THEY'RE WAITING FOR HIM.

Thirteen Thousand Insurgents Will Intercept General Weyler and Give Him Battle.

Key West, Nov. 28.—Passengers by the steamer Olivette to-night report that Weyler left Havana last night for Mariel, going by steamer. It is reported that 13,000 insurgents are waiting on the road to Mariel to intercept and to give him battle. One hundred and forty-three prisoners were deported to-day. Seventy-nine were Manigoes and the balance suspects. Fourteen were arrested yesterday, tried by drumhead court martial, convicted and sentenced to die.

Gen. Colona, while being led to execution on the 26th, was slapped in the face by a Spanish official for a trivial remark. He died game. His last words were, "Cuba libre!" Passengers also report that Orna Melton is very sick and being ill-treated.

C. B. Pendleton arrived in the city to-night. He claims there was nothing irregular in his passports. The Spanish officials simply wanted to detain him on account of his bringing important despatches to this city.

The Call Came Suddenly.

The many friends of Mr. David Maguire of Weston will regret to learn of his decease, which occurred suddenly at his residence on Saturday. Deceased, who had just attained the allotted span of life, was one of the best-known and most respected residents of the County of York. At Weston, where he had resided for many years, he was universally esteemed and respected. While he had never entered public life, he was an ardent and consistent Conservative, being numbered among the staunchest members of the party in a constituency where fidelity is a characteristic of the rank and file. Mr. David F. Maguire, manager of the Griffiths Corporation, a gentleman well known in bicycle circles, is a son of the deceased.

A Christian Work.

The band of hospital visitors who do such good work at the various hospitals in the city desire to replenish their library at the Toronto General Hospital. Friends who have books or periodicals suitable for that purpose would help in the work by sending them to either of the following addresses: Hospital Home, corner of Sackville and St. David-streets; Mrs. Steele, 254 Gerrard-street east, or to Mrs. Walker, 361 Markham-street. In connection with the work of the hospital visitors is an Old Folk's Home for Men, where for a small monthly payment respectable old men can have a comfortable home in their old age under kind and Christian influences.

Mr. McMullen Denies It.

Mr. Charles McMullen, who lives at 71 Duchess-street, says Inspector Stephen did not visit his yard on Friday, and that he has no birds and knew nothing whatever about any cockfight that was supposed to have been spoiled.

KING ALCOHOL'S WATERLOO.

Hon. G. W. Ross Discusses the Prohibition Plebiscite.

SPEECH AT THE PAVILION.

Canada's Decision May Not Be Given for Twelve Months.

The Minister of Education Has No Fears as Regards the Revenue Question—Says Toronto Will Give a Good Account of Herself—It Is a Crisis in the Dominion's History—Must Be No Half-Hearted Voice—No Reference to Provincial Legislation.

There was more than the usual crowd at the Canadian Temperance League's meeting at the Pavilion yesterday afternoon. Hon. G. W. Ross, who presided, made an out-and-out prohibition speech; Mr. G. J. Woolley gave a characteristic address, and Mrs. Scrimgeour-Massey was soloist.

Mr. J. S. Robertson briefly referred to the loss the temperance cause had sustained in the death of Mr. Miles Pennington, a pioneer worker.

THE MINISTER OF EDUCATION.

Hon. G. W. Ross said: "I am greatly honored in being asked by the Canadian Temperance League to preside this afternoon. It is one of the largest meetings at which I ever presided in this hall. I have had the honor to preside at several of your meetings, but to-day you seem to have reached the high-water mark of attendance and enthusiasm.

"If this meeting may be taken as a criterion, it means that Toronto will give a good account of herself in any temperance work she may put her hands to do. We are coming very near to what I may call a crisis in the history of the temperance movement in the Dominion of Canada. We are called to rally our forces for a struggle which will have a tremendous effect upon the future history of the temperance movement. For the first time in the history of British institutions in Canada we are called upon to express our opinion as a people on a great moral question, and that at the ballot box.

"The ballot box hitherto has expressed the strength of political parties of Canada. For the first time the ballot box will represent the strength of two great forces in this country. It is for the temperance people to see that the preponderance of the two forces is on their side. (Applause.)

NO EARLY PLEBISCITE.

