THE CRONIN MURDER.

A PLOT FOR RESCUE DISCOVERED.

Some Time Next Week Burke and Coughlin Were to be Rescued. They Must be Saved to Prevent Implicating Others.

BY TELEGRAPH TO THE GAZETTE.

CHICAGO, October 19.—Daily News says a desperate plot has been discovered having for its object the rescue by force from Judge McConnell's court some day next week of Martin Burke and Daniel Coughlin, the Cronin suspects now awaiting trial with O'Sullivan, Beggs, and Kunz.

The plot which the News ascribes to the Clan-na-Gael, it says was gotten up in the interest of Coughlan and Burke, only for the reason that they are the men who must be saved at all hazards in order to prevent their confessing and implicating men whose necks are thought to be worth much more to the clans.

THE VERDICT.

THE CORONER'S JURY FIND WM. J. McDONALD GUILTY OF MURDER.

The Coroner Reviews the Case and the Jury Spend an Hour Discussing it.

At the afternoon session of the inquest yesterday after the GAZETTE went to press Mrs. Geo. A Barker was recalled. Witness deposed: Don't know what my brother William did with the money he drew from Mr. Clinch. I have not seen it, and have not indeed thought anything about it. My brother was accustomed to clean his boots at the store as were my boys.

EVENING SESSION.

H. W. Barker re-called and examined by Mr. Stockton—At times we receive packages that are short. When they are opened the firm can tell by their invoice whether the goods are short or not.

Mr. Stockton asked that a number of boxes of pipes he had obtained from Barker's store be brought into court. This was done. Each of the boxes was marked "1058."

Witness, after examining the numbers, stated that they had been made by Wm. McDonald. Witness noticed a great variety of ciphers, very few being of a style.

To the solicitor general—Sometimes packages come short. Never knew a package of strychnine to come from a manufacturer's broken, and a bottle missing like this (package shown).

To Mr. Stockton—A package might came broken and I not notice it.

Coroner Berryman then addressed the jury. In opening he referred to the sad and awful death of that estimable lady, Mrs. Macrae and to the heinous crime which led to her death—a crime unparalleled in the history of the province. He had selected his jurors with judgment—men whom he believed could be well entrusted with a case of that magnitude; men who would not permit sympathy or any undue feeling to warp their calm judgment.

Continuing, the Coroner gave a thorough review of the important points in the testimony since the discovery of the box; the evidence that Mrs. Macrae had come to her death by poisoning; the postal investigation; the finding of duplicate boxes at T. B. Barker's; McDonald's mysterious visits to that establishment; and the many circumstances which pointed to McDonald as the guilty party. And in conclusion, he said: In the face of the evidence that has been given that a box of that strychnine was missing; in the face of it being a deadly poison, still the firm of Messrs. T. B. Barker & Sons have not so far as appears before you made any enquiry in the endeavor to trace that bottle of poison. For the sake of their reputation if it were necessary they should have engaged a whole regiment of men if each man had [illegible] nine poison must be apparent from the evidence of Dr. Christie and that of Mr. Best. There is the evidence of Dr. Steeves as to McDonald's state of health, mentally, when he left the lunatic asylum; here as found in the employ of Messrs Barker, from which establishment it is proven as almost a certainty the boxes containing the poisoned candy came, and from which is also missing and unaccounted for a bottle of American strychnine. This is a court of inquiry, it does not follow that because you find a certain verdict it will be sustained or overruled in a court of higher jurisdiction—your duties are, as it were, much the same as those of a grand jury; with the question of his sanity you have nothing to do, that is a prerogative of a higher court to enquire into. You have first to ascertain the cause of the death of Mrs. Macrae, then to acertain if you can from the evidence who was the person who caused it.

The jury retired at 12.10 this morning, and at 1.30 returned with the following verdict:

That the said Catherine H. Macrae came to her death from eating candy upon which or in which strychnine had been placed, which candy had been sent through the post addressed to the Rev. Donald Macrae and received at the residence on Wednesday morning, October the 2nd, 1889.

And furthermore, from the evidence which is before us, we are of the opinion that the said candy was sent by William J McDonald.

So the jurors aforesaid on their oaths do say that the said William J McDonald did wilfully, feloniously and of his malice aforethought, kill and murder the said Catherine H. Macrae.

The Petitcodiac Burglary.

A Petitcodiac despatch of yesterday gives further particulars of the robbery at that place, the speedy capture of the burglars and the recovery of much of the stolen property.

