THE various popular plans of the "NORTH AMERICAN," embracing Life, Return Premium, Endowment, Tontine, Semi-Tontine and Commercial Plan, have proved so acceptable to the insuring public, that the Company can to-day present a showing unequalled by any other home Company at the same period of its existence, and its progressive record and sound financial standing, coupled with its prompt and satisfactory settlement of death claims, are the recommendations which this Company offers for public patronage.

The Company's rates are, according to their various plans, so arranged as to suit the convenience of all, as by the commercial plan insurance is given at the actual cost, while by the endowment and tontine the attractive investment feature is combined with insurance.

THE BIRCH TREE.

And the Various Useful Substances That Are Derived from It.

A casual glance at the surroundings of any timber country, notably along the creeks and ravines, reveals the fact that at least some birch twigs have withstood the onslaught of country pedagogues, who from time remote have been identified with the legend of birch oil and elbow grease as an accelerator to the sluggish school boy as he stumbles along over the obstacles on the side of Science hill. Many twigs remain, and outside their legendary historic value suggested in the foregoing, the twigs and bark of the common birch (Betula alba) have already an intrinsic value not second to many of the most valuable plants.

Even the leaves and young shoots secrete a resinous substance, having an acid reaction, which, under the long legged names of the pharmacist, is sold as a medical preparation for as high as $16 per fluid ounce. The inner bark secretes a bitterish alkaloid not unlike cinchona in its nature, and is used largely as an adulterant for quinine in many parts of Europe. The so called "Cinchona Mixture" has been found by analysis to consist, in many instances, of the alkaloid found in the inner bark of the humble birch tree.

The outer bark, subjected to dry distillation, yields a peculiar empyreumatic oil having the peculiar odor of Russia leather, and the secret of preparing skins, and that, too, of the very poorest quality of skins, being taken from cattle that have perished on those barren, desolate plains, is the only obstacle, thus far, to prevent American artisans competing with Russia and Austria in leather goods.

It is not necessary, however, to go into chemical technicalities and details to arrive at a profitable solution of the uses of birch twigs and birch bark, when the larger timber is being cut away and hauled to the saw mill or the turning lathe. When it is stated that the oil of winter green (Oleum gaultheria), so useful, fragrant and expensive, is nearly always adulterated with birch oil; much of it is birch oil pure and simple, but is sold as wintergreen oil, and is wintergreen oil to all intents and purposes, having, when properly prepared and refined, the same properties, viz., specific gravity, 1,173; boiling point, 412 degs., and mixes readily with alcohol, chloroform, etc.

The appliances necessary for the preparation of this oil are neither intricate nor costly, being simply a large tub supplied with a coil and steam connection. Of course we are not expected to go into all the details of manufacture. Only brief outlines can be given.

The birch limbs, twigs, bark and even the leaves, if a mere commercial oil is to be made, are gathered and placed in this large tub containing the coil for steam heating, and as fast as the mass accumulates it is kept covered with water, and the tub, being supplied with a tight fitting lid or manhole, should be opened as little as possible. After becoming nearly full, steam is turned on, and the batch kept about blood warm for twenty-four hours. This will dissolve nearly all the oil and resinous matters, which, being precipitated, causes the mass to assume a very sticky consistency. Steam may now be turned on, and the mass brought to a boil for a moment or two. With a wooden connection, with a small barrel or keg, the tank is made tight and brought to a boil; the steam, having previously dissolved the oils, etc., will now evaporize them and will condense in the last named keg. After a few hours the job is done, the keg is bunged or corked up, and is ready for shipment as commercial wintergreen oil, though made from birch refuse continually in the way.—New York Lumber Trade Journal.

The Chivalrous Knights.

The chivalrous knights who came over with the Conqueror, the nobles who fought at Neville's Cross and Crecy and Agincourt, were, for the most part, the merciless tyrants of their serfs and dependents. Sordid rapacity kept pace with reckless profusion, and in the arbitrary exercise of their feudal rights they shrank from no form of oppressive cruelty. Their brutalities would have disgraced a Jonathan Wild, and their crimes would seem scandalous in the Newgate calendar. To do them justice, they were as hard on their equals as on their inferiors, though, from a point of perhaps egotistical punctilio, they spared their equals the dishonor of actual torture. The captive had neither comfort nor mercy to expect till he paid his ransom or was rescued by his friends.

What stories of slow misery in the very shadow of death might be told by the dungeons that may be seen beneath the foundations of such castles as Warkworth or Kenilworth! There the well nurtured knight, like Damian de Lacy in "The Betrothed," shackled and ironed, although there was no possibility of escape, was doomed to solitary seclusion on the coarsest and scantiest food. Fettered in the damp and darkness among loathsome creeping things, he drew breath with difficulty in the foulest air; and it was fortunate for him that, like the cold blooded toads that were his fellow prisoners, undeveloped sensibility saved him from insanity.