"We have a great deal to do to prepare public opinion for the question which is going to be decided—probably within the next 12 or 15 months. Hence it is desirable before that time to properly educate public opinion in order that it may be expressed as we trust it may be. (Applause.) We have to consider whether the moral forces which are ranged on the side of temperance are sufficiently strong to restrain the other forces that may be put in motion, in order that prohibition may be victorious at the polls.

"It will not do for us in Canada to pass prohibition by a bare majority vote, and then fail, having passed on it, to make it effective. No, we must see that the vote is so decisive for prohibition that it will register most decisively and unequivocally the public opinion of Canada. There must be no half-hearted voice, no uncertain sound, on this question. (Applause.)

NO FEAR AS TO THE REVENUE.

"Then, as to the revenue question, we must discuss how the loss through prohibition is to be met, to be made up—whether it will be compensated for by the increase of business in other lines than that of drink. For the public business must go on. I think we may have no fear as to the revenue. Mr. Gladstone once said, when somebody discussed with him the probable consequences to England if £30,000,000 were cut off the revenue by restrictive temperance legislation, 'Give me thirty millions of sober people, and I am not afraid of the public revenue.' (Applause.)

"Now, we have to consider whether five million of sober people can find a sufficient revenue as well as five millions of people not sober. Further, we have to consider, if the revenue from the liquor traffic were a dead loss, whether $7,000,000 would not well pay for the loss of energy and lives of thousands of our young men, who go down to an early grave every year through intemperance. I confess it is a hard question, but I am glad it is going to be submitted to us in such a certain way.

ALCOHOL'S WATERLOO.

"It is going to be a Waterloo. Wellington must be victorious now, for his forces are fighting for law and order, and for the maintenance of the righteousness, integrity, and purity of this country. (Applause.) It is for temperance men to enlist on their side all the moral forces which make for God and the good of the country and its people, and I have no fear of the result." (Applause.)

Mr. Woolley was denunciatory in his harangue. Here is a specimen of his alliteration: "License under the British flag and a so-called Christian Government is a burning, brutish, bloody shame." He compared intemperance to a mighty Goliath, and the prohibitionists to the God-trusting David. The ballot box at the plebiscite would be their sling, and might God speed the mark for the giant's downfall, never to rise again.

Then the great crowd sang, "We Believe We Shall Win."

ST. ANDREW'S BROTHERHOOD.

Rev. Dr. Sullivan Preached the Annual Sermon in Holy Trinity Church Last Evening.

Holy Trinity Church was crowded last night, when Rev. Dr. Sullivan preached a sermon to the members of St. Andrew's Brotherhood. Dr. Sullivan chose his text from Judges xiii., 25: "The spirit of the Lord began to move Samson at times." He addressed his remarks principally to young men, going thoroughly into Samson's history and the misuse of the blessings the Almighty had endowed him with. Samson's unhappy marriage had started him on a downward career, until he was reduced from a hero to the abject condition of a hireling.

The point first made by the preacher was the grave responsibility of neglecting divine calling and using divine gifts wrongly. Christianity proclaimed nothing whatever against physical culture, but Dr. Sullivan censured the excessive idolatry of physical strength, as practised to a large extent at the present day. A man with a grand muscle might have a craven spirit. It was not in muscular power that Samson's best gifts were. He had betrayed his trust, and had indulged every idle mood, wasting vast powers in his own amusement.

The preacher pointed out that every young man had a mission to perform, just as Samson had. For instance, the baptism vows. It is Christ's own mark, pledging the baptized to be His only and forever. A man should be a Christian in his secular pursuits—his business calling, in which he should be faithful to trust and legitimate. The energetic businessman fills his trust, not by Sunday School teaching, visiting, etc. These were not necessary, though desirable. Let every transaction between him and his fellows be pure, free from taint and free from untruth. Let his customers and employes see his work inscribed thoroughly in keeping with Christianity. The man in the most lowly calling could do this just as well as the man in the highest. The lawyer, it had been said, was a man whose profession was hard to get on at and hard to be honest at. It was a profession with many bright examples, and one which offers innumerable facilities for well doing, when a lawyer administers with the strictest integrity and pleads before human judges as if before Divine.

Medical men, too, had most prolific chances to be Christians; in fact, a doctor's calling is next to that of a minister of the Gospel as a medium for doing good.

