His Red-Headed Honor's Say.

San Francisco Wave.

For the purpose of this tale it must be remembered that Judge Coffey has red hair. Perhaps the shade is more properly termed singed," but then a chevelure approaching rubescence is ever dubbed red. Ex-Judge Bowers, a venerable jurist, who in early days was a light of the Superior bench, was arguing a law point of some importance before Judge Coffey. He has a trick of emphasizing his periods with an uplifted forefinger, and, after defining his views, ended up very solemnly:

"I see around me many gray-haired lawyers, whose opinion I have no doubt agree with those I have just expressed to your Honor—men whose snowy locks testify to——"

At this juncture Judge Coffey leaned over the desk, and in his mildest tones interrupted:

"I have no doubt you are right, judge, and your reference to gray-haired men is very appropriate, but I'd like to remind you there's a red-headed man whose opinion is of most importance in this case."

Oldest Proposal on Record.

The oldest marriage proposal of which there is definite record is 3,425 years old. This remarkable ancient record, which is in the Oriental department of the British Museum, is a small clay tablet, measuring eight inches by four inches, and contains about 98 lines of very fine cuneiform writing. It is made of Nile mud and bears upon it the marriage proposal of a Pharaoh for the hand of the daughter of the King of Babylon. It is a duplicate copy of a letter written about B. C., 1530.—Boston Gazette.

The most efficacious stimulant to excite the appetite is Angostura Bitters, the genuine of Dr. J. G. B. Siegert & Sons.

M. Antoine, the new conductor of the Paris Odeon, was an underpaid employe in the Paris gasworks eight years ago.

Increase of Russian Power.

Would western civilization be the gainer or the loser by an extension, amounting to predominance, of the Russian power? The many amiable qualities of the Russian character, which, perhaps, no person is better qualified to appreciate than the traveler who has enjoyed Russian hospitality, disarm those feelings of unreasoning antipathy, which, when once they have arisen between nations, are the most difficult to allay. But the Russian Government has unhappily precluded itself from appealing to the higher instincts of the cultivated European peoples.

Their ruthless treatment of the Jews, their cruel, pan-Slavic policy—nay, the recent persecution of that handful of Russian colonists in Armenia who are religious exiles rather than colonists—debar them from such an appeal. Their commercial policy is not calculated to enlist the good will of the commercial classes in Europe. They have sealed up that natural avenue of western commerce with Asia by the Black Sea and the Valley of the Kur. In this manner they have themselves afforded the strongest and most realistic arguments to those who still see in the Russian Empire a menace to all that Europe holds dear, and who quote the prophecy of the first Napoleon that Europe would again be overrun and her institutions overturned by the barbarians of the north.—Contemporary Review.

Hymen's Work.

Creed and Racial Distinctions Disregarded.

True Love Unites a Rich Quakeress and a Wealthy Hebrew.

Chicago, June 26.—The most remarkable and romantic marriage ceremony ever celebrated in this city took place Wednesday on the banks of the beautiful lagoon in Washington Park, and it united two wealthy Philadelphians under circumstances which have no precedent in the history of nuptial occasions.

The bride was Miss Boutine Butler, a distant relative of the Whitney and Hornblower families, of New York, and was a well known society belle in the leading circles of Philadelphia, Washington and New York.

Walter S. Lieber, the bridegroom, is a well known wholesale hardware and furniture dealer and manufacturer of Philadelphia, and a man of large wealth and high standing among the more aristocratic Hebrews of the Quaker City. The fact that the bride is a Quakeress and the groom a staunch adherent of the Jewish faith resulted in deferring the marriage for several years, but the great obstacle in the path of their true love imposed by the fact that the religious ethics of the Hebrew faith would not permit a rabbi to perform the ceremony, while the Quakers have no nuptial ceremony, was overcome in a striking and novel manner. With the assistance of 30 of her intimate friends who had been selected to officiate as bridesmaids, Miss Butler prepared a ceremonial which met the hearty approval of Mr. Lieber. This was chanted by the entire wedding procession as it reached the romantic shores of the wooded lake which ornaments Washington Park. The ceremony was solemn and beautiful and as the echoes of the chant died out over the still waters of the lake, Justice White, of Hyde Park, stepped forward, and in a few brief words legalized the union of the happy lovers.

Mrs. Whiteley, an intimate friend of the bride and a wealthy leader of society in Chicago's aristocratic suburb of Evanston, gracefully performed the duties of matron bridesmaid. The 30 bridesmaids were all dressed in white and formed a beautiful procession. Several guests were present who were intimate friends of the principal participants. Among those were the McDowells and Battersons, of Evanston. After the ceremony all returned to the House of Gertrude at 530 Forty-seventh street, an aristocratic school which the bride had been attending for several months. There they found awaiting them an elaborate banquet of which a huge wedding cake and 30 marriage loaves were the principal features. Miss Batterson, of Evanston, officiated as master of ceremonies. Between each chorus the school cry was given, song chanted and a toast for every participant was celebrated. Among the songs sung was the following:

"Oh, it won't be a stylish marriage,
For we can't afford a carriage;
But we'll look sweet on the seat of a bicycle built for two."

Each of the bridesmaids was presented with one of the wedding loaves and when the hilarious celebration was concluded Mr. and Mrs. Lieber took the 11:30 train for Detroit. It was originally arranged to have the marriage ceremony performed in Lovers' Lane on the wooded island in Jackson Park, but this plan was abandoned in order to catch an outgoing train with greater convenience. Several gentleman acquaintances and newspaper men have been sleeping on the wooded island for a night or two past in order to witness the ceremony, which was cleverly transferred to Washington Park. Nearly all of those who participated in the ceremony are well known in Chicago society and the romantic episode is the talk of the day.