Whiskey did it. The burglars in the robbery of Nathan Steeves jewelry store have been arrested, and the personality of the burglars created just as much surprise as the fact of the burglary. They are both mere youths and the sons of respectable farmers. They were traced yesterday by constable Harrington. The constable went out to Kinnear's Settlement and went to the residence of young Hartley Murray aged 16 years. He taxed Murray with knowledge of the crime and the young fellow produced a watch which he said had been given him and confessed to the complicity of Oscar McFee, another youth of the same age living in the settlement. The constables arrested Murray and then went to McFee's place. McFee had a silver watch on him and a search resulted in some fourteen gold and silver watches being discovered hidden away in the ceiling of a pig pen. The lads were then taken to Petitcodiac and locked up last night. This morning they were charged with burglary, before Stipendiary Magistrate F. W. Emmerson. Squire Roland Keith appeared for Murray and Squire Price for McFee. McFee after consultation entered a plea of guilty; and Murray one of not guilty. Little evidence was taken this morning; and the case was adjourned till this afternoon, when decision will probably be given.

The same young man broke into McCallum's saloon and purloined several bottles of liquor. The peculiar character of the stolen goods, however, will probably prevent a prosecution on this charge; the possession of the liquor was a violation of the Scott Act. They were also guilty of stealing Mr. Benj. Keith's horse at Havelock on Wednesday night. The horse was found yesterday at Mr. Branscombe's, in Steeves' Settlement. The carriage was badly smashed.

The Transportation of Corpses.

Under date of less than a week the Maine Central railroad has issued to the undertakers of this city an important set of rules governing the transportation of bodies of the dead, which are causing much comment here. These rules provide that the remains of all persons who have died of small pox, typhoid fever, diphtheria or other contagious diseases, or infectious diseases, will not be received for transportation unless in hermetically sealed cases the disease of which the person died to be plainly stated in writing and fastened to the case. Bodies of the dead enclosed in other than hermetically sealed cases will be received for transportation only when accompanied by a certificate, signed by a well known and respectable medical officer, stating that death did not result from a contagious or infectious disease. All corpses of persons destined for St. John or points east of St. John, will be refused, except they are in an hermetically sealed leaden or metallic coffin, and then only when accompanied by certificate stating the nature of disease that occasioned death, and for points east of St. John agents are not to sell or baggage masters accept a ticket for a corpse beyond St. John; but the party in charge of the same is to be instructed to arrange for transportation beyond St. John with the agent of the Intercolonial railway at that point. Owing to the stringent rules of the board of health of the city of St. John, this rule is made imperative. Corpses for all points must be pre-paid by a first class unlimited ticket excepting that to points outside of New England—other than those east of St. John as above noted—a first-class limited ticket may be sold for transportation to any point to which through car lines are maintained. In both cases corpses are to be taken only when in care of accompanying adult person.—[Bangor Commercial.

Died at the Royal Hotel.

About noon to-day Mrs. E. J. Hodgson, who has been visiting this city, died in the Royal hotel. The deceased lady, who is the wife of E. J. Hodgson, Q. C., a prominent lawyer of Charlottetown, P. E. Island, came to St John a fortnight ago accompanied by her neice, Miss Wright. They went to Fredericton for a brief visit and returned here on Monday last. On Wednesday last Mrs. Hodgson was ill, and Dr. Holden, who was called in, discovered she was suffering from an attack of inflamation of the lungs. Mr Hodgson was summoned immediately and he arrived here on Thursday. This forenoon Mrs. Hodgson's illness took quite an unfavorable turn and resulted in her death. Miss Wright, her neice, Mrs. Raymond and Mrs. Adams of the hotel were with her when she died.

Mr. Hodgson not anticipating danger had stepped out of the hotel a short time previously and when he returned his wife was no more.

The deceased lady was most estimable

A TIDAL WAVE.

FIFTEEN HUNDRED LIVES LOST IN JAPAN.

Hazugan and Aichiken Flooded and Numbers of Houses and Embankments Swept Away.

BY TELEGRAPH TO THE GAZETTE

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., Oct. 19.—The Mail advices from Japan give an account of a tidal wave in which nearly 1500 persons lost their lives and about 2000 houses were washed away.

On September 11th the same day Yokohama was so severely damaged by a typhoon a violent wind and rainstorm set in at Hazugan and Aichiken.

By 2 o'clock the sea had risen several feet above ordinary high tide, and just after nightfall the waves mounted to a great height washing away embankments and levelling the buildings near the shore. Afterwards a wave 15 feet higher than the highest of those that had preceeded it rolled in with a great roar, washing away the remaining portions of the embankment and carrying with it nearly all the houses of various villages along the beach. This was done so suddenly and unexpectedly that the inhabitants had not time to escape. At Okudo in Oguri Slimden, all the houses 23 in number were washed away, and out of 90 inhabitants 54 lost their lives. At Jitsuroku forty houses were washed away and about 50 out of a population of 250 were killed. At Ikuta, Mura. 120 houses were washed away and about 20 broken up and 40 of the inhabitantas killed. At Yoshida, Mura, 350 out of 650 houses were washed away and 628 of a population of 3,260 were killed. At Toba Mura, containing 220 houses and a population of 1,130, ten houses broken up and ten persons perished. In addition to those already enumerated, 369 bodies have been found and there are 280 missing.

