OFFERED VET. A TEN DOLLAR BILL

And Thirty Three Year Old Horse Was Accepted

SOME MORE OLD STAGERS

Royal Commission in Nova Scotia Brings to Light Many Strange Transactions in Purchase of Remounts

Kentville, N.S., Aug. 12.—Arthur Veinott, Millville, told the Davidson war contracts commission this morning that A. B. Harvey, who sold four horses at Kingston for military purposes, one of them thirty-three years old, remarked to him after the sale that he was lucky to get rid of the old horse and had promised the veterinary a ten dollar bill.

It was accepted.

John Thompson, K.C., commission counsel, examined the witness as to a statement he had signed which, Veinott says, Harvey stated he had actually paid Dr. Chipman, a remount department veterinary, ten dollars. Witness said that all he knows about it was that Harvey told him that he had tapped the veterinary on the shoulder and said there was ten dollars in it for him if the old horse was passed. This he could swear to. Harvey yesterday denied paying any money to the veterinary.

Who Got the $10?

Charles Loomer, Weston, got $155 for an eleven-year-old horse. Mr. Thompson pointed out to witness that the receipt for the horse bore the figure $165 and asked if this was not the price paid him.

Loomer said he got $155.

Levi Porter, Ayelsford, swore the Roy Chute horse for which refund has been made to the militia department was twenty-three years old. He raised the horse.

S. B. Chute, Berwick, whom Mr. Thompson threatened to have arrested for failing to appear and who, it turned out, had been at his summer home and unable to get to Kentville before today, swore he sold eleven and thirteen year old horses to remount agent McKay for $400. Mr. Chute said his horses were quite sound and he sold them cheap rather than winter them.

Sold Lame Horse

Oran Bowlby, who disposed of two horses, swore one was slightly lame from a kick. Dr. Chipman accepted the horse without moving him. He did not tell the doctor about the inqury.

Sir Charles Davidson—"Why did you not tell the surgeon about the injury?"

The witness—"He was a veterinary and should have noticed it."

Sir Charles—"You are a Canadian and should have been fair."

The witness said he needed the money for the horse.

Sir Charles—"But you knew the horse was to carry a soldier. It was deceit."

NEW BRUNSWICK CANOEISTS HELD AS GERMAN SPIES

Rooney Brothers of Chatham Satisfied Suspicious Officials at Rimouski—Duplicating Champlain's Trip

Montreal, Aug. 12—To be arrested as suspected German spies fell to the fate of the Rooney Brothers, of Chatham, New Brunswick, two adventuresome young athletes who decided to take a long deferred vacation by making a two to three thousand mile trip by canoe this summer.

They left Montreal yesterday and will continue on the second part of their journey, which is to carry them through the Great Lakes to Fort William. Before they left they gave a synopsis of their adventures thus far.

"Quebec was not the first place," they said, "where we were looked upon with suspicion. Particularly around the Labrador coast, and the French portion of the province did people eye us askance.

Suspicious Rimouski

"It was from Rimouski that word was sent to Quebec that we were rather suspicious-looking, and when we arrived there Lieut. O'Gallagher and the Deputy Chief of Police met us and requested us to go up to headquarters and give an account of ourselves, which turned out apparently to be quite satisfactory.

"We left Chatham on the sixth of June and have paddled up to date about twelve hundred miles.

"Champlain is the only other man we know of who made this trip, and he made it in a thirty-seven foot boat. We are doing it in a seventeen foot canoe."

FOUR KILLED IN RAILWAY WRECK

Injured Number Sixteen—Knights of Pythias Excursion Returning From Annual Outing

Columbus, O., Aug. 12—Four persons were killed and sixteen were injured about five o'clock this morning when an excursion train was in rear-end collision with a freight train at Orient, a station fourteen miles south of this city. The dead and injured were members of the Knights of Pythias lodge excursion of Mount Sterling, Ohio, who were returning from their annual outing at Cedar Point, a summer resort on Lake Erie, near Sandusky.

DESIGNING AND VICIOUS LIES, SAYS LIEUT. COLONEL HARRY F. McLEOD, M. P.

To the Editor of The Fredericton Gleaner:

Sir:—I have never found it necessary to defend myself in the public press. I do so now with great reluctance, since I have always held that a man should be judged by those with whom he lives. But I am far away, and I may not return. I have known for a long time, ever since I was ill with pneumonia last winter, that most malicious lies were being whispered about me by men who have come out from under the bed long enough to try and injure a man who is not present to defend himself.

I recognize the fact that a man in public life must take the hard knocks that public life brings. I have always, I think, fought such knocks man-fashion. But I do think that when a man has given up something of the joy of life and home, and has come away to do his bit for the cause, that it is rather cruel to circulate lies about him at home. I have just returned from seven weeks at the front to take over the command of the newly recruited 12th Battalion, and have seen my brother Norman, who has told me something of what is being so carefully circulated. I have only to say that there is not one jot of truth in any of these designing and vicious lies. It is not necessary to take my word that I have given night and day my best service, and that my life has been clean. It can be fully established by those who have known and are here. I am proud of the love and respect of my own officers.

This little word is for my friends. Their belief I care for. Those who are responsible for the efforts to injure me may take what satisfaction such efforts can give to such minds. Some day I may come home again.

Yours faithfully,
HARRY F. McLEOD, Lt.-Col.,
12th Battalion.

WILL USE WOOD PULP FOR COTTON

May Tide Enemy Over One of the Most Difficult Phases of War—Process Not Perfected

London, Aug. 12—A citizen of a neutral state, who has just made a tour through Germany and acquired a large amount of information about the industrial and economic conditions of the country, gives to the Daily Chronicle an account of the work of German chemists in discovering a substitute for cotton as a basis for making explosives. This was found in the shape of ordinary wood pulp. He says:

"While experiments are still being carried on, sufficient progress has already been made to enable the substitute to be used freely and successfully. The great difficulty in the way of using wood pulp as a substitute for cotton is the presence of many impurities which are not found in the latter commodity. The most important of these impurities are resin and oxycellulose. Unless these are completely removed the resulting explosives would be uncertain in action and highly dangerous to those manufacturing them.

