hoped that they may continue to run some days longer, at their regular hour.

The Montreal Gazette of Thursday evening contains a letter signed by Colonels Macdonnell, Fraser, Chisholm, and A. Macdonnell, of the Glengary militia, to the Editor, stating the readiness of their four regiments to assist in maintaining the royal authority in the lower province, and that they have applied to Sir Francis Head for arms and ammunition.

One hundred and twenty of the third battalion of Leeds Light Infantry, (in Upper Canada,) lately met their colonel, and volunteered their immediate services for Lower Canada. Also, the Perth Artillery company, and 600 of the second regiment of Grenville militia.

The enrolling of men for the several volunteer corps of artillery and infantry commenced yesterday, and went on with a spirit beyond the expectation of the most sanguine. We understand that upwards of four hundred men had volunteered before three o'clock, and probably before this evening, the several corps now authorised will have completed their complement. One company, nearly eighty, consists of sailors, many among them old man-of-war-men, who will make excellent hands at the batteries.

The guns on the works were fired yesterday, for the purpose of scaling the guns which alarmed the country people, who supposed that the city was actually attacked.

It is generally believed that poor Lieutenant Weir was murdered by the party conveying him from St. Denis to Saint Charles. The deed was done by a Capt. Jalbert, who commanded the party.

Mr. Papineau was at St. Marc, on the other side of the river, during the engagement at St. Charles, and is believed to have made his escape.

Just as the Steamboat British America was about to leave the wharf yesterday for Montreal, with a Barge in tow, having on board a quantity of ammunition and a large number of muskets, a party of disaffected persons probably forty in number, were observed on board as steerage passengers, and their conduct and appearance being suspicious, Mr. Dyde the agent of the Steamboat Company, thought it would be dangerous to trust a cargo of such a nature in these perilous times, without a Military guard, he accordingly stated his suspicions to the Commandant of the Garrison, who immediately ordered a suitable escort to be furnished. A sergeant and 15 rank and file of the 65th Regiment were detached for the duty, and Lieut. Col. Baird himself accompanied his men on board. From the sequel it appeared that Mr. Dyde's suspicions were well founded, for on the guard gaining the quarter deck, and the Serjeant giving the word, to load with ball-cartridge, the greater part of these fellows left the vessel, five were afterwards, we understand, found concealed and were turned out. They were all well-known as disaffected characters, for the most part from Champlain Street, and their names in connexion with the occurrence of yesterday will be well remembered.

Montreal, Dec. 1st.—The late accounts from Grand Brule and its neighbourhood are of a character to demand a full share of public attention. On Saturday last, a muster of some hundreds of the rebels took place at Grand Brule, and on Sunday a second was held, at which we have been credibly informed that no less than 2000 men were in attendance. For some time past, we are assured they have been at work upon entrenchments of one kind and another, for the defence of Grand Brule, from an attack in either direction, whether from Montreal or from the back country.—An American gentleman who passed through the place about noon on Tuesday last, informs us that he was stopped there and examined, by a body of about 150 armed men, who appeared to be acting as a regular guard under the command of a man named Coursolles. In the course of his examination, he was told that they had been keeping such a guard there ever since the Saturday before, and were determined to allow no communication but such as they might think unobjectionable, to take place through their district. While detained, our informant saw a man who was stated to be a prisoner make his escape from the house of a Mr. Brazeau, just by. He was instantly pursued by a mounted party, and doubtless retaken. After some delay, our informant himself was allowed to proceed, but he was assured by the mail-carrier who overtook him at St. Martin that evening, that the rebels regretted afterwards that they had not made him prisoner.

On Wednesday, we learn that the mail-carrier was himself stopped on his return, and his mail taken from him. The same day a party of 100 or more proceeded to visit and disarm most of the loyalists residing in that quarter. Some days before, individuals had been thus visited, but this time the movement was made general. A large proportion of these disarmed loyalists came into town yesterday with their families, and we are assured by individuals of their number with whom we have conversed, that the whole of them will immediately follow.—It is time the leaders in this quarter were well looked after. Their misguided followers are stated to be confident a complete victory has been gained over Col. Wetherall at St. Charles. We fear that nothing short of a speedy visit from that gallant officer, with a strong brigade, will suffice to undeceive them.—(Courier.)

