DOCTORS SAID IT WAS HEART FAILURE

And Gave Me Up—But "Fruit-a-tives" Cured Me

Moorfield, Ont., March 29th, 1910.

"I suffered from severe Indigestion and Dyspepsia for nearly two years.

I could not take food without fearful distress. Two doctors thought my disease was Heart Failure and incurable, and I expected to die in a short time. My son asked me to try "Fruit-a-tives."

From the outset, I was better and gradually this fruit medicine completely cured me.

I took, perhaps, a dozen boxes—now I am cured and have gained over 30 pounds in weight."

OLD-TIME REMEDY DARKENS THE HAIR

Gives Color, Lustre to Faded and Gray Hair—Dandruff Quickly Removed

For generations Sage and Sulphur have been used for hair and scalp troubles. Almost everyone knows the value of such a combination for keeping the hair a good even color, for curing dandruff, itching scalp and falling hair, and for promoting the growth of the hair. Years ago the only way to get a Hair Tonic of this kind was to make it in the home, which was troublesome and not always satisfactory. Nowadays, almost any up-to-date druggist can supply his patrons with a ready-to-use product, skillfully prepared in perfectly equipped laboratories.

An ideal preparation of this sort is Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy, in which Sage and Sulphur are combined with other valuable remedies for scalp troubles and thin, weak hair that is losing its color or coming out. After using this remedy for a few days, you will notice the color gradually coming back, your scalp will feel better, the dandruff will soon be gone, and in less than a month's time there will be a wonderful difference in your hair.

Don't neglect your hair if is full of dandruff, losing its color or coming out. Get a fifty cent bottle of Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur from your druggist, and see what a few days' treatment will do for you. All druggists sell it, under guarantee that the money will be refunded if the remedy is not exactly as represented.

A rally of the young people of Ludlow street Baptist church took place last evening. There was a very large attendance and the prospects for the winter are very bright. The speakers were Rev. M. F. McCutcheon, Rev. Mr. Keyes and Rev. W. R. Robinson. Miss Cochrane, president of the Young People's Society, occupied the chair. In answering the roll call each member replied by quoting a passage from the Scripture. Among the numbers on the programme were vocal solos by R. Mawhinney and Clyde Parsons and a piano selection by Miss Jennie Tufts. Miss Mabel Sharp presided at the piano.

A Chat About Diplomats—Lord Denbigh's Famous Library to Be Sold

(Copyright, 1912, by the Brentwood Company)

The fact that Baron Hengelmuller remained in Washington for eighteen or twenty years as the representative of Austria-Hungary renders it a matter of difficulty to find anyone to succeed him, and this has been shown by the refusal of the Austrian minister at Stockholm, Constantine Dumba, to accept promotion to the post of ambassador at Washington, to which he was gazetted a week ago. Austrian diplomats who have attained the rank of minister, fear that the embassy in America entails oblivion, and puts them out of the running for any more coveted post of the same rank in Europe, such as Paris, Berlin or London. They are afraid that if they go to Washington they too, may be forgotten by the powers at Vienna, and left there for a score of years, with no adequate reward for their services.

Herr Dumba is a man of great wealth, and as such finds the legation at Stockholm more desirable than the embassy in the United States, and life in the gay Swedish capital, within a few hours reach of Berlin, Vienna and Paris, more congenial than Washington.

It cannot be denied that in the eyes of a diplomat a mission in some monarchical country of Europe offers many more advantages than an embassy at such a distance as that of Washington, and it may be recalled that Prince John Cantacuzene, Baron Kotzebue, and one or two other ministers in the diplomatic service of Russia, when nominated to represent the Czar at Washington, declined in turn the mission before it was finally accepted by Count Cassini.

Probably the only two foreign ambassadors who are thoroughly content with their post at Washington, and who prefer remaining there to being transferred to some European capital, are James Bryce and George Nakhmetieff, the representative of Great Britain and Russia respectively.

