MONCTON.

A Magnificent Reception to the Cabinet Ministers.

Telling Speeches by Josiah Wood, M. P., Hons. Messrs. White, Thompson and Foster.

(Special to THE SUN.)

MONCTON, Oct. 11.—Every inch of the Opera House was filled tonight, and many of the parquette chairs were occupied by ladies. On the stage were: Josiah Wood and P. A. Landry, M. P's, ex-Sheriff Chapman, W. W. Wells, R. Hutchison of Richibucto; H. T. Stevens, Messrs. Humphrey and Killam, M. P. P's, John Harris, D. Woodworth, M. P., J. L. Black, M. P. P., J. L. Stewart, of Chatham, Pittfield and many others.

Mayor Duffy, who occupied the chair, read a letter of regret of his inability to attend from Hon. D. L. Hanington. He introduced the speakers in a neat speech.

JOSIAH WOOD, M. P.,

the first speaker, was received with loud cheers. He congratulated Moncton on its beautiful and commodious Opera House, as an indications of the large public spirit and faith in the future. His speech was confined to matters dealt with by Davies & Co. at their late meeting. Davies had attacked Sir John's reputation as a lawyer and statesman, but Sir John was too well known in this section to need defence against such an antagonist as the so-called young leader of the liberal party. The Minister of Customs was charged with some connection with a land company, when it had been proved in parliament last winter that Mackenzie Bowell had no connection with any land company. (Cheers.) So complete was the break down that the mover of the charge admitted there was no endeavor to sustain it. Equally false were the charges that the Ministers of Inland Revenue and Public Works had accepted bribes. He took up the assault on that it had been intended solely to keep Sir John in power and demonstrated its utter absurdity, quoting Blake's words that there was necessity for such measure. "It simply gave one suffrage to all the provinces alike." The enfranchisement of the Indians was explained, Mr. Wood showing that it did not apply to Indians with like property qualifications with the whites. Not more than 2,000 Indians have the right to vote, and could they wipe out the whole liberal vote as the leaders would have you believe? It is not because of enfranchising the Indians, but because it has given votes to the intelligent youth of Canada, that the liberals denounced it. They have as little faith in the popular vote as they have in their own political principles. (Cheers) Taking up the charges against the Intercolonial staff, he showed that by parliament had failed to discover any improper practices; but it had shown large gains in passenger receipts. Of the oil question, he knew nothing, but if proof were forthcoming at the proper time he would be the last to shield the guilty, but the story was entitled to little credence, because Mr. Weldon, who was in possession of the so-called facts last winter, failed to bring it before parliament, where they could have been investigated. The tribute to Sir Charles Tupper's management in making the Intercolonial self-sustaining was received with prolonged applause. The good effects of subsidizing local railways were illustrated by the Caraquet and other roads. The vast increase of debt under the grits as compared with the administration of Sir John was proved from the public accounts; also the greater public utility of Sir John's outlay for

PUBLIC WORKS ALL OVER CANADA.

In closing, Mr. Wood ridiculed the utterances of Davies, Pipes and Co., that the political situation was a grave one and their failure to announce a policy to suit the secessionist in the east and the rebel in the west. Davies, he pointed out, had failed to say whether or not, he would once more tax tea and coffee, compel us to buy our sugar abroad and close up our refineries, disfranchise the newly enfranchised, grant secession to Nova Scotia, restore Riel once more to life, or erect a bronze statue at Ottawa to his memory. That vast meeting was permitted to go home no wiser than before, as Davies did not attempt to point out how the restoration of the liberal party would benefit Canada. He had not done so because it was impossible to show it. In their lust for office, the liberals were appealing to the secessionists of Nova Scotia, and the Rileites of Quebec, but he had full confidence in the house and sound judgment of the people of Canada, and felt that when the polls were heard from they would again return to power by as large a majority as ever, the government of Sir John Macdonald. Mr. Woods spoke for seventy minutes with great effect and was repeatedly applauded.

