GLADSTONE'S LIBRARY HOTEL.

[English Correspondence of the N. Y. Churchman.]

As might have been expected, Mr. Gladstone's hotel-keeping has proved very successful. He first of all equipped a library of 25,000 volumes, and then last month opened a hostel hard by for the use of readers and students, who are charged 25 shillings a week for board, lodging and the use of the library. Apart from the attraction of its nearness to Hawarden, it is within sight of the Welsh hills, good walks abound, and golf can be had within easy reach. It is not to be wondered at that the applications for rooms have exceeded the supply. What an example to other owners of libraries! Instead of allowing books to collect the dust on the shelves until some spendthrift heir is short of money, when the volumes may go in all directions, here is a means by which the books are assured of good useful employment, and poor students enabled to consult them at a minimum cost. Bibliophiles are generally selfish. How delightful to find an exception!

Funeral of the Late Rev. J. A. Murray.

Impressive Service in St. Andrew's Church.

Addresses by Rev. W. J. Clark, Rev. Dr. Milligan, the Bishop of Huron and Rev. J. R. Gundy—Clergymen Present.

The last sad services over the remains of London's oldest Presbyterian minister—Rev. J. Allister Murray—took place in St. Andrew's Church yesterday afternoon in the presence of probably 3,000 people. The time set for the service was 3 o'clock, but for an hour before citizens came pouring in from every quarter of the city. Soon the large edifice was filled, and the ushers had to inform late comers that not an inch of room was to be had. A private service, at which only the family of the deceased and a few intimate friends were present, was first held in the manse. It was conducted by Rev. Mr. Cook, of Dorchester Station, and was especially solemn.

The public service in St. Andrew's was presided over by Rev. W. J. Clark, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church. Seated on his left were the Bishop of Huron and Rev. Dr. Milligan, of Toronto, while to the right was Rev. J. R. Gundy, of Wellington Street Methodist Church. Clergymen of every Protestant denomination in the city were present in large numbers, the front pews being reserved for them. Among those in attendance were Revs. M. P. Talling, D. Robertson, J. W. Annis, E. B. Lanceley, Chas. Smith, Thomas Cullen, Edwin Holmes, E. Harris, Dean Innes, Archdeacon Davis, Canon Smith, Canon Hill, G. B. Sage and J. H. Moorehouse. From outside places a large number of Presbyterian clergymen attended, and among them were Rev. Messrs. Macdonald (St. Thomas), Millar (Mosa), Hutt (Ingersoll), Wilson (Dutton), Haig (Hyde Park), Little (Birr), Sutherland (Fingal), Sawers (Westminster), Cuthbertson (Wyoming), Henderson (Appin), and Rev. William Patterson, B.A., of Montreal, who acted as assistant to Mr. Murray during the past summer. The Western Ontario Bible Society was represented by the president, the Bishop of Huron, and the honorary secretary, Mr. John Cameron. The managers and elders were seated on the west and east sides respectively, and with the ushers wore mourning badges.

The interior of the edifice presented a somber appearance. The choir gallery, organ, pulpit and public gallery were heavily draped. The service was commenced when the bearers entered with the casket, which was placed in front of the pulpit. Rev. W. J. Clark read the passage of scripture which begins "I am the resurrection and the life." The congregation listened with profound silence, and after a prayer by Rev. M. P. Talling, hymn No. 126 was sung. It read: "Just as I am, without one plea," and was a great favorite with the deceased. A Bible reading by Rev. Alex. Millar, moderator of the London Presbytery, followed, and the speakers were introduced by Rev. W. J. Clark.

"We are united this afternoon," said Rev. W. J. Clark, "by a common sorrow. It seems very strange, indeed, to be gathered in this building, where you have so often listened to him who now lies low proclaiming so powerfully the words of love and truth that he was favored to preach through many years. It brought many thoughts to the minds of the congregation. There were many homes where he had stayed by the bedsides of the sick; he had comforted you in time of distress and trouble, and there are those who can remember that he was the instrument by which they came to know God and his love and his salvation. If all men were to speak today who knew his love and gratitude there would be no time to hear his eloquent story. There are those who are weeping for the loss of a husband and of a father taken away from the home, but when we think of our loss our thoughts are carried to God, who only is able to comfort."