Philippe Crozier, now president of a big banking concern in Paris, and until a few months ago French ambassador at Vienna, in a letter published in the "Petit Comtois," and reprinted in all the principal Parisian papers on endeavors to exculpate himself from the imputation of having been taken unawares by Austria's startlingly sudden annexation of the Ottoman provinces of Herzegovina and Bosnia in October, 1908, by declaring that he had for several months previously repeatedly warned the French government, notably Stephen Pichon, then minister of foreign affairs, of what was about to take place. The last occasion on which he advised Pichon of the impending annexation, was in a despatch dated September 26. He adds that the matter was known to all the ambassadors of the other great powers accredited to the court of Vienna.

While this certainly exculpates Crozier of the accusation of having been caught napping, it places the French government, and especially its department of foreign affairs in a very awkward position, for when the annexation took place Minister Pichon and the other members of the cabinet gave the most solemn assurances that they had been taken entirely by surprise. It may be remembered that there was a very be remembered that there was a very strong popular feeling throughout Europe against Austria at the time, for having proceeded to this high-handed act of annexation, in defiance of the terms of the Treaty of Berlin of 1878, and that the various governments, that of France included, endeavored to explain matters and to relieve themselves of blame in the eyes of the public for having taken no steps to prevent it, by giving a pledge that they had been taken entirely by surprise.

In one word, Crozier's letter places the French government, and also those of the great powers, in the disagreeable position of being shown to have given their word to something that was untrue.

Lord Denbigh's famous library is to come under the hammer in London towards the middle of December, and will doubtless attract many bibliophiles and collectors, comprising as it does the famous Downing library, formed in the eighteenth century by Thomas Pennant. The features of the Downing collection are thousands of rare volumes dealing with America, including a copy of the first edition of Captain John Smith's "History of Virginia." The Denbigh library likewise contains several of the first editions and manuscripts of Henry Fielding, who was a distinguished member of the family, and which have until now been preserved in the great library at Newnham Paddox, Lord Denbigh's ancestral home in Warwickshire.

Lord Denbigh, who is the commanding officer of the Honorable Artillery Company, the principal military organization of the City of London, and the oldest in fact in the United Kingdom, is far from rich, his connection with numerous mercantile enterprises, including a great wine firm, having failed to repair his fortunes sufficiently to render it possible for him to meet the heavy fiscal obligations imposed by the present administration upon land-owners in the United Kingdom. That is why he is disposing of his books.

At one time Lord Denbigh put forward pretensions to be descended from the Counts of Hapsburg, ancestors of the reigning dynasty of Austria,, and on the strength thereof assumed the title of Count of Hapsburg, and even caused the Austrian eagle and the coronet of the Counts of Hapsburg to be added to his armorial bearings. But this raised so great an outcry by eminent genealogists in England and on the continent, that on proofs being adduced to show that there has never been the slightest connection between the Hapsburgs and the Fieldings, the earl dropped the Hapsburg arms and the title of count, and caused the elimination of all reference to the Hapsburgs in the pages of "Burke" devoted to his family.

The real founder of the House of Fielding seems to have been William Fielding, who acquired by marriage with the daughter and heiress of Robert de Nowham in the reign of Edward III. the manor of Newham Paddox, which has ever since been the principal country seat of the house of Fielding, for nearly 500 years.

Although the earl is a fervent Catholic the Fieldings are not included among the great houses of the old Catholic aristocracy, for the Earls of Denbigh were all staunch Protestants until the conversion of the father of the present peer. It was brought about in a rather remarkable manner. One Sunday morning he attended service in the parish church of Whitford, near Holywell, and remained to communion. After the service he was shocked to see the parish clerk carelessly flicking the sacred bread crumbs to the floor. He felt so much horrified by this irreverence that he complained to the rector, and, failing to receive what he considered satisfaction, was led thereby to transfer his spiritual allegiance to the Catholic church.

