The Nugents of Carriconna

An Irish Story.

By Tighe Hopkins, author of "Twixt Love and Duty," "For Freedom," etc.

If Arthur felt any trepidation in approaching his father on the delicate subject in hand, Anthony on his side had thought it as well that Arthur—whose ridicule of, if not his opposition to, the astronomical project he had been rather in dread of—should be won over immediately.

"Well, now, your worship," said Arthur boldly, perceiving his opening here, "why don't you fix me down in some handy place like Gravelmount, which is next door to us here, and then you'd have me nicely."

"Gravelmount? Gravelmount?" queried Anthony. "What would I fix ye at Gravelmount for? Haven't ye comfortable quarters where ye are?"

"At Gravelmount, your worship, I might take a wife, and that would fix me better than anything."

"Wife, what wife?" growled Anthony.

"There's a question," said Arthur; "Lady Frayne's ready to give me Kitty this minute."

"And who told you that, pray?"

"She told me herself. I lunched at the Abbey to-day."

"That's a great boundin' way ye have, indeed. And what part did I play in your arrangements with my lady?"

"Oh, your worship, we gave you the part of the benevolent father."

"I'll go bail ye did. But ye didn't take my counsel first."

"We took that for granted, your worship."

"Ye did, indeed. But, see here now, Arthur, my boy; I'm not too fond of a young man's marrying himself at your age. I was a good many years older than you before I ventured to make up to your mother. And Kitty, now; Kitty's barely out of her teens. I think Kitty would be all the better for a year or two more in the keeping of that fine shrewd woman her mother."

This bold harangue took Arthur somewhat by surprise. From what Aunt Barbara had told him, he had supposed that his father's mind had been more or less attuned to Gravelmount and Kitty.

Apparently, however, Anthony's mind had not been properly prepared on either of those subjects.

Perceiving that his son paused, Anthony continued:

"My boy, I'd have you reflect about this enormous matter, and weigh it well in your mind. Do ye know anything about the stars, now? Do ye know how long it would take to go from here to Jupiter?"

"Well, let we see now," said Arthur; "to Jupiter? It would depend, of course, on how you proposed to go. If you went by English express, sixty miles an hour say, I suppose it would take you about a thousand years; if you went on the old mare you would be longer, of course."

This was one for Anthony, who did not quite know what to say next.

"I see," he said at length, "that you know something of astronomy, Arthur. 'Tis a tremendous great science. 'Tis a science that a person can never get to the end of. And I don't know that you could do a better thing at present, Arthur, than to go on with your studies in the company of my friend, Mrs. Lytton. My! my! but that's a powerful clever women, and so amenable to."

Arthur stared open-eyed at his father. What should this portend?

Anthony shifted uneasily under the gaze of his son.

"I shouldn't like, sir," said Arthur, "to step in between you and Mrs. Lytton. You see you are only just beginning the subject yourself. You'll want a great deal of Mrs. Lytton's time for the present."

"I will," said Anthony, "I will. For I believe that the stars are my vocation; but I wouldn't like to cut you off entirely from all that Mrs. Lytton could teach you. I tell ye now, Arthur, that when ye're learning under Mrs. Lytton, ye don't know that ye're learning at all, the way of her is so pleasant."

By the time his father had got to this point Arthur's mystification was measureless. The severe sobriety of Anthony's habits forbade any notion that his counsel was inspired by wine; but other explanation of these extraordinary utterances there was none.

"Upon my word, your worship," said Arthur, "I haven't the ghost of a notion what you're driving at."

"Phew," said Anthony, "'tis not your African lingo I'm talking, but plain Irish."

"Well then, in plain Irish," said Arthur, "what are your proposals about me? You talked just now of my staying at home to help you. I'm willing; though I'm not tired of roaming yet, and can forage for myself as I have done. But if I stay at home I must have Kitty. I talked in 'plain Irish' at the Abbey to-day, but, of course, if I have not your support, which, as things are, I thought I might have had, Kitty and I must wait till I can make my own independence."

"Gently, now, gently," said Anthony; "I'm not saying no to you. I'm only for bidding ye wait. Don't go scampering off in that way. You're very well at home here, and there'll be plenty for ye to do, and plenty for ye to eat. But take your time. Go easy; the Nugents must take things quietly and decently now. We'll be an example to the country. We'll walk soberly, we'll show no rashness at all to anybody. Buck went a great deal too fast. Buck was one of the family, my boy, though you don't remember him. I am sorry. Buck didn't go quieter; but he's dead, and we'll say no more about him. 'Tis your father, my boy, who must be a pattern to you now. Kitty's a good girl, and one of these days she'll make somebody a good wife; maybe 'twill be yourself, but don't be hurrying the poor child till she knows rightly what you're talking of leading her into."