HON. THOS. WHITE

followed and was grandly received. He had much pleasure in visiting New Brunswick with his able colleague, Hon. Mr. Foster, and his pleasure was in harmony with the growing pride they all felt in Canada as a whole. In Ontario, Blake had been holding many meetings in a vain endeavor to prove that the government is unworthy the confidence of the people in this section. Mr. Davies had been attempting the same. He would deal with but one point of Davies' address—that Sir John had steadily labored to destroy the autonomy of the provinces and centralize all power at Ottawa. As under Mackenzie seventeen provincial acts were disallowed, and Mr. Blake was most severe in his scrutiny of such acts, it ill became Mr. Davies to make such allusions to Sir John. The boundary award question, escheats and the streams bill were explained to show Davies' false basis touching the disallowment of bills by Sir John. He went at some length into the exact history of the Northwest colonization, explained the homestead and pre-emption laws, and showed that colonization companies could not interfere with settlers who complied with these easy laws. Colonization companies were confined to the odd sections and were compelled to comply with

THE CONDITIONS OF SETTLEMENT.

Only 28 companies out of the 260 companies applying actually entered into contract with the government; only five members of parliament, three of them clear grits, entered these companies—Mackenzie, Gunn and Sutherland. (Cheers.) There were five senators only in them, two of them grits, and these companies paid into the government $760,000, and he had been compelled, as Minister of Interior, to settle with some companies on a lower basis. This was the whole story of the colonization companies which Davies had tried to use against the liberal conservative party. He then took up and explained the timber limits policy, showing that it threw them open to all equal conditions, and that there was no possibility of favoritism. Some two thousand applications were made, 508 were granted and $24,602 were received as first payments and $21,226 for bonuses from parties who never cut a stick of timber; only 107 leases were taken out and Mr. Davies multiplied by five the acres granted—a fair average of his style. (Cheers) Only two members of parliment (one a grit) ever got a license where there was the political corruption. Mr. White read some letters of members applying for lands, etc., for friends, to show the utter falsity of Davies' charges of corruption or favoritism in this connection. His reading of the letters and replies thereto, was received with loud applause. The policy touching the grazing lands in the Northwest, was fully shown also as to coal areas.

THE PUBLIC REVENUE

and benefit arising therefrom. Everywhere, even sections are open to settlers under the homestead and pre-emption lands. In a very lucid and forcible style, Mr. White cleared up the fallacies scattered broadcast by the grits as to the causes of the Northwest rebellion. He concluded an impressive speech with an earnest appeal to the electors to continue their allegiance to the present administration and sat down amid long continued applause.

HON. MR. THOMPSON was most heartily received. He spoke in fine voice and soon established a hearty sympathy between the audience and himself. He rapidly sketched the rise and progress of the liberal conservative party and showed that the conditions, liberal and tory, as understood in the old land, were unknown here, and trying out the two parties of Canada on the line of their works, he defied the grits to point to one measure enacted from 1873 to 1878 that was of benefit to any province of the Dominion. This was Sir John's challenge, and Mr. Blake's only reply was that they had spent money to help British Columbia, but Mr. Blake forgot to add that this money was expended in compliance with a treaty made by Sir John before leaving office. So, Sir John's challenge is unanswered. The grits went out of power declaring that nothing could be done to advance our prosperity by legislation, and only a few days ago on this platform the grit orators asserted that Sir John had deceived the country with his national policy. But for

who have largely added to the Dominion, Mr. Davies would not have been in a position to visit New Brunswick on his late political mission. P. E. Island, but for our party, would still be a separate province. The presence of these ministers on this platform was evidence that the government were ever ready to uphold, explain and defend their policy, touching the Northwest, as well as all Canada, and he reviewed the building of the I. C. R. and completion of the Canadian Pacific, pointing out their imperative necessity as natural undertakings and showing that in a short time the C. P. R. would be extended to the lower provinces. (Cheers.) Then the various branch lines and feeders subsidized in the maritime provinces were opening up and developing the country and when Mr. Davies asserts that these subsidies are intended to keep the present party in power he only confuses cause and effect. (Laughter.) It is all very well for Mr. Davies to make such statements to a meeting admitted by ticket, but if you turn to Hansard you will see that his party were not satisfied with the list of subsidies to railways, but actually asked for more lines and more subsidies. (Applause.) The increase of the debt for public works and for better terms was fully discussed by Mr. Thompson. In increasing Canada's liabilities they had relieved the provinces twenty-seven millions, putting the burthen on