The only access to those lonesome oubliettes was, as at Warkworth, through the trap door opening in the roof. What must have been the tone of mind of the chivalrous lord of the castle who could feast and carouse in the banquet hall above stairs with such horrors and such suffering beneath his feet! But what between hard fighting, free feasting and deep drinking the nobles of the Middle Ages seem to have kept conscience at arm's length, as they had become absolutely indifferent to the sufferings of their fellow creatures. There were rare exceptions to prove the rule. Some princes and wealthy nobles were piously inclined and munificent. They gave liberally in their life times, and made magnificent ecclesiastical foundations.—Blackwood's Magazine.

He Knew the Business.

Dirty Tramp—Madam, I am starving, but I wish you to know that I am a gentleman.

Lady of the House—How are you going to prove it?

Dirty Tramp—First let me have some soap and a place to wash myself, and then I will thank you for what cold vituals you may have to spare.

FERTILITY.

A Real Estate Agent Who Knew His Business.

Real Estate Agent (showing prospective purchaser a tract of bottom land)—You won't find another quarter section like this within a hundred miles of here. Look at the color of the soil. See how the land lies toward the sun. It's cheap at double the price.

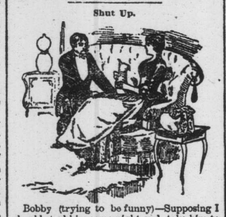
Prospective Purchaser—But isn't it sometimes under water? Does this stream never overflow its banks?

Real Estate Agent—Overflow? Never, sir, never.

Prospective Purchaser (happening to spy a bunch of half decayed grass and driftwood lodged twenty feet above his head in the fork of a tree)—How do you suppose that clump ever got up there?

Agent (enthusiastically)—Don't you see the tree grows right at the edge of the bank? That bunch of stuff was caught there when the tree was a little bush. Probably happened a year or two ago. Just as I said, sir. Richest soil in the world, sir!—Chicago Tribune.

Shut Up.



Bobby (trying to be funny)—Supposing I should steal him some night and take him to the pound?

Miss Edgeways—I don't believe the pound keeper would be entirely sure just which one of you to keep.—Judge.

He Was All Right.

On the draw of the bridge between East Boston and Chelsea there is a sign which reads:

"No one allowed on the draw when in motion."

As the bridge tenders were about to put off the draw the other day a gentleman who was standing on it did not move.

"You'll have to get off here," said one of the tenders.

"What for?"

"What for? Are you blind? Don't you see the sign there. 'No one allowed on the draw when in motion?'"

"Yes, I see the sign, but I'm not in motion. I'm standing quite still."

The tender didn't see the point, however, and the critic had to move.—Boston Courier.

A Thoughtful Fly Cop.

Sergt. Hennessy, when he was on the detective force, was the Sir Boyle Roche of the department. It is related of "Tom" that he went with his partner to the river one day when the stream was rising. He saw a great scamboat at the wharf loaded to the guards, so that there were about three inches between the surface of the water and the top of the deck.

"We'd better go aboard," said Tom to his partner, "and warn the captain."

"Of what?" inquired his partner.

"Of his danger. The river is rising so rapidly that if it rises a few more inches the boat will sink," replied the wise detective.—St. Louis Star-Sayings.

Marine Disaster.

"Won't you come to the rescue, Mr. Simpkins?" said a young woman to a gentleman on an ocean steamer.

"What's the matter? Is there a man overboard?"

"I should think there was. Lillie Litshed has been talking to Jack Wilson for nearly an hour. If you don't think he's overbord, come and look at him."—Washington Capital.

Standing Up for His Rights.

Conductor—That boy can't be less than 8 years old. I shall have to charge you half fare for him.

Mr. Stimphilnt (nervously looking at his watch)—No, you won't. It's now 7 o'clock. That boy won't be five years old till exactly 7:20, and we expect to get off this train at exactly 7:23. If you charge me anything for that boy I'll report you.—Chicago Tribune.

His Vocation.

Look here! I make $300 a week at my vocation, sir."

"No!"

"Yes, and extras besides."

"You are a very fortunate man. I presume you are busy all the time?"

"Always."

"Indeed! I imagine your vocation is equivocation, ain't it?"—Chicago Ledger.

A Future Stewart.

Young Lady—A pair of No. twos, if you please.

Shoe Salesman (glancing at her foot)—You probably have not heard that twos are out of fashion. Mrs. Langtry wears a No. five, Mrs. Potter a five and a half, Mrs. Cleveland five, and Mary Anderson No. six.

"Indeed! Well, give me a pair of fives, then."—New York Weekly.

A Famous Warrior.

Sister—Who is that military looking man?

Brother (a militia man)—That is Col. Fallback.

Sister—Is he a famous man?

Brother—A famous man? I should say he was. Why, he was the first man to reach Washington after the retreat at Bull Run.—Yankee Blade.