Mr. Clark then stated that the Bishop of Huron, representing the Bible Society, of which he is president, and of which Mr. Murray was a vice-president; Rev. J. R. Gundy, representing the Ministerial Association, and Rev. Dr. Milligan, of Toronto, representing the Presbyterian Church in Canada, were to deliver short addresses.

Bishop Baldwin was the first to speak. His remarks were of a very earnest character, and moved many of the vast assemblage to tears. "We are called upon this afternoon," said he, "to mourn for one who was not only deeply revered among the members of his own church but by all those who had the pleasure of his acquaintance throughout this city and throughout Canada. I myself felt deeply attached to him, and that attachment arose from the intrinsic worth which I saw within him. I valued him as a witness for the truth—the best standard a Christian can possess. I valued him for that integrity to the blessed Word of God which he exhibited, for his faithfulness in all that concerns the advancement of God's glory and the personal kingdom of our blessed Redeemer, who, while we mourn his loss, while we express the sorrow and the bereavement which we suffer, yet at the same time there hangs a halo of glory over all that fall asleep in Jesus. Indeed, one might envy, not pity, the dead. They are translated from the vale of tears below to the calm, profound rest which reigns in the presence of the Lord." To think of being done, forever done, with all the shades, the alarms of life for the calm beautitude of the Redeemer's presence was a beautiful thought. It was well to look at that which gives us comfort, which tones down the keen edge of sorrow, and not only that, but surmounted it with a deepening joy that shall be realized only on the resurrection morn. What is it that makes it possible to die without regret? It is not rationalism, which throws only ghastly doubts, but it is the Master, who, in looking down on the body of the departed, says he will rise again. There were three consolations, said the speaker, which were advanced in looking forward to the future. As they laid to rest the material tabernacle which they had all known, they could remember that it was not forever, not for interminable ages, but for that morning when the trumpet would sound and when the dead shall rise. "I can think," said Bishop Baldwin, in concluding, "that I see our departed friend standing shoulder to shoulder and fighting the battles of this world; but now I look on him after he has done treading this weary world and is gone to his reward. Let us remember that our dear ones have only gone before—gone to meet us on the blessed morn. We express our deepest sympathy with the congregation in the loss which they have experienced. The flower has been taken."

Rev. J. R. Gundy, pastor of Wellington Street Methodist Church, said it seemed but yesterday since Rev. Mr. Murray was the bearer of fraternal greetings, with other honored ministers, from the Ministerial Association to the Conference of the Methodist Church in this city. He supposed it was remembered by many that the departed had spoken words of brotherly feeling. His voice was now hushed in death. He would no longer bear fraternal greetings, he would no longer speak to his people the living words. The voice was hushed, but the memory of that voice and the memory of those words was dear, and his efforts on behalf his people and the people of the city would not soon be obliterated from the minds of those associated with him. He was ready at any time to take his place in the association and perform such work as was necessary for moral reform. It was remembered how he stood firm for the right in the temperance reform, and how on other material questions he always stood shoulder to shoulder with his brother ministers. There would be many prayers that God would bless the widow and the fatherless.

Rev. Dr. Milligan, of Toronto, delivered a most brilliant address, in which he paid a high tribute of praise to the worth of St. Andrew's deceased pastor. After a few introductory words Dr. Milligan said he need speak briefly of the departed brother. It would almost seem useless to attempt anything like a detailed estimate of the quality or amount of his labors. It was almost unnecessary to tell about him. He was a man of genial temperament, who was always ready to give counsel and help to those in trouble. Mr. Murray was a man gentle in character, without weakness; forceful, though gentle; a man of dignity, yet without superciliousness; a man kindly, sympathetic. He was a man who impressed one as having elements of strength of character. He was a man of fine sensibility and this sensibility showed itself in varied ways. He was a minister who strove to do his best, and the friends of St. Andrew's and the ministers had much to be grateful for in a ministry like that of the deceased's. Mr. Murray had been nineteen years in London. He had entered the pulpit when members wondered how he could control his physical infirmities. He was a workman who strove to the uttermost, were he not he would not have been here many a time when he occupied his pulpit.