THE STRONGEST BACK,

Though the debt had increased, the interest paid by the people was no larger now than in 1879. Our progress and prosperity under the national policy were treated in detail. In 1878 the grits argued that we would build up great monopolies at the expense of the poor. Now they cry out that the factories are not paying, that goods are cheaper than ever before and that the dividends are not big enough. (Great applause.) But indications now point to better times for the manufacturers. The increase of public expenditure and the reasons therefor were trenchantly handled by the Minister of Justice, who showed that as a family increased, its expenses increased, while its income increased as well with the growth of new worker. He supported his statements respecting the increase of revenue from postal and other services by quotations from the public accounts. To go back to the expenditure which our opponents think sufficient, would be to close half the post offices in Canada. He went at some length into the increase of revenue under the tariff, showing that it was very largely derived from luxuries. He also punctured Stockton's story that the N. P. had diminished our exports, and amid loud and long applause showing the peculiar jugglery resorted to by that oily-tongued orator. He reminded his audience that Edward Blake had opposed better terms to the provinces, and that were he to come into power there would be an end to the present policy of aiding provincial railways from the federal treasury. The hope of their opponents getting into office was based on an appeal to the passion of the people of Quebec, and yet only a few years ago Mr. Blake was arousing the passions of Ontario by holding up this now martyr Riel as the murderer of Scott. Mr. Thompson dealt freely and fully with the Riel question, and defied Mr. Davies to prove from Hansard the statements he had made on this platform as to the disclosures he alleged were made in parliament. Mr. Thompson sat down amid a storm of applause.

HON MR. FOSTER,

who was vociferously applauded, opened by stating that for exaggeration of statement and positive untruth he had never seen the equal in Canada of Mr. Davies' speech. (Cheers.) Davies, said he, was speaking as the mouthpiece and lieutenant of their great leader, Mr. Blake. He appeared as the accredited leader of the maritime province grits, and all the minor men paid him court as such. So it is fair to hold the leaders and the party to what Davies lays down. His key note was: "We are coming back to rule." He gave two reasons: "Haldimand has spoken and so speaks all Ontario." Why, in 1867 Haldimand elected a liberal, also twice since, by acclamation. Its the old story of the Dutch taking Holland. His other plank was: "Listen to the voice of Chambly." Davies should be the last man to be jubilant of the principle involved in Chambly, for Chambly elected a protectionist, (cheers) and Mr. Davies is an out and out protectionist. (Renewed cheers.) The Montreal Witness—an out and out liberal paper—says that Prefontaine, elected in Chambly, is a briber, yet Davies is a purist and rejoices over the election of a briber. Davies had voted in parliament that Riel's execution was justifiable, yet he rejoices in the election of Prefontaine on the issue that Riel's death must be avenged. Prof. Foster, who never appeared to better advantage on the public platform, took up one by one, the Davies statements and showed their falsity, being constantly interrupted by loud applause

It was after midnight when the meeting closed, the major portion of the audience remaining till the last. All the ministers made a grand impression and the meeting was in every sense very enthusiastic.

P. A. Landry, M. P., in a brief speech, moved a vote of thanks to the speakers, which was given with loud cheers. In response to persistent calls, D. B. Woodworth, M. P. for Kings, Nova Scotia, came before the foot lights and put the finishing touches to Hon. Mr. Foster's castigation of Davies. His pungent comments fairly convulsed the house.
