Semi-ready Wardrobe

H. J. BROWNLEE, Manager, 146 DUNDAS STREET.

Doubly Blest

Some of the suites were already completed, and were finished in natural woods highly polished. Rich and beautiful paper had been hung upon the walls, handsome cornices ran around the top of the rooms; the ceilings were beautifully frescoed, and elegant chandeliers added to the beauty of every room; and all this was in vivid contrast to the unfinished condition of the flat which Mr. Archibald had reserved for his own occupation.

This consisted of seven rooms. Two in the front, overlooking the street; back of these, the dining-room, with a smaller room leading from it, and farther in the rear was the kitchen, with the fine china closet and pantry adjoining. Then there were two side-rooms—so called—one at either end of the hall, besides a commodious bath-room.

The important matter of location decided upon, Mr. Archibald's next business was to put in his furniture, and his selections were just what might have been expected of a crusty, close-fisted old bachelor, who despised the fashion of this world, and who wanted to test the character and patience of two sweet women.

Fortunately, there was already a fine range in the kitchen, or there might have been trouble ahead, when one of the nineteenth century servants should take up her abode there; while, having appealed to his landlady for a list of what else might be needed in this department, and following it out to the letter, that room was the most completely furnished of any one in the house.

In his dining-room he placed a cheap black walnut extension table and six stiff backed, cane-seated chairs to match; the room was finished in oak, with an elaborate and beautiful sideboard built into one side. The floor was unpolished, and he decided that it would need no carpet—"carpets were a nuisance, and only traps to catch the dust."

In the china-closet he put a set of common delf, for which he paid exactly $25 and grumbled then at the multiplicity of pieces, many of which he voted as useless "folderols." He had no silver to put upon his elegant sideboard, and so declared it an extravagant piece of folly—indeed, it seemed such beside the cheap chairs and table.

The two front rooms he left unfurnished, as he designed them for Agnes and her mother, and in the little one leading from the dining-room he placed his own desk and a single chair. The front side-room he also appropriated to his own use, putting into it a worthless ash bedstead, a small table, and one chair, while the one opposite it was furnished in the same way for the girl.

Plain white shades were put up on all the windows, and these completed the man's preparations, and he called the place "home." There was not a carpet or a rug anywhere, not a picture on the walls, not an ornament, for all such things were termed "useless gimcracks."

It was a forlorn-looking place, and Mr. Archibald actually felt homesick after his two dingy rooms in —— Court, as he walked through the suite on Wednesday morning before the arrival of Mrs. and Miss Walton, and instinctively felt that is was an unattractive abode to which to invite the two lovely, cultured women.

He had written to Mrs. Walton to engage a girl to suit herself, and, appealing to the friendly Bridget, that lady had succeeded in obtaining a sensible and competent woman of about thirty—a "first cousin" of Mrs. Gardner's kitchen queen—who promised to be on hand at an early hour Wednesday morning.

Mr. Archibald sent for his new housekeeper at ten, as he had promised, and the anxious woman's eyes brightened with pleasure when the carriage drew up before the elegant new house on the sightly corner of two fine streets.

"Mamma, this seems really enticing," Agnes remarked, in a happy voice, as they alighted and turned to mount the handsome granite steps leading to the entrance.

Mr. Archibald met them at the door, and his greeting of Agnes was characteristic of the man.

"Well, young lady, the cynical and suspicious old man has succeeded in finding you out, after all; and, I'll confess, I'm glad to see you again."

"Thank you, sir," Agnes responded; then she added, with a mischievous twinkle in her lovely blue eyes: "I hope a better acquaintance will not be disappointing to you."

Mr. Archibald chuckled to himself, as, pointing to the stairs, he said:

"Up one flight, first door on the left," and added that he would attend to having their trunks taken up.

Mother and daughter mounted the long, handsome flight of stairs, both delighted with the lofty hall and entrance; but as they entered their future home and walked slowly through the bare and comfortless rooms their faces fell, and their hearts likewise, at their forlorn appearance.

Reaching the dining room, Agnes exploded in a fit of sudden and nervous laughter, as she pointed from the elegantly carved sideboard, with its plate glass mirror, to the cheap table and chairs, the bare floors and staring walls.

"What an abandoned, unsightly looking room," she exclaimed, with a tremor of intense disappointment in her voice.

