BICYCLISTS WILL MEET

And Decide How They Would Like a Track Built and Regulated.

The bicyclists of the city have had under consideration for the past week a proposal looking towards the construction of a cinder track on the Western Fair grounds. Various methods for securing the necessary funds have been broached. These will all be debated at a joint meeting of representatives from the four city cycling organizations at the London Bicycle Club's rooms this evening. The views of the wheelmen themselves will then be formulated and placed before the Fair Board at its meeting on the following day.

The modus operandi which has probably met with more general approval than any other is that of securing the sum of $1,200, equally subscribed by the Western Fair authorities, the civic administrators and the bicyclists themselves. This would undoubtedly more than cover the cost of building an admirable track. A number of parties interested in the three bodies mentioned were seen by an ADVERTISER reporter. They were unanimously of the opinion that, under certain conditions of subsequent management which could easily be adjusted, the desired financial aid would be forthcoming.