The "Cannon Ball" Train Derailed.

BY TELEGRAPH TO THE GAZETTE.

HUTCHINSON, Kas., Oct. 19.—The east bound train on the Santa Fe, known as the "Cannon Ball," reached here last night twelve hours late, with only an express car and two Pullman coaches. The balance of the train, consisting of a baggage car, two Pullman coaches and Tourist's and Pullman sleepers, were left at the bottom of a 10 feet embankment, near [illegible] ed and burned in preventing the stove from igniting the second coach; where most of the injured were. The train was ahead of time and was running slowly.

General Lockout in Florida.

BY TELEGRAPH TO THE GAZETTE.

KEYWEST, Fla., Oct. 19.—Since the demand of their men for higher pay three days ago, the lockout by the cigar manufacturers has become general. Eight thousand employes are idle, over 5000 of them being Cubans. Both sides are firm with no indications of yielding. Trouble is feared from the workmen and incendiary fires may be looked for at almost any minut.

HE PROVED A POOR WITNESS.

Stenographer Stoltenburg on the Stand in Chicago.

CHICAGO, Ill., Oct. 17.—Henry N. Stoltenberg, Alexander Sullivan's stenographer, who was arrested last night because Judge Longenecker and his assistants thought he was acquainted with the details of the jury bribing conspiracy, was released at noon to-day, after having appeared before the grand jury. He proved an unsatisfactory witness. Neither the state attorney nor the members of the grand jury could persuade him to make a single admission which could be used in the prosecution of the prisoners. He swore that he had never talked, except in a casual way, with Alexander Sullivan about the merits of the Cronin murder trial; that he never had any conversation with Graham relative to jury bribing, and that he conducted no secret buisness with Graham during the period the latter was negotiating with Bailiff Hanks and Fred Smith. The witness, in fact, so disgusted the jurors that they were glad to let him go. The stenographer was hard pressed when Judge Longenecker touched the question of Alexander Sullivan's correspondence before and after the murder of Dr. Cronin, but the witness didn't remember writing a single letter upon the crime. He was finally sent downstairs to the state attorney's office in charge of detectives, who delivered him to Mr. Mills and Asst.-Atty. Glennon. They tried their pumps on the prisoner for nearly an hour, but with no better success. Master in Chancery Thomas G. Windes, Alexander Sullivan's law partner, went to the grand jury room in response to a subpœna from the foreman of the jury. His examination was very brief, for the reason that he swore that he knew nothing about the conspiracy. As he turned to leave the star chamber, the dignified master in chancery asked Judge Longenecker for a note authorizing him to see Stoltenberg at once. The state's attorney obligingly wrote something on a slip of paper which he handed to Mr. Windes with an injunction to present it at the office downstairs. A moment later the master stood before the door of the state attorney's office. Big Officer Hutchinson opened the door cautiously and asked Mr. Windes if he wanted to see anybody, "Yes sir; I want to see Henry Stoltenberg," was the brusque reply. "Well, you can't," retorted the officer with considerable emphasis. "Stoltenberg isn't here." "I know he is," cried Mr. Windes, shaking the paper he held, "and here is my authority for an interview." The officer shut the door and the master in chancery stood in the corridor. He heard the cautious opening and closing of doors, and a shuffling of feet inside the room. He was positive that the stenographer was being spirited away. Then the door opened and Officer Hutchinson invited Mr. Windes into the room. Stoltenberg could not be found.

The master now became furious. He declared that the prisoner was in the office used by the state attorneys for their consultation, and then, rushing across the room, attempted to open the door which served as a barrier. This was more than the officer could stand, and without further ceremony he seized the stately master in chancery by the clothing and ran him through two rooms and out into the main entrance, where over a score of people were lounging. As soon as he could collect his thoughts, Mr. Windes returned to the grand jury room and asked Judge Longenecker for a more specific [illegible]

Just before the noon recess he came back, and again tried to pass Hutchinson, and, failing as before, he hastened to a telephone and told Alexander Sullivan that the officers of the state were still obdurate. The two men conversed over the wire for several moments. Then Mr. Windes ran upstairs to Judge Baker's court room and entered an application for a writ of habeas corpus for Stoltenberg. The writ was issued, returnable at 4 o'clock.

When Judge Longenecker heard of the master's strategy, he at once issued orders for Stoltenberg's release, and the stenographer, for the first time in 18 hours, found himself free from the espionage of detectives. As he passed the state attorney's office, on his way to the street he placed his thumb to his nose and wiggled his fingers tantalizingly at Office Hutchinson and Mr. Mills.