Arthur smoked his last pipe alone. But on that evening he found no inspiration in tobbaco. His father, if not opposed to his plans, seemed at any rate to have some mysterious purpose of his own that did not chime with them. What that might be Arthur did not divine. He laughed at Mrs. Lytton and astronomy, but he continued to be mystified. And as he went up to bed he could not but feel that Gravelmount seemed a trifle farther away than it had done at lunch time.

CHAPTER XIX.

CAPTAIN TRENCHARD'S SECRET.

Dora sat on the top of a hill overlooking the lake, and wondered whether she were the most foolish woman in the world. It was full afternoon, warm with a tempering breeze from the glowing surface of the lake. With her instinctive habit of taking the best possible care of herself, she had found a spot where the sun and air combined to produce the happiest and most equable temperature, and was comfortably reclined against an oak tree well padded with ancient moss, which served the double purpose of a support for her back and a shade for her eyes. In the shimmering air the landscape spreading away beneath and around her was but dimly outlined, but Dora was not intent upon the landscape. She was thinking of herself and her affairs.

"What in the name of all that is absurd, am I going to do here?" she said; "was there ever such a wild goose chase as mine from Paris to Carriconna?" She picked up a morsel of grey rock and sent it rolling down the hillside, idly watching it as it bounded over the uneven surface of the ground, its progress finally arrested by a bush of furze.

"So!" said she, "I'm in a bush, to; happily for me, it isn't a prickly one. I wish I had a confidante. What an odd thing for me to wish. I have always hated confidantes. But I should like some one to tell me how stupid I am, and then to tell me what to do next. My cousin has a smattering of astronomy; he knows how long it would take to get to Jupiter. I hope his knowledge does not extend much further; it would be awkward if he were to catch me tripping, and really this handbook," giving a little contemptuous tap to the volume beside her, "doesn't carry me much beyond the point I arrived at in school. School! What a long journey backwards to school! Why, in seems centuries since I had my first love-letter from Alec, and that was years after the school-days. What do I want with Uncle Anthony's money? That's absurd—of course I want it. But can I get it—can I get any of it? I begin to think that a very impossible undertaking. I didn't come to steal bank notes, but it is quite certain that they will not drop into my hands. Que faire, dane? Arthur and I are not to marry each other, I think, and——"

A report which sounded like a pistol-shot echoed close at her ear. Another followed it almost immediately. Gun-shots or pistol-shots, in Ireland, have a peculiarly disquieting effect on the tympanum of a stranger. Dora shut her book with a snap and started up. There was nobody in sight. A third shot disturbed the quiet air. On the side of the hill facing the lake there was not a human creature visible; Dora turned about and glanced in the opposite direction. At the bottom of the hill on this side she saw her friend Mr. Trenchard with a pistol in his hand. Seeing her, he hastened up the hill.

Carter's Little Liver Pills must not be confounded with common Cathartic or Purgative Pills, as they are entirely unlike them in every respect. One trial will prove their superiority

It is said that money can never give happiness. This is an experiment, however, that every man wishes to try for himself.

A man's wife should always be the same especially to her husband; but if she is weak and nervous and uses Carter's Iron Pills, she cannot be, for they will make her "feel like a different person," at least so they all say, and their husbands say so, too.

When a man tells his acquaintances that he is sorry he ever got married, it is safe to assume that his wife is sorry too.

Hair Magic

Is a good name of Dr. Dorenwend's German preparation for the hair. It really works like magic. All who have used it pronounce it to be unequaled for remedying the lost vitality of the hair roots, restoring gray hair, removing dandruff, etc. Just try it. It is first-class. All druggists sell it

The law can never make a man honest; it can only make him very uncomfortable when he is dishonest.

Directly and Indirectly.

Kidney complaint, dropsy and similar troubles depend directly on wrong action of the kidneys and indirectly on bad blood. Burdock Blood Bitters regulates the action of the kidneys and cleanses the blood from all impurities, in this way curing kidney complaint, dropsy, etc.

BORDER STATE BRIEFS.

The price of railroad from Fenton to its summer resort, Long Lake, is $1,000 bonus, and the citizens are trying to raise it. The line will be about four miles long.

Michael Jeffers, the Saginaw colonel, is going to build a $30,000 church in memoriam of his mother and sister. St. Mary's Catholic Church will be the beneficiary.

Ishpeming, Houghton, Calumet and Marquette will this season comprise the Upper Peninsula Baseball League. The salary limit is $750 and games will be played for three months after May 30, each club having 36 home games.