The return of Colonel Wetherall and his gallant troops from Chambly yesterday, was an interesting sight to the hundreds who crowded on the wharf to witness it. The Cavalry landed first—two of them carrying the liberty pole and cap erected at St. Charles at the meeting of the six counties, with a wooden tablet bearing the inscription "A Papineau par ses concitoyens reconnaissans," the former fragment of the spoils looking sadly like a fool's-cap on a barber's pole.—The Artillery followed, with the two little guns taken at Pt. Oliviere, in addition to their proper armament. After them rode the Commanding Officer, followed by the Band of the Royals and the Infantry,—the first company of whom escorted the prisoners, 32 in number.

From the information we have been able to collect from those who accompanied the expedition, we are enabled to re-assert the general accuracy of the account we have already given of its proceedings. The length of the action was perhaps somewhat greater than was reported, and the prisoners actually taken after it was over were only 25, instead of being sixty, or more, as oral report had made it. The stockade did not include much of the village, but only a space of a few acres round Mr. Debartzch's house. After the action, the troops spent the night in that part of the village which lay to the north of it. They found the village deserted.—The next morning the Priest returned, and received his orders to attend to the burial of the dead. Among those who are positively stated to have been in Mr. Debartzch's house at the time of the attack, were C. Drolet, R. Desrivieres, and Dr. Beaubien. Papineau is declared to have crossed the river to St. Marc just as the troops came up. T. S. Brown, according to the prisoners, rode off at the very first of the fire, telling the poor fellows posted in the entrenchments that he was going to bring up a reinforcement he pretended to have got at a little distance, but was not seen or heard of afterwards. The report of his previous misconduct appears to be confirmed. Among the prisoners, whose names are given in another column, three are of some note; Duvert, the Notary, Durocher, a merchant with some property, and Lemire, his clerk, all of St. Charles. The soldiers wounded in the action were left at St. Hilaire, with a guard, in charge of Dr. Sewall.

We are informed that two 24 pounders had been mounted within the entrenchment on the south side, where the attack was made. They were spiked and committed to the safe keeping of the river Richelieu. A hundred stand of arms, or more, were also taken and destroyed.—The fort was well provisioned. The oral report first brought of the quarter in which the attack was made; was incorrect.—The defenders of the fort, we understand, were about 1500 in number at the first, and most of them fought with a spirit worthy of better leaders and a better cause. The survivors, we hope, have learnt a lesson which they will not soon require to have repeated.

December, 2.—On Tuesday last, a person named Chartrand, a respectable mason, residing at St. John's, and a loyal volunteer, left his house to collect a debt due to him, a few miles out of the village, by one Roy, and on his return he was arrested by five men with loaded muskets, who set him up against a tree and fired at him. One ball pierced his heart, and several others showed the deadly aim which his savage murderers took. We have conversed with a gentleman who saw the dead body. In consequence of Chartrand's not returning to St. John's, fears were entertained that he had been taken prisoner by some of the rebels, who have scouts over all the neighbourhood, and Mr. Macrae with twelve of the Dorchester Volunteers set out in search of him, when they learned the particulars of his untimely fate.

The rebels are still in force on the rivers Chambly and Yamaska, and in the County of the Two Mountains.

A letter from Sorel of Thursday evening last, says that the troops there under the Hon. Colonel Gore were to march on Friday morning for St. Denis, and we understand that they had marched when the steamer St. George, which left Montreal on Friday morning, passed Sorel. Some loyalists, who were prisoners at St. Hyacinthe, had been enlarged.—Quebec Gazette.

King's College, Fredericton, December 12, 1837.

The usual Examination of the College and Collegiate School will take place on Tuesday and Wednesday next; and at two 2 o'clock on Tuesday a convocation will be held for admission to Degrees.

On Monday morning last, the 43d Regt. began to move from our Garrison, on their route to Canada. A detachment consisting of 80 men, under the command of Lieut. Colonel Booth, were the first who left, amidst the cheers of a large concourse of the inhabitants, who had assembled to witness their departure; another company followed their companions in arms yesterday morning, under the command of Captain Egerton; and we understand that the whole of the remaining companies will be on their march by Saturday next. We need scarcely add, that the departure of this gallant corps is universally regretted throughout the Province.—Royal Gazette.

A company of the 43d Regt. forming the first detachment, set out this morning on their rout for Canada, under the command of Lt. Col. Boorth. They were on sleds containing eight men each, exclusive of the driver; and went off in high spirits, amid the cheers of those they left behind them.—Sentinel.

An Officer of the Commissariat has been sent on to Madawaska, to make arrangements for the conveyance of troops, from the Grand Falls on thro' Lower Canada.—Ib.