Stonewall Jackson's Foe.

He Feared Whisky More Than He Did a Human Enemy.

"About daylight of the day before the second battle of Manassas," said a Confederate officer at a recent reunion of the blue and gray, "I was ordered to report to Gen. T. J. Jackson, with a detail of 100 men for special orders. I went at once to headquarters and presented the orders I had received. Gen. Jackson came out, and, beckoning me to follow him, rode some 50 yards from his staff, and then turned to me and halted.

"Captain, do you ever use liquor?" he asked.

"No, sir," I replied.

A smile lit up his rugged face as he said, "I sent for a special detail of 100 men under command of an officer who never used spirituous liquors. Are you that man?"

"Yes, sir," I said, "I was detailed on that account."

"'Well, then," he continued, 'I have an order to give, upon the execution of which depends the success of the greatest movement and the result of the battle soon to be fought.'

"'If to keep sober is all that is needed, general, you may depend upon me,' I said.

"'No,' he said, 'that is not all; but, unless you can resist temptation to drink, you cannot carry out my orders. Do you see that warehouse over there?' pointing to a large building a little way off. 'Take your command up to that depot, have the barrels of bread rolled out and sent down to the railroad track, so that my men can get it as they pass, and then take your picked men into the building and spill all the liquor there; don't spare a drop, nor let any man taste it under any circumstances. This order I expect you to execute at any cost.'

"He turned and was about to ride back to his staff, when I called hastily:

"One moment, general! Suppose an officer of superior rank should order me under arrest, and then gain possession of the warehouse?"

"Coming up close to me, and looking me through and through, as it seemed to me, he said, with a look of solemnity that I shall never forget:

"Unless I relieve you in person, you are exempt from arrest unless upon my written order. I fear that liquor more than Pope's army,' he added, as he rode rapidly away.

"I took my men down to the warehouse which had become so important, and threw a guard around it, placing five men at each entrance, with orders neither to allow anyone to enter nor to enter themselves.

"The next thing was to roll out the bread. Which we did. Just as we were finishing that task, I was called to one of the entrances to find a general officer with his staff demanding that the guards should either allow him to enter or bring him out some liquor. Of course I refused to comply with the command, upon which he ordered his adjutant to place me under arrest.

"I told him I was there by Gen. Jackson's personal order, and was specially exempt from arrest. He ordered his staff to dismount and enter the warehouse, and I gave my men the orders to level their guns and make ready.

"This made the general halt in spite of his thirst, and hold a consultation with his officers. They concluded to try persuasion, since they could not get what they wanted by force. But they found that method of no more avail than the other. They demanded to know my name and what command I belonged to, and threatened to report me for disobedience.

"I should never have yielded, and whether they would have pushed things to an extremity in their raging desire for the liquor I do not know; but just at that moment Gen. A. P. Hill came galloping up with his staff, and naturally wanted to know what was the trouble. I explained the situation, which the quick-witted general took in at once, and ordered the thirsty squad off.

"'Have you any orders to burn the building?' he asked.

"'No,' I answered. 'I have not.'

"Without a word he rode away, and within an hour there came an order from Gen. Jackson to fire the warehouse, and when it was well destroyed to report to him.

"I carried out the order to the letter. Not a man got a drink that day, and for that time the foe that Stonewall Jackson most dreaded was vanquished."

Saving Power of Marriage.

I have noticed that a married man falling into misfortune is more apt to retrieve his situation in the world than a single one, chiefly because his spirits are soothed and relieved by domestic endearments, and self-respect kept alive by finding that, although abroad be darkness and humiliation, yet there is still a little world of love at home, of which he is monarch. Whereas, a single man is apt to run to waste and self-neglect—to fall to ruins, like some deserted mansions, for want of inhabitants. I have often had occasion to mark the fortitude with which women sustain the almost overwhelming reverses of fortune. Those disasters which break down the spirit of man, and prostrate him in the dust, seem to call forth all the energies of the softer sex, and give such intrepidity and elevation to their character that it times it approaches sublimity.—Washington Irving.

GOLD IN PEOPLE'S MOUTHS.

A dentist in good practice uses over $500 worth of gold a year in filling teeth. Some prepare their own gold; others get it from the gold beaters; but the greater part obtain it from dental supply firms.

This gold is put up in eight ounce packages, packed in small glass phials, each containing a fraction of an ounce. The cylindrical pieces of gold in it are goldfoil of a very soft and spongy kind.

When pressed into a hollow tooth, one of these cylinders will not take up one-twentieth of the space it occupied in the bottle. About $4,000,000 is now concealed in the mouths of people in England.

Cats are said to die at an elevation of 13,000 feet. Dogs and men can climb the greatest known natural elevations.

Do You Use It?

It's the best thing for the hair under all circumstances. Just as no man by taking thought can add an inch to his stature, so no preparation can make hair. The utmost that can be done is to promote conditions favorable to growth. This is done by Ayer's Hair Vigor. It removes dandruff, cleanses the scalp, nourishes the soil in which the hair grows, and, just as a desert will blossom under rain, so bald heads grow hair, when the roots are nourished. But the roots must be there. If you wish your hair to retain its normal color, or if you wish to restore the lost tint of gray or faded hair use
