Life Assurance the Best Investment.

"There is no such incentive to thrift as a compulsory financial payment on an investment that cannot be sold, traded off, mortgaged or thrown away," says a man who believes in life assurance.

"I never believed this until experience taught it to me. I remember sitting down once and figuring how easy it is to beat the best offers of life assurance by putting the money equivalent of the premiums into a savings bank or real estate; but I have tried all three plans, and the life assurance plan makes the others look like counterfeit money."—Spectator.

The Other Fellow.

"Who says the illiterate get no pleasure out of the classic art?" remarked an alumnus of the University of Rochester recently. "A copy of the 'Winged Victory' was placed in the center of our library last summer. One of the workmen, a recent importation from Dublin, surveyed the headless and armless statue with some curiosity.

"'An phwat may ye call that fellow?' he asked.

"'That's the statue of Victory,' said the librarian.

"'Victory, is it?' said the man; 'begorra, I'd like to see the other fellow, thin.'"

Through the Montreal Herald's Sieve.

"There may be such a thing as speaking too soon, but up to date it looks as though Canadian life insurance men were not crooked enough to be interesting."