Dr. Sullivan touched upon other callings in which could be attained a life of quiet, useful, honorable work, sanctified by lofty purpose. He particularly urged the curbing and ultimate mastery of quick tempers, and also the judicious choice of companions, in whose company one would not hear any remark that he would not care to have his mother and sisters hear. He closed with an appeal to all to try and realize God's grace and to make a proper use of the gifts with which they were endowed.

HIGHER THAN NIAGARA.

Several Minnesota Men Discover a Wonderful Cataract in the Mountains of Venezuela.

St. Paul, Minn., Nov. 29.—The following letter has been received from S. A. Thompson at Santa Catalina, Venezuela:

"During the exploration of the concession of the Orinoco Company, headed by Donald Grant and other Minnesota men, a trail was cut to the Imataca Mountains, starting from this point, a village of 150 inhabitants. The duties assigned to some members of the party kept them upon or close to the Orinoco until a few weeks ago, when two of us, Leslie O. Dart of Litchfield, Minn., and myself of Duluth, found time to make an excursion to the mountains.

"Pushing on beyond the point reached by the other party, we heard from the top of a mountain a sound which at first we thought to be thunder, but afterwards decided that it must come from a waterfall of considerable magnitude. Working in the general direction of the sound over a difficult trail we came, at noon on Thursday, Oct. 15, to a large river, and discovered what must rank as one of the greatest waterfalls in the world.

"The river bursts diagonally through an almost perpendicular cliff, which I estimate to be 1600 feet in height, breaks into half a dozen separate streams, which divide and subdivide, spreads out into broad, fan-like expansions, and twists about in such a curious corkscrew fashion that the water at the bottom of the falls flows in exactly the opposite direction from the course it holds where it first comes into view.

"By clinging to bushes and going up the giant creepers hand over hand, we climbed up the cliff until the nerold indicated an elevation of more than 500 feet, but it was impossible to reach the top and learn how much higher the falls are."

BABY CLOTHES IN HARRISON'S HOME

The Ex-President's Wife Preparing for an Event Which is Expected to Bring Great Joy to the House.

Indianapolis, Nov. 29.—A great deal of interest is manifested here over reports which have come from the intimate friends of Mrs. Benjamin Harrison. It is said that an event of great importance is expected to transpire in the ex-President's home within the next three months, and that elaborate preparations are being made therefor. The greatest care is being exercised over Mrs. Harrison's health, which is said to be excellent, and the good lady is plying her needle upon a wardrobe of elegant dresses, dainty underwear of the most ornate and expensive character, and little wraps of the finest cashmere, elegantly brocaded and trimmed with the most costly French laces. Mrs. Harrison does her sewing in her husband's library, and it is said the ex-President is not less interested in the work than his wife. Indeed he is never too much engrossed with his legal work to spare a moment to confirm by his judgment the taste of Mrs. Harrison in regard to the effect of this or that particular lace or embroidery on any of the little garments, and it is said that he now lives in the future rather than in the past or present.

CHILD LOVERS RETURN HOME.

Have Been Sleeping in Barns and Subsisting Mainly on Love and Charity Since They Eloped.

New Haven, Conn., Nov. 29.—Word was received here to-night that Harry Huba and Laura Mason, 14 and 12 years of age, respectively, who disappeared from Killingly, have returned to their home.

Young Huba's mother married Atwood Mason, the father of the girl, some years ago, and since that time the children have developed the love affair that culminated in their recent elopement. They have spent most of the time since they left Killingly at Foster, R.I., sleeping in barns or houses in that locality and getting something to eat wherever they could.

They had little money with them, and were beginning to feel the necessity of getting more funds, when day before yesterday a man at whose house they called advised them to return home. They started to walk to Killingly, and stopped at Sayville, Conn., about five miles from the former place. The people at home learned of their whereabouts in the meantime, and Mrs. Mason went to Sayville yesterday to take them home.

A fire in the grocery store of W. J. Macklem, Saturday afternoon, caused a loss of $75 to stock and $75 to the building. The cause is not known.

The monthly meeting of ladies for prayer for Israel will be held this afternoon at 3.30 in the library of the Y.M.C.A. All women interested in the Jews are cordially invited.