Beside Mr. Windes and young Stoltenberg, still another member of Alexander Sullivan's staff was forced to answer questions relative to the jury bribing conspracy. E. J. McArdle, a young lawyer, was escorted into the jury room about noon on a subpœna issued by the foreman. He was in charge of two of the officers. When served with the subpœna, McArdle became violent, but afterward consented to accompany the officers without trouble. He told the grand jury that he knew nothing about the conspiracy which was being investigated, and was quickly released. The jury examined a number of other witnesses during the day, including Edward Hoagland, the barber, and Jerry O'Donnel, the government gauger. Otto Erickson of the big grocery firm of C. Jevne & Co., was also a witness. He was the young man whom Chief Hubbard took into the state attorney's office late last night. His name is said to be Kelly, and rumor has it that he is one of Mr. Jevne's clerks who was approached by the jury bribers with a proposition to get into one of the vacant chairs in the Cronin jury box. The testimony of three men was so important that the jury voted to reindict Kavanaugh, Hanks Smith Solomon, Graham and O'Donnell. Capiases were issued for all the suspects, and with the exception of Solomon all were locked in separate cells in the jail. Kavanaugh was the first man arrested, and, owing to the fact that his bond had been increased to $10,000 for each of the two indictments against him he had to stay behind the bars all night. His visit to Alexander Sullivan's office within 24 hours after his release, satisfied Judge Longenecker that he is a man who needs watching. Little Graham, looking natty in a new suit of clothes, walked through the big corridor to the jail yard at 5 o'clock. He was followed by his bondsmen, Alderman Whelan and Fred Trude, who, after a long consultation with Sheriff Matson, secured a conditional bond for the prisoner. Tomorrow they will file a regular bond before Judge Barker. Bailiff Alexander P. Hanks was released late this afternoon on $15,000 bail, being $5,000 in each of the three indictments. No new jurors were secured in the trial today.

Fashions.

Silver finger-rings are very much worn the design being one of two snakes with jeweled eyes.

Great bows made of white sash ribbon are pinned on the corners of tea cloths.

Some very inventive worker in decorative art has designed a velvet cover for the dictionary.

Belts for evening wear made of miniatures are sold at $500. It takes twenty of the ivory paintings to encircle the slightest waist, and they are not to be had under $40 each. It is needless to say that this style of girdle will not be the rage.

visited by 3,000 people and at which the prizes awarded amounted to $1,000 leaving a surplus of $200. The Sydney Herald publishes a full report of the show from which it appears that entries for prizes were made as follows:—

Horses — 168; cattle, (including Ayrshires, Durhams, Jerseys, Holsteins and grades) 206; Sheep, (South Downs, Leicesters and grades) 84; Swine, (Berkshire and Yorkshire) 8; Poultry, 26; Dairy produce, 45; Roots and vegetables, 76; Seeds, grains and manufactures, 80; fruits, 72; Agricultural implements 16; Fine arts and ladies work, 83; and other miscellaneous entries to the number of about 300. The show was phenomenally good and demonstrates that Cape Breton has no less reason to be proud of her farms and farmers, than of her lakes and mountains and mines and miners.

A REVOLTING CASE.

Young Girls Ruined by Their School Teacher.

BELLEVILLE, Ont. 15.—Despite the severity of the penalties imposed by the Charlton Act, the offences which it proscribes do not seem to decrease. In fact they seem to be of common occurrence in the County of Hastings, for there is scarcely a court but there is a case or two of this character to be disposed of. The last one comes from what is known as Allans' settlement, some thirty miles north of here, and is the most revolting in its details ever recorded in the annals of the county. The offender is John Thomas Blondin, and his victim is Lillie May Rollins, who is under fourteen years of age. Blondin has taught school in the village for two years past, and during that time has been prominent in Sunday school work. On Saturday night last the girl's mother retired to bed with her daughter, whom she found crying bitterly. After some interrogation the little girl revealed the terrible truth to her horrified mother that she was enciente. she pleaded that she was innocent and had been persuaded by Blondin. The father at once drove to Madoc and had a warrant issued, and Blondid was arrested at an early hour yesterday morning by Chief Huff. As soon as the facts of the case leaked out the residents of the village formed themselves into a mob, and, headed by the enraged uncle of the young victim, started in a body for Blondin's house, only to find that he had been arrested and was on his way to Madoc. He would certainly have been strung up in the swamp by the angry mob if he had not been under the protection of officers of the law. It is now alleged that he has caused the ruin of several other young girls attending his school. It appears that the fiend has been in the practice of detaining young girl pupils after school hours, when he got them under his influence. Yesterday the accused was committed for trial by A. F. Wood, M. P., at Madoc, and was lodged in the county goal here today.
