Peaches for England

Alex. C. Biggs, Oakville, Ont.

Our customers in Great Britain who ordered peaches from us last year were delighted with the fruit we sent and with its condition on arrival. On the whole our last year's shipments were a decided success.

This year we have sent out 1,000 circulars to our customers asking orders for peaches delivered anywhere in Great Britain. We see no reason why we should not ship these goods to the Old Country. We have had considerable correspondence with our Trade Commissioner, Mr. W. A. MacKinnon, of Birmingham, who is an expert on fruit, and he has pointed out to us the mode in which he considers this fruit should be packed, and we are endeavoring to follow out his instructions, and hope to be successful with a much larger quantity than we shipped last year. We are planning to deliver these from Glasgow, Liverpool, London and Bristol, and are negotiating for space on the different lines to these ports.

There is one great obstacle standing in the way of this line of trade. That is the need for a cheap fast service between the fruit districts and Montreal. It is true, we can ship by express but that is very costly and takes the profit in comparison with freight rates. If the Government only owned the railroads this trouble would be overcome, and not only would the shipment of this kind of fruit for export receive an impetus, but many others would receive the same benefit. We cannot use refrigerator cars unless there is a full car lot which might be a costly speculation for individuals to engage in. Under present conditions we are forced to ship often, in small quantities, by various routes, and by the fastest service that can be obtained.

English Tomatoes

A shipment of fine English tomatoes was received recently by Mr. J. Lockie Wilson, Superintendent of Agricultural Societies for Ontario, which had been forwarded by the Royal Edward, taking just six days and three-quarters. The box contained tomatoes in three stages of ripeness. They were grown in the county of Kent. Several persons who tasted them and compared them with Canadian-grown tomatoes without knowing which was which preferred the home-grown product, as richer in flavor. The home fruit is also firmer and larger.

The English tomatoes appeared to have been grown under glass. Mr. Wilson has shipped in return three boxes of Canadian tomatoes. A larger quantity will be sent in September, along with a shipment of peaches.