The service was concluded with the benediction, and an opportunity was given those so desirous to take a last look at the beloved pastor. Slowly the audience filed around, the organ pealing forth "The Dead March." Half an hour elapsed before the cortege was formed, and as it passed through the streets en route to Woodland Cemetery it was viewed by thousands. The procession was over half a mile in length. It was headed by a number of hacks, the Ministerial Association came next, and then in the order named the board of managers, ushers, elders, members of Presbytery and the hearse. The pall-bearers were Messrs. A. Thompson, A. M. Gunn, W. Stevely, James Mills, James McSween, Donald McDonald, James Gillean and James Blair. The services at the grave were conducted by Rev. Alex. Sutherland, Fingal.

A touching incident in connection with the death of Mr. Murray is reported. Among the congregation are several of the Chinese colony. They were greatly attached to the pastor and attended in hacks. They were unaware of the request to omit flowers, and when they called at the manse the other evening left a beautiful wreath. Nothing remained but to accept. It was the only floral emblem on the casket.

SUNDAY SCHOOL WORK.

Proceedings of the Convention at Belleville—Scholars in the Churches.

WEDNESDAY MORNING.

BELLEVILLE, Oct. 24.—At the Sunday school convention today after devotional exercises, Mr. A. Day, general secretary, read his annual report, which was replete with valuable information. He stated there were 20,828 scholars who are known to be members of churches, and of these 4,000 have joined this year.

Rev. J. McEwan, normal secretary, directed the attention of the workers to the northwest counties of New Ontario, as he designated it, where there was much need of work.

The session then adjourned, and eight district conferences were held in as many departments.

Miss Vella, of Boston, gave a very comprehensive address on "The Church Garden" in connection with primary teaching.

E. Donley, of Simcoe, spoke to the superintendents on the "Home Department of the Sabbath School."

A conference of pastors was held in the Reform Episcopal Church, at which Rev. C. W. Walsh, of Brighton, gave an interesting address on "The Pastor's Relation to the Public Schools, Etc."

WEDNESDAY AFTERNOON.

At the afternoon session a number of visiting delegates from other fields were received. Rev. John McEwen spoke on the "Ideal Teacher."

"Nearer My God to Thee" was interpreted in sign language by twelve pupils of the Deaf and Dumb Institute. Several interesting exercises by George Anderson, Toronto, G. M. Elliott, Napanee, and Miss Valle, filled up a highly interesting session, which then adjourned.

EVENING SESSION.

Two thousand people attended the evening session, while 400 or 500 overflowed the Sunday school room below and held another meeting. The meeting was opened with prayer and praise and presided over by the president.

Miss Vella spoke for about half an hour on "The Ideal in Practice." Rev. Dr. Grant, of Kingston, spoke on "The Sabbath School in Relation to National Progress." He was followed by B. J. Jacobs, of Chicago, who spoke on "World Wide Sunday School Work."

A LUCKY MAN.

Laid Up for Months by a Severe Form of Kidney Disease—The Simple Cure He Used—He's Well Now.

THEDFORD, Oct. 22.—Some men don't know when they are in luck and some do. Albert Maithers, of this place, is one of the lucky ones who knows of his good fortune and tells about it. He says he was laid up and could do no work for months because of kidney disease. When kidney disease has such a hold on a man as that, he is in a serious condition. Mr. Maithers recognized this and used every remedy he could think of, but without getting any help, until he began to use Dodd's Kidney Pills.