ALL YOU NEED IS A CASCARET TONIGHT

No Sick Headache, Bilious Stomach, Coated Tongue or Constipated Bowels by Morning

Turn the rascals out—the headache, the biliousness, the indigestion, the sick, sour stomach and foul gases—turn them out tonight and keep them out with Cascarets.

Millions of men and women take a Cascaret now and then and never know the misery caused by a lazy liver, clogged bowels or an upset stomach.

Don't put in another day of distress. Let Cascarets cleanse and regulate your stomach; remove the sour, undigested and fermenting food and that misery-making gas; take the excess bile from your liver and carry out of the system all the constipated waste matter and poison in the intestines and bowels. Then you will feel great.

A Cascaret tonight will surely straighten you out by morning. They work while you sleep. A 10-cent box from any drug store means a clear head, sweet stomach and clean, healthy liver and bowel action for months. Children love to take Cascarets because they taste good — never gripe or sicken.

A Disagreeable Type

By RUTH CAMERON

"SPEAK well of thy neighbor or not at all,"

Not long ago I had the pleasure of meeting a man who had been travelling for many years as the ship's doctor on one of the coastwise steamers. It seemed to me that in the double capacity of doctor and traveller he must have met many unusual people. So one day I asked him to tell me about some of them.

"Well, Miss Cameron," he said, "there was a party of four who sat at my table two trips ago that beat anything I ever struck. Now maybe you won't believe this, but I sat there with them for fifteen meals, and in all that time I never heard one of those people say a good word about anybody. They raked everybody on the boat fore and aft, made fun of them, talked scandal about them and ran them down generally. They had a bad word for every officer and every steward on the ship, and what they said about each other when any of them was rash enough to leave the table first, was a caution."

The other day I received a letter from one of my letter friends and promptly thought of the ship's doctor.

"Some day will you please write something to suit such individuals as this?" requested my correspondent. "I am going to give you actual conversations except for names. This individual is my next-door neighbor. I was out one morning watching for the postman. My neighbor was on on a similar errand at her front door. A stylish looking woman, with whom I have since become acquainted and found to be a model housewife, passed by. I remarked to my neighbor on the pleasing effect of her costume. 'Don't you think it's awfully loud? I don't believe she is much good either,' she said, 'I wouldn't say a word of harm about the woman for the world, but I have seen things that didn't look just right to me.'

Just then a neighbor passed drawing some chicken feed in a child's wagon. She had been to the market and gotten it cheaper. 'Look at that,' said my neighbor, 'I think I would be hard-up before I'd haul chicken feed through the street.'

'Did you know Mrs. C. had gone to the Springs?' was the next remark. 'Mrs. C.?—I'm afraid I don't know her.' 'Don't you remember—that woman who went up the aisle at church last Sunday with her belt pulled away from her skirt?' I had to admit that I had not noticed. I could keep this up indefinitely, but I have some regard for your time."

My letter friend suggests that I write something condemning these people.

I don't see much need of it. Do you?

It seems to me they are self-condemned. No one who doesn't belong to their rank has any use for them, and even those who do, talk about them behind their backs, for there is no honor among character thieves.

But one thing I do suggest. Conditions like these have a beginning. These people weren't always as bad as that. They must have gradually grown worse. Now hadn't you and I better see to it that we never, never make the first start towards such a beginning?

MISS JANE ADDAMS WILL MAKE SPEECHES FOR PROGRESSIVES

Chicago, Oct. 1—Miss Jane Addams has returned from New York and is ready to take the stump for the Progressive party. "This is a campaign of social and economic measures. That is why women all over the country are going into it. It is not that women have changed; that they have turned their attention from philanthropy to politics. It is only that they have found an opening through politics to accomplish their work better than in any other way. I cannot see any difference in going before the legislature to ask for suffrage or child labor or shorter hours and in asking the people at large to help us secure such reforms. It would be impossible to say that this is not dignified for a woman to do."