Bricks without straw or clay have proved successful at St. Joseph, the chemicals and sand drying in five days' exposure to the sun as hard as granite. The company is making 24,000 per day, with orders for 5,000,000 from Chicago.

At the Red Jacket shaft, the Calumet and Hecla Mining Company is putting in a "sinking engine" that will hoist rock from the bottom of a perpendicular shaft one mile deep. The shaft is now 3,000 feet deep and they are sinking at the rate of 100 feet per month.

The Executive Committee of the State Y. M. C. A. has decided to call the State convention at Owosso the second week in October. The State association will incorporate. The reports received show the organization highly prosperous, with rapidly increasing membership and interest.

Rhoda J. Pratt, formerly private secretary to the adjutant general of this State, has been given a verdict of $8,000 against Prof. J. Clegg Wright, of Cincinnati, for breach of promise. The case was tried at Cleveland, and Wright is a lecturer and spiritualist, and he broke his promise to marry.

The Tamarack-Osceola Copper Manufacturing Company and the Detroit and Lake Superior Smelting Company are negotiating for a consolidation of interests. The latter is the richest and most powerful company of its kind in the country. The works of the former are at Dollar Bay, three miles east of Hancock, where the works of the latter are situated.

The Senate's action in referring to the Judiciary Committee, despite his earnest protest, Senator Brown's measure which inverts the local option law by considering every county a prohibition county until its voters declare by ballot for the legal sale of liquor, gives one more bill its quietus. Upon a roll call the motion to refer the bill to the Committee of the Whole was lost—yeas 10, nays 14.

The Oarsman.

Edward Hanlan, the celebrated oarsman, found great efficacy in St. Jacobs Oil, and he says: "It is a reliable remedy for muscular pains in arms and legs and invaluable to oarsmen." All athletes use it.

"What are you doing in here?" asked the other fellow who had just come in. "Oh, just passing away the time," was the answer, as he handed his watch to the pawnbroker.

CROUP, WHOOPING COUGH and Bronchitis immediately relieved by Shiloh's Cure. W. T Strong, 184 Dundas street, agent.

Nothing dies—not even life, which gives up one from only to receive another. No good action, no good example, no generous endeavor, dies; it lives for ever in our race.

SHILOH'S COUGH and Consumption Cure is sold by us on a guarantee. It cures Consumption. W. T. Strong, 184 Dundas street, agent.

Asinus—What a fool; what a born fool I am!" Peter—There isn't a doubt of that. Asinus—Oh, I'm a fool, am I? Then I'd like to know what you are?

For lame back, side or chest, use Shiloh's Porous Plaster. Price 25 cents. W. T. Strong, 184 Dundas street, agent.

Somehow the man who snores loudest always seems to go to sleep first in the Pullman or Wagner car.

SHILOH'S VITALIZER is what you need for Constipation, Loss of Appetite Dizziness, and all symptoms of dyspepsia. Price 10 and 75 cents per bottle. W. T. Strong, 184 Dundas street, agent.

Ethel—Is Clara so very much in love? Maud—I should say she is. I saw her writing a letter to him the other day and she put "Dear Jack" on the envelop.

REASONS:::

Why some Dealers Decry Domestic Manufacture.

ABOUT CIGARS.

THE majority of cigars imported into Canada are made up under different brands to the ones by which the factories are identified.

WHY? So as to permit of large profits, and compel smokers to buy at the same establishment as the majority of retailers, who handle quantities, have cigars packed under their own brands, so that they control the sale of them.

THEREBY enabling them to sell inferior goods at prices inconsistent with those asked for fine grades manufactured by recognized factories of known reputation.

SIZES denote quality in all first-class Havana factories, therefore it behooves smokers to familiarize themselves with the different sizes made by the several factories whose goods they purchase.

THE majority of sizes, as offered to the Canadian public, are not standard ones, but are made and packed to imitate them.

NOTE the difference between a Reina Victoria size in the "Upmann," or any other first-class Havana brand and the same mark in the majority of brands that are being offered as fine goods.

FINE GOODS. It is absurd to imagine that Cigars of recognized "Vuelto Abajo" factories could be sold at prices quoted by some dealers.

VUELTO ABAJO The district of Vuelto Abajo is recognized by all tobacco dealers to be the finest in the Island of Cuba and no other tobacco is equal in quality, or commands as high a price on the market.

$1,000 00 We will forfeit the sum of one thousand dollars, to be distributed amongst the charitable institutions of this city (and every other city, where this advertisement appears), if our statement that (9) seven-eights of imported cigars brought into Canada are not of "Vuelto Abajo" tobacco can be disproved.

WE WILL forfeit a like sum for the same purpose, if our "La Cadena" brand of clear Havana Cigars is not manufactured exclusively of Vuelto Abajo Tobacco
