WINTER'S MORNING — AND ME

A whiff of pine-freshened air whispering
Through milky dunes of snow; a globe of Fire rising in pastel skies. Delciate
Patterns of frail trees, stretching overhead,
Lace-like, against the rosy dawn.

A lonely chickadee chirping to the clouds;
Ice-crusted twigs, jeweled with splendour
Crunch under my footsteps, while I hum a Hymn to the morning - a grateful thanks
To the generous nature.

My friends, strolling with me; smiles
Flitting, born from admiring gazes at a Radiant sky and earth. The day has woven Spells through us, laughter ensuing, as we view a Tired bus struggling with the hill.

The cold nibbles at my nose, my ears,
Frosting my hair with subtle whiteness, Glistening on the ground. I breathe the Crispness of the air, clear - invigorating
The silent nature with life.

FOR LYNNE

With a friend like you
I need never fear for someone to talk to someone to listen to me
someone to love me
as much as I love them
for being the friend
they are to me.

The most devastating aftermath of fire isn't the filth and the rubble. It's the loss of your sense of safety inside your own home.

The biggest killers among firemen are heart disease and strokes. It's a job that exacts the greatest physical stamina.

The drop-out rate among firefighting trainees is only about one percent. You just don't enter the program unless you know it's what you really want.

Firemen don't spend their the time between fires playing cards. There's equipment to be cleaned and kept at the ready, and constant training drills to undergo. When the moment arrives, there will be no time to lose.