"I was not able to discover the whole secret of the process, but in its early stages it is the same as that which followed in turning wood into pulp for the manufacture of paper. The wood is ground, pulped and changed into liquid form. Then it is cleaned by new processes and then pressed into sheets. It is then ready for the nitration process and the addition of other necessary chemicals.

"Germany is under no difficulty so far as the supply of the raw material is concerned. At one time she was dependent upon Scandinavia for supplies of woodpulp, but some years ago she set about the task of making her own, since when she has become largely self-supporting in this direction.

"Three of the largest factories are now engaged in turning out the new basis for explosives as well as the seasoned wood required for making wood pulp. Large reserves of timber have been accumulated from my own country and from Russia, so there is no fear of any shortage.

"I was assured that if the supply of raw cotton to Germany was entirely stopped she might be able to tide over the difficulties.

GRAND WIND-UP OF "THE BLACK BOX."

Those who for fifteen weeks have been following that heavily-clouded story "The Black Box," will have the especial pleasure tomorrow and Saturday of seeing the almost impenetrable veil of mystery lifted and the inner secrets of the fiction laid bare. There is considerable speculating among those who have been following the story as to what the outcome will really be, but even the keenest observers will find themselves nonplussed when the true state of affairs is discovered. "The Black Box" winds up in a blaze of glory, as it were and with enough wedding announcements to satisfy the most fastidious romancers.

In the play now running, Miss Pickford is supported by Carlyle Blackwell, formerly leading man for the Kalem Co., and they work most admirably together. The whole production is quite out of the ordinary run of pictures and is well worth seeing.

UPPER LOCH LOMOND.

One of the most brilliant seasons for many years is now at its height at the Upper Loch Lomond Hotel, Mrs. Johnson's famous resort. The weather has been delightful. The fishing unusually good, and the capacity of the house has been taxed to its utmost. The fine beach leading to the pine grove is patronized every afternoon by bathers of both sexes and the latest designs in bathing suits may be seen. Boating parties on the beautiful lake, berry parties in the woods, hay rides, and driving over the lovely country roads in carriages and automobiles are among the many attractions of the place. Just at present trout and land-locked salmon are more plentiful than at any time during the season. Last Saturday James Ryan and Archie Campbell landed thirty-eight in a couple of hours, off the pine point, and Mr. Gilchrist got thirty-seven off Champagne Rocks the same afternoon, the fish ranging from one-half to two pounds in weight. The streams running into the lake are bordered with beds of wild roses and the perfume of the white pond lily is everywhere.

PRINCE LOUIS TAKES CREDIT

It Was He Who Mobilized British Fleet

AVERTED GERMAN INVASION

Debt to Battenberg Early in The War Was Admitted by Churchill—Now Confirmed

London, Aug. 12—Much interest has been aroused by the confirmation from Prince Louis of Battenberg that it was he and not Winston Spencer Churchill who issued the famous order to mobilize the fleet at the beginning of the war. From the outset, Mr. Churchill, then First Lord of the Admiralty, has received the highest praise for his foresight in having the British fleet mobilized at the critical moment. Some time ago, however, F. T. Jane, a well-known naval expert, publicly announced that Prince Louis of Battenberg deserved this credit. It will be recalled that shortly after the war began Prince Louis of Battenberg resigned as First Sea Lord because of bitter criticism, based chiefly on the fact of his German descent.

And now comes the artifcle by the Prince himself in the Standard, finally clearing the matter up and making it plain that it was he and not Mr. Churchill who ordered the mobilization of the fleet.

"When the war came," said Mr. Jane, "the British navy was ready and waiting. This fact is generally put down to Mr. Churchill's credit. We have all read it in the press and we have all believed it, but it was the First Sea Lord of those days. Prince Louis of Battenberg, who kept the fleet together. He it was who saved us the horrors of Belgium."

The confirmation by the Prince of Mr. Jane's assertion as it appears in the Standard is "It is quite true that it was your humble servant, and not Mr. Churchill, who was spending the week-end at Cromer with his wife. It was I who ordered all ships to stand fast instead of demobilizing as ordered."

It is recalled that Mr. Churchill himself admitted this fact when he wrote Prince Louis after his retirement. "The first step which secured the timely concentration of the fleet was taken by you," said Mr. Churchill at that time. Sir G. Robertson, M.P., explains why Prince Louis did not let the world know before the great service he had performed for the country by keeping the fleet mobilized. He says that Prince Louis seemed to think that if the facts were published, some sort of injury to the national interests might result.

It is generally agreed that the action of Prince Louis saved England from invasion at the outbreak of the war by an enormous number of picked German troops. Mr. Jane says that 100,000 German troops were actually embarked and were on their way to the east coast when the unexpected preparedness of the British fleet made them turn back.

An effort to find Mr. Churchill, that he might confirm the claim of Prince Louis, has developed the fact that he is busy painting in a little farm house which he has taken in Lancashire. His duties as Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster evidently leave him plenty of spare time.

Amherst will give two machine guns while the officers and men of the Rhodes Curry Company there and elsewhere are providing for a third.

It looks as if Moncton would contribute seven guns. Six are already assured—one from the I. C. R. shops, one from the I. C. R. general offices; one by the Reed Co., one by the city council, one by Prince Albert Lodge, I. O. O. F., one already sent through The Transcript, and one, the funds for which are in process of collection through The Transcript.