"Never mind, dear, there is an opportunity here for the exercise of our taste and ingenuity," responded Mrs. Walton, assuming a cheerfulness she did not feel. "That nice cover which we had on our dining table at home will conceal the table, and with our own silver on the sideboard, two or three of your pictures on the walls, and a rug or two, we will make it seem more homelike. I wonder if the man has thought of tablecloths, napkins, towels, etc.? Evidently housefurnishing is a new business to him."

Mrs. Walton opened the drawers in the sideboard as she spoke, to inspect their contents.

Every one was empty; neither was there knife, fork or spoon anywhere visible.

In the kitchen they found things more to their mind, for, as we know, Mr. Archibald had had help in furnishing it; there was an abundance in the larder—flour, butter, eggs, spices, etc., while a piece of meat and vegetables, for the day's dinner, lay upon the table, and Nora was already engaged in preparing her first meal in her new home.

A visit to the bedrooms betrayed the fact that neither sheets nor pillow-slips had been thought of. There were mattresses, blankets and comfortables, but no spreads, and poor Agnes sank upon a chair, nearly convulsed with laughter, yet almost ready to weep from homesickness.

"Don't, Agnes," said her mother, who seemed to be gaining both strength and courage as difficulties thickened about her. "What could you expect of a poor old bachelor who has had no home for many years. Come, cheer up, dear; it is not like you to give up thus—to be so disheartened."

"Forgive me, mamma," Agnes said, resolutely crushing down her home-sickness. "I might have known what to expect, but I confess I am terribly disappointed."

"But it is a beautiful flat, dear, so airy and cheerful, so fresh and clean; let us be thankful for that, and we will soon have it looking more homelike. There," as she glanced from the window, "our furniture has come. How fortunate we are to have so many nice things to help out in this emergency, and we will show our eccentric employer that we know how to live, if he does not."

CHAPTER X.

It was not like Agnes to be easily disheartened, as her mother said, and quickly controlling her almost hysterical mood, she removed her hat and gloves and began at once to help put their house in order.

Their trunks, three in number, had already been brought upstairs, and in one of these was stored all Mrs. Walton's table and bed linen.

"We will make up the beds with our own things for this week and say nothing," Mrs. Walton remarked. "I will make out a list of what articles I find are needed in the house, and, as opportunity occurs, mention them to Mr. Archibald. I think, dear, we will need to be as 'wise as serpents and as harmless as doves' in the management of the head of our house."

Agnes unlooked the trunk and began to unpack needed supplies. Mr. Archibald's and Nora's beds were then nicely made, a spotless sheet, in lieu of a spread, giving a fresh, dainty look to both. A nice towel with a handsome border was laid over the table in Mr. Archibald's room, and a pretty match-safe—one of the cherished souvenirs of Agnes' childhood—set upon it. That was the only innovation that she allowed herself to make for the present, as she recalled his contempt for all "gimcracks" and "folderols."

She next turned her attention to the dining-room, as it was nearing the dinner-hour, which was to be "one o'clock the year round."

LOADED UP WITH IMPURITIES.

IN THE SPRING THE SYSTEM IS LOADED UP WITH IMPURITIES.

After the hard work of the winter, the eating of rich and heavy foods, the system becomes clogged up with waste and poisonous matter, and the blood becomes thick and sluggish.

This causes Loss of Appetite, Biliousness, Lack of Energy and that tired, weary, listless feeling so prevalent in the spring.

The cleansing, blood-purifying action of

eliminates all the pent-up poison from the system, starts the sluggish liver working, acts on the Kidneys and Bowels, and renders it, without exception,

The Best Spring Medicine.

I have used Hutch for several years in my general practice as a first-class extempore remedy for late dinners' distress, and have carried them in my vest pocket in the little paper cartons. At banquets and at lodge meetings I have often passed one to an adjacent brother.

THE WORLD OF SPORTS.

Toronto's Ball Team Will Be on Hand Soon.

Lacrosse Team Sails for England Today by the Steamer Parisian.

LACROSSE.

GOING TO ENGLAND.

Toronto, March 27. — The Toronto Lacrosse players will leave for England tomorrow morning. They go by the C. P. R. at 9:15, and will sail from St. John on Saturday by the Allan liner Parisian. There will be a big turn out at the station to see the players off and wish them good fortune. The players will be accompanied to Halifax by Messrs. Lewis, Howard, J. W. Curry, and Honorary President A. F. Rutter. The team is as follows: Goal, Billy Hanley; point, Jack Dowling; cover, Geo. Wheeler (Capt.); first defense, Percy McBride; second defense, Hughie Lambe; third defense, Walter Jeffreys; center, Fred Mara; third home, Fred Taylor; second home, Charlie Querrie; first home. Ernie McLean; outside home, Jimmie Murray; inside home, Frank McLaren; spares, Arthur Adamson, "Mary" Curran, and Geo. Simpson.