THE VERY LATEST. THE ANTI-SWEAR CUFF BUTTON. (AUTOMATIC.)

We wish to call your attention to our Anti-Swear Cuff Buttons, of which we carry a full assortment in stock of both Gold and Plated. The action of this button is entirely new and different from any other in the market. A few of its advantages are as follows:

FIRST.—It is the only button having a regular shoe which closes itself automatically when inserted in the cuff and opens itself when taken out.

SECOND.—It has short posts so that it will not rattle or shake in the cuff, but holds it firmly.

THIRD.—There are no steel or composition springs to get out of order.

ODDS AND ENDS

Dolphins disporting around a shapely water nymph is a new decoration for a silver water pitcher.

RELY ON THIS.—DEAR SIRS.—I have used Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry for the last three years, and can always rely upon it as a speedy cure for diarrhœa and all summer complaints. I can recommend it highly and I wish you every success.

MRS. W. FOWLER, 12 Oxford Street., Toronto.

Two sprays of violets mounted on gold are pendants to a glove buttoner recently brought out.

A CORRUPT SYSTEM.—Bad blood may corrupt the entire system and cause scrofulous sores, swellings, ulcers, salt rheum, erysipelas, sore eyes and skin diseases, as shingles, tetter, etc. Burdock Blood Bitters purifies the blood and cleanses, tones and strengthens the entire system.

Large bonnets are things of the past.

CONSTANT CARE.—Constant care is necessary against unexpected attacks of summer complaints. No remedy is so well known or so successful in this class of disease as Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry. Keep it in the house as a safeguard.

Bridemaids and debutantes wear very stylish toilets of real China crepe in willow green, old rose and primrose yellow over soft-reeped sicilienne with fronts of pearled lace.

A GOOD REGULATOR.—Disordered kidneys give rise to rheumatism, dropsy, pain in the back and loins, etc., besides many dangerous complaints affecting the kidneys themselves, as Bright's disease, uræmia, etc. Regulate the kidneys with Burdock Blood Bitters, the best diuretic and kidney remedy ever devised.

A large silver horse shoe nail twisted in the shape of an "8" finds favor as a belt buckle.

THOROUGHLY TRIED.—Having given Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry a thorough trial, I do not hesitate to say that I believe it is the best remedy in existence for all summer complaints, diarrhœa, dysentery, colic, etc.

MRS. R. S. WAITE, Springfield, Ont.

Eel green, a lovely bluish shade, is the latest.

IT DON'T MATTER.—However old, obstinate or chronic your case may be Burdock Blood Bitters has cured so many seemingly incurable cases that it is well worth a trial in your case. Cases of dyspepsia, scrofula, liver complaint, etc., of twenty-five years' standing have been cured by B. B. B.

Cool and pretty summer toilets in white and green, or white and gold, are of white crepeline of India veiling with graniture of China silk arranged as a soft, easy Empire vest.

Are Your Hens Healthy?

Owing to extreme heat, moisture, and other causes, there has been much dullness and disease among poultry the past summer, and especially among chickens and young pullets expected to lay this fall and winter. For this reason, it would be a great mistake to kill off all the old hens at the moulting season is at hand and the hens have stopped laying, got fat, and seem to be eating their heads off; because it is a fact that a year-old hen, if properly cared for and helped at the moulting season to get her new coat quickly, so she can be got to laying early, will lay more and better eggs than young pullets, particularly if the pullets are weakened by diarrhœa, cholera, gapes, etc. Many people have learned by experience that Sheridan's Condition Powder given once, daily, in the food will supply the needed material to strengthen and invigorate sick chickens or moulting hens and get them to laying earlier than anything else on earth. Mrs. Edwin Brown, East Greenwich, R. I., says; "I could not do without Sheridan's Condition Powder when hens are moulting. It is the only thing to keep them healthy. I use it for gapes and diarrhœa; for when chickens are small they often droop and die. To a pint of clabbered milk I add a teaspoonful of the powder, mix well, and let the chicks eat all they will once a day; it does seem to be just what they need, they soon become so vigorous. People laughed at me when I began to use Sheridan's Powder, and I had no idea I should win a premium. 'They laugh best who laugh last,' however. I got more eggs than any of my neighbors, and some of them had over 100 hens. We hatched 66 chickens from 77 eggs, obtained while forcing our hens to lay with your powder; so you can see there was no trouble about eggs hatching." I. S. Johnson & Co., 22 Custom House Street, Boston Mass., (the only makers of Sheridan's Condition Powder), will send, postpaid, two 25-cent packs of Powder and their Poultry Raising Guide, for 60 cents. The book alone costs 25 cents. For $1.00, five packs of Powder and book; for $1.20, a large 2 1-4 pound can (regular price) and book; six cans, $5.00, express pre-paid. Send stamps or cash. Interesting testimonials sent free; also for 5 cents, a sample copy of the best Poultry paper published.