FAMOUS SONGS BY ALICE LLOYD

The Alice Lloyd songs that have swept her into fame over both England and America, are sung by her in Little Miss Fix-It. They include Cupid, Oh Mother, The Hobble Promonade, Ship Ahoy, and the always demanded success that has apparently never grown old in the minds of the theatre-goers, Splash Me, with its accompanying saucy by-play. The engagement of Little Miss Fix-It here is for two days only, on next Friday and Saturday.

EAGER TO HAVE IT ENDED

"I'll be glad when this campaign is over and the votes have been counted."

"Why should you care? Is your business affected in presidential years?"

"No, but I have a lot of old friends with whom I'm anxious to be on speaking terms again."

Zam-Buk Cures Bad Burns.

Stoker Kingsnorth, of H.M.S. "Cochrane," says:—"I slipped and fell with my arm on an exhaust steam pipe, which fairly frizzled the skin. At once the ship's surgeon dressed my arm, but the burns took the wrong way, owing to a lot of dirt from the pipe setting up blood-poison. A large scab appeared, and from underneath the festering flesh, matter oozed out. I was in fearful pain and didn't know how to get ease.

"For weeks I remained under treatment, but the ordinary ointments proved no good. Indeed, I got worse. I therefore obtained a supply of Zam-Buk and almost as soon as this was applied I got ease. From the very first application, healing commenced; and a few boxes of Zam-Buk healed my wound completely."

Zam-Buk cures eczema, ulcers, abscesses, ringworm, bad leg, varicose ulcers, piles, cold sores, chapped hands, babies' sores, etc. All stores at 50c., or post free from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, for price. Send 1c. stamp for trial box.

DOCTOR PUTS BREATH OF LIFE INTO LITTLE ONE

Physician's Efforts Save Life of Dying Babe After Two Hours of Work

New York, Oct. 1—Dr. Arthur Krida, a young ambulance doctor at Bellevue Hospital, showed the stuff of which great physicians are made, when, by his ingenuity and persistency he put life into a newly-born infant which was practically dead when the doctor took charge.

Without any appliances for inducing artificial respiration that could be used on so young a child, Dr. Krida for forty minutes breathed into the infant's mouth, forcing the air out again by a gentle pressure on the tiny body. At the end of that time, physically exhausted himself, he saw that the child would live. His reward, when he returned to Bellevue, was to find that the supper hour was over. But, as he remarked philosophically, "it's all in the day's work."

It was about 5.30 o'clock when the hurry call came to Bellevue and Dr. Krida jumped on the ambulance and started for 531 Avenue A., where Mrs. Maringolo Losico had just become the mother of twin boys. The first born was a husky youngster, as well and hearty as a baby could be. But the second showed absolutely no sign of life. The nurse in charge called patrolman Backner, who summoned the ambulance.

When Dr. Krida reached the house he found the baby's face blue from asphyxiation. He placed his ear to the chest, but could detect no movement of the heart. The stethoscope, however, showed that life was not quite extinct. Some method of inducing artificial respiration was necessary, and at once, if the baby's life was to be saved. Dr. Krida had no appliances that could be used. For a few seconds he thought and then he decided to be his own pulmotor.

Opening the infant's mouth he breathed gently down the throat, at the same time raising the little arms from the sides. Then he closed the mouth and pressed the arms down carefully, expelling the air. Perhaps three seconds later, he again opened the child's mouth, again breathed down the throat and again expelled the air.

About fourteen times a minute he repeated this operation, keeping it up for forty minutes. At the end of that time the child showed sufficient signs of vitality, so that he felt that the ordinary raising and lowering of the arms would suffice.

For two hours and ten minutes in all Dr. Krida worked over the baby before he considered that it would be safe for him to leave. By that time the little one was breathing naturally, the blue pallor had disappeared and a natural color had taken its place.