BASEBALL.

THE TORONTO TEAM.

Toronto, March 27.—Manager Barrow has been notified that "Jimmy" Bannon, captain of the Toronto ball club, will report here a week from Monday. The rest of the players will come in the following Wednesday.

The Torontos will play exhibition games at Schenectady and Troy on April 26, 27, 28 and 29, opening the championship season at Worcester, on Thursday, May 1.

President Powers notified Mr. Barrow that the schedule meeting of the Eastern League will be held in New York on April 8, a week after the National League meeting.

MATHEWSON'S GOOD FORM.

New York, March 27.—Christy Mathewson's strong right arm is all right again. The famous pitcher demonstrated that important fact yesterday morning on Manhattan Field. It was expected by Manager Fogel and Captain Doyle that "Mattie" would start in with slow work; that he would nurse his bread-winning "wing" carefully until warm weather, but they were surprised when the big twirler strode out on the field, asked for the ball and called for a catcher.

Yeager was put in as the receiving end of the battery, and with no preliminary slow ones, Mathewson started off with all of his old-time speed. He shot the ball over true as a die, and with a good, free swing to his arm that showed conclusively that the trouble which was located in his shoulder has been entirely eliminated.

The other players were so interested in the condition of "Mattie's" salary-earning "whip" that they stopped their practice for the time being and centered all their attention on the pitching exhibition, and when they saw how things were they slapped one another on the backs and returned to their work happy as larks.

Manager Fogel and Captain Doyle were more than pleased, and expressed their satisfaction.

Mathewson's arm "went back on him" toward the latter part of last season, owing to a cold which settled in his shoulder during a long eleven-inning contest with the Bostons on a cold, damp day. At times after a rest he regained his speed, but the arm never came back strong during the balance of the season. Mathewson never looked better than now, and the practice he was able to take while coaching the Brown University team has evidently done him a world of good.

BOXING.

BOXING TOURNAMENT FOR CORONATION WEEK.

New York, March 27.—G. C. Lea, founder of the National Sporting Club, of London, and W. A. Gavin, chairman of the directorate, who, as a committee, arrived here March 8 to secure professional and amateur athletic talent to compete with European athletes in London during coronation week, have sailed for home.

"The following pugilists have signed contracts with us," said Mr. Gavin: "Gus Ruhlin, Kid McCoy, George Gardner, Tommy Ryan, Tom Sharkey, Joe Walcott, Frank Erne, Harry Harris and Johnny Gorman, and negotiations are under way to secure Harvey Parker, the wrestler.

"We have to leave for home sooner than we expected, as we have entire charge of the coronation tournaments, and we must be back to judge of talent which has been procured on the continent and in the Orient by other agents.

"The matches that have been so far arranged between professional pugilists are those between Joe Walcott and Tommy West, Harry Harris and Andrew Tokell, the English bantam-weight, and Johnny Gorman against Dido Plumb."

Fire! Fire!!

When that cry sounds how people rush to help and sympathize! And when some fireman rescues a woman from the flames, the streets echo with applauding shouts.

And yet if that woman had perished in the flames it is possible that she would have suffered less than she suffers almost daily from the inflammation which disease has lighted in the delicate womanly organism.

That fire of inflammation can be put out. The gnawing ulcer can be cured. Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription not only establishes womanly regularity and dries enfeebling drains, but it heals inflammation and ulcerations and cures female weakness. It makes weak women strong and sick women well.

"I suffered for four years with what four physicians pronounced ulceration and prolapsus of the uterus," writes Mrs. Ada Brooks, of Kirbyville, Taney Co., Missouri. "Also inflammation of bladder and urethra. My case was chronic and complicated. Had several good physicians, but kept getting worse. Had been confined to my bed five months when I wrote to you. I received your reply very soon and then dismissed my physician and began taking Dr. Pierce's medicines. I took eight bottles of his 'Favorite Prescription' and 'Golden Medical Discovery,' and began to get better at once. In two months I could sit up in a chair, and kept getting better. In four months could do all my house work, including washing and sewing."

Dr. Pierce's Common Sense Medical Adviser, paper covers, is sent free on receipt of 31 one-cent stamps to pay expense of customs and mailing only. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.
