Joe Wright as Amateur Ball Player Shone Like in Rowing, Rugby, Boxing

Joe Wright, the hon. coach of the University of Pennsylvania Boat Club, is receiving plenty of attention these days in the press. The reporters turn out columns about Joe as an oarsman, and also refer to him as a former boxing champion and Rugby player, but never a word about his career in the amateur baseball ranks, where he shone also with considerable brilliance. In fact, Coach Wright started his career as a ball player in old Queen's Park before the game was barred from those classical quarters to the boys of the early 80's.

Joseph Wright played baseball with John Guinane, the late Father Guinane, W. W. Jeffries, the late Billy Crofoot, W. O. Galloway, the late Dr. Scott, in the early days. That was before the days of the Clippers of Hamilton, when the ambitious City had three teams in the five-club Canadian League, Toronto and London being the balance.

Joe's best game as an amateur ball-tosser was possibly when he played the successful part of pinch pitcher with the Varsity team at Ithaca in 1888, when the Toronto tourists beat Cornell in ten innings. There was no extra man in the game in those days, and the tourist team consisted of exactly nine men, and Jim Peat, the non-playing manager. The tour was an extensive one, to Brown University at Providence, Syracuse, Utica, Tonawanda, Niagara Falls, N.Y., and thru Ontario. The only game lost was to Brown.

In the Cornell game, Wright started in his usual position at centre field, with Sam Schultz in the box. All went well till the eighth, when a fusillade of hits brought a tie score and forced a change. Wright and Schultz switched places, and the big oarsman had his fast jumps in the working nicely, with the result that he held the Ithaca batsmen down, and the Varsity team worked around the winning run. Joe was also a reliable first-sacker and a hitter of no mean calibre.

As an Oarsman.

The following is the deserved boost that is going the rounds for Joe as an oarsman:

Joseph Wright, the new rowing coach of the University of Pennsylvania, will prove very popular if he is able to continue the successes which have marked his work with the Argonaut Rowing Club of Toronto, Canada, during the past eleven years as captain and coach.

Many Championships.

During that time the club has been returned victor in sixty-five championships at the Canadian Association of Amateur Oarsmen, sixty-two championships at Dominion Day regattas, twenty championships at the N.A.A.O. in seven years, five championships at the interprovincial regattas, two championships at the people's regattas and three championships at the middle states regatta.

Also, in that time the club was represented and won four heats for the Grand Challenge Cup in England, one of the heats being rowed in the fastest time ever made by a foreign crew in England over the Henley course in 6 minutes 53 seconds; also one heat of the 1908 Olympics in England, beating Norway, but losing to the Leanders, the winners, by one-quarter length. In 1912, at the Olympics in Stockholm, the Argonauts lost to the Leanders, the ultimate winners, by fifteen feet.

Won Fifty-One Medals.

Last year the club's oarsmen won fifty-one out of sixty-five medals offered at the C.A.A.O. regatta, securing nine firsts and two seconds in eleven starts. These achievements provide a convincing tribute to Mr. Wright's ability for selecting crews and coaching them.

Mr. Wright is an amateur coach, who, with a limited amount of time to spare from his duties as superintendent of the Toronto general postoffice, has developed crews which have been rarely defeated by those produced by the best professional coaches.

No name stands higher in the rowing world than that of Joe Wright. He has won 130 races with sweeps and sculls, including all the American and Canadian championships in singles, pairs, fours and eights. In 1885 he was a member of the crew which won the first American junior four race. Twenty years later he stroked the famous eight which won the American championship at Baltimore, establishing a record that still stands. In 1899 he stroked the first Canadian eight that carried off an American championship, and in 1903 he stroked the eight that won the first American Henley here. Two days later this crew established a record at the people's regatta which has not been broken. In 1906 he stroked the crew which was only beaten by six feet in the final heat for the grand challenge cup, after having won two heats. That the old spirit dies hard was illustrated when, at fifty years of age, he stroked the winning four at the fall regatta, in which twenty club crews competed.

He was the first Canadian to win a sculling race in England, when he carried off the Bedford Cup, and was also the first Canadian to win a heat in the Diamond sculls.

These are only a few of the 130 victories that the "grand old man" has won.

His eighteen years of continuous football with the Toronto Argonaut teams also must not be forgotten, during which time he did not miss a game, and his tenure of the heavyweight Canadian boxing championship.

The name of Joe Wright in the world of amateur sport stands for courage, strength, skill and fair play.
