, has in press a book entitled "THE DAYS OF A LIFE,—a story descriptive of the days of a life of an Irish landlord. Although a work of fiction, it deals exclusively with facts that came under the writer's personal observation, and every character in the tale is taken from life. It is a scrupulously authentic and convincing argument in behalf of a reformation of the present condition of many of the Irish tenants. The authoress is an Irish Protestant lady, who has been for many years before the public as a writer of more than ordinary power. The book will contain 450 pages, on extra paper, and will be handsomely bound in cloth; price $1.50 by subscription only. Agents are wanted for the sale of the work, and any of our friends in the business may secure an agency by writing to Mr. Templeman, whose address is the Gazette Office, Almonte, Ont.

It is now in season to warn our readers against the sudden attacks of Cholera, Crump Colic, and the various Bowel Complaints incident to the season of ripe fruit, vegetables, etc. Dr. Fowlers's Extract of Wild Strawberry is the grand specific for those troubles.

GREAT LOSS OF LUMBER.—It is said that the stock of deals, &c., at Archangel, of the White Sea Company, which was recently destroyed by fire, amounted to nearly 10,000 Petersburg standards, and further that the saw-mills will not be rebuilt; so that the retirement of this Company as shippers of wood is not at all improbable. We understand the mills were insured for some 600,000 roubles, equal to about £60,000, which appears, by what we have heard, to have barely covered the value of the stock, and leaves a loss of about £1 a standard.

In consequence of this fire, considerable disturbance will be caused in regard to the White Sea freights; many vessels being now on their way to load, with no goods ready for them. The stocks at the other White Sea ports, it is feared, will be insufficient to supply the tonnage thus thrown on the market, and we are told it is perfectly impossible to fix fresh vessels at any price for a White Sea port.—Timber Trades Journal.

A VALUABLE DISCOVERY.—One of the most valuable discoveries in medical science, for the benefit of mankind, was made when Burdock Blood Bitters were invented. This medicine positively cures all diseases of the Liver, Kidneys, Stomach, Skin and Blood. 25,000 bottles have been sold during the last three months.

A CAUSE FOR BOILER EXPLOSIONS.—Steam engines have come into such common use, and "mysterious explosions" are of such frequent occurrence, that many will be interested in reading of a cause for explosions hitherto rarely thought of by the persons entrusted with the care and running of engines. We quote from the Scientific American:

Supposing that the work is to be suspended either for the night or for any long interval, after a stated hour, and that a boiler is commonly driven under an average pressure of 80 pounds or 90 pounds of steam; some time before the hour of closing, the stoker lets his fire slacken, fills up his boiler, and leaves off with perhaps 50 pounds or 60 pounds on the guage. Next morning, or after the interval, he finds the pressure guage standing at 20 pounds or 30 pounds, with a good supply of water. Consequently, in order to save the heat stored in the boiler, he begins to fire up, without thinking of the danger which may lurk in the water that has been boiling all night. The stoker never thinks of putting in more water, because the guage is all right, and thus prepares the essential preliminaries of a "mysterious" explosion.

The water that has been standing above the boiling point for hours has lost its power of ebullition, because the air which it formerly contained has long been driven off; and in this dead condition it is capable of absorbing heat without the power of delivering it up in the form of steam. The water thus becomes superheated, and at the moment of any mechanical agitation—such as the opening of the steam valve, or the introduction of fresh water—it may instantaneously flash into steam with explosive force. It has been abundantly proved that, apart from gross defects of construction, condition or management, superheating of the water has of late years been the only intelligible cause of the greater number of boiler explosions.

TRUE CHARITY.—Reverend Henry Ward Beecher in speaking of the recent death of a member of his congregation paid a touching tribute to the noble Sisters of Mercy. In describing the young man's last hours the Rev. Mr. Beecher said:—

"He selected beforehand the hospital to which he was to be taken, which is under the direction of those Christian Catholic women, the Sisters of Mercy, in Pittsburgh. And so when, staggering, at last he lost step and fell utterly helpless and powerless, he was borne to the bosom of their sacred love. Soon after he entered the hospital Sister Sebastian, on whose head may the Lord lay his hand warm with blessings, knowing him to be alone, and, faithful to herself, to her Saviour, and to him, sat down by his side and asked him after his spiritual welfare—whether he had been baptised, whether he had been educated in religious knowledge, whether he was prepared, should things go adversely, to meet his God—and she received answers very sweet and comforting in every respect. She took charge of him, and no care could have been more unremitting, more tender, patient, and long continuing than that was given to him. These Sisters, let me say in the fulness of thanksgiving to God, exemplify to us more than all creeds, dogmas, or organizations what it is to be Christian. They have given up the joy of founding for themselves the household with embracing children around their knees that all the store of motherly love might be given to the children that have no home and no household, and thus they have made themselves the ministering mothers of salvation to unknown multitudes of people. It draws my heart very near to them; for I see so much of Christ in them that, though they would repel me, they shall not. They are mine because they are Christ's, and I waft to them with all my soul the blessings of God's love and my own profound thanksgiving for that ministering care they have bestowed upon one of my flock."