The doctor put on his coat, picked up his instrument case and climbed wearily into the ambulance, every muscle in his body aching as if from a hard day's work. He had had no supper before he left the hospital, and he felt that he had earned it. But supper was over, and, so weary that he could not wait for any to be prepared, Dr. Krida threw himself upon his bed and slept the sleep of an utterly exhausted man.

Physicians said that while the method used by Dr. Krida had been employed before, they could not recall any instance in which such long continued work was necessary.

GIRL ARRESTED ON CHARGE OF SWINDLING DRY GOODS HOUSES

Posed as Daughter of Governor and Wife of Rich New Yorker

New York, Oct. 1—Posing as a daughter of Governor Foss, of Massachusetts, as wife of various wealthy men, and acting other bold roles, a girl in her early twenties swindled Boston and New York firms of several thousand dollars' worth of finery, according to a confession which the police declare the young woman has made.

When she first fell into their hands she told the police she was Frances Hollender, child of wealthy parents, and a "pupil in a Baltimore convent." Her "baby stare" bespoke the role she assumed, but according to the alleged confession she was better acquainted with the reform school at Lancaster, Mass., than with the Baltimore convent, and had a string of half a dozen aliases.

The West Side police station looked like the dressing room of an opera house when the detectives spread out fifty expensive gowns of Fifth Avenue modelling they had discovered at a hotel where the girl had been staying. Upon the discovery of her great store of gowns she is alleged to have made her confession.

Only six months ago she said, she was released on probation from a term in the Lancaster Reform School for the larceny from a Boston jeweller of two diamond pendants which she secured by representing herself as one of the twin daughters of Governor Foss. She ran away from the probation officers, served as a nurse in the State Hospital at Seward, R. I., for a time, had a love affair with a Harvard student, and came to New York. Representing herself as the wife of a wealthy resident of Lynn, Mass., she obtained several expensive gowns from a Fifth Avenue establishment, and in a similar manner obtained finery from other fashion houses.

"I came to this city," she said, "because I wanted to see life and excitement. I have always wanted to live in hotels, where one is independent in coming and going. I did not expect to get all these pretty things without paying for them; but I thought I would be able to pay some time. I did not think I was stealing."

She said she originally came from Chicago, but she would not tell the names of her parents. She was held in $2,000 bail.

SPOKE ON SOUTH AFRICA.

Rev. Alfred Hall, of Durban, South Africa, commissioner for the Nelson shields in Canada, gave a very interesting lecture on South Africa before, during and after the late war, in the Seamen's Institute last night. Mr. Hall departed from the usual methods of lecturers and instead of the more formal address he gave many interesting personal experiences which added much to the pleasure of the evening.

During the evening Miss A. Thompson gave two piano solos and Mr. Walker sang two solos.

The number present was not so large as expected but those in attendance felt that they had obtained a greater insight into the affairs of South Africa.

A silver collection was taken in aid of the Seamen's Institute.

A SPIRITED YOUNG LADY WRITES OF HAIR AND HERPICIDE

I am really ashamed of some of my girl friends when I look at their hair. There is no sense in having such looking heads. It simply shows that while they may be scrupulously neat in every other way, they are careless about their hair.

Thin, scraggy, wispy hair generally indicates dandruff and dandruff is caused by a germ. Newbro's Herpicide will kill that germ and keep the scalp as clean and healthy as can be. This permits the hair to grow naturally and luxuriantly. That terrible itching which goes with dandruff stops with almost the first application.

Substitutes or remedies said to be "just as good" are sometimes offered, but it is better to buy the genuine original germ killer, Newbro's Herpicide. There is no guesswork about that preparation. A trial isn't necessary, just buy a bottle and use it. The results are sure to be better than you expect.

Applications obtained at the better barber shops. Send 10c. in postage for sample and book to The Herpicide Co., Dept. ..., Detroit, Mich.

Newbro's Herpicide in 50c. and $1.00 sizes is sold by all dealers who guarantee to do all that is claimed. If you are not satisfied your money will be refunded. E. Clinton Brown, special agent.
